

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

THE text of the Annals of Tacitus depends upon two MSS. made by Italian copyists in the early middle ages. The first contains Books I.—VI.; the second, Books XI.—XVI., with Books I.—V. of the Histories.¹ Emendations have depended rather upon conjecture than comparison. The present edition follows the text of Halm (Leipsic, 1877), except in the annexed variations, in the spelling of a few words, and in some matters of punctuation.

In preparing the notes, the commentaries of Justus Lipsius, Freinshemius, Ryckius, the two Gronovii, Er-nesti, Oberlein, Ruperti, Walther, Doederlein, Orelli, Nipperdey, Draeger, Frost, Church, and Brodribb, have been carefully consulted throughout. Reference is made to the Latin Grammars of Madvig, Roby, Harkness, and Zumpt.

¹ These MSS. are called the Medicean because they became the property of the Medici family in the sixteenth century. The first is absolutely unique. It was found in Germany by an agent of Leo X., and after his death passed with his other books to Florence, where it is preserved in the Bibliotheca Laurentiana. When found it was bound with a copy of Pliny's letters, made by the same hand. It is in quarto form, in Lombard characters, and was apparently made by an ignorant copyist, as he seems unconscious of breaks in the narration caused by lacunae in the MS. from which he copied. It is referred to the tenth century. The second MS., also in the Bibliotheca Laurentiana, is of about the same date, but the text is worse (XI. 1, N.). There are copies of it, but none that indicate an independent authority.

LIFE OF CORNELIUS TACITUS

OUR knowledge of the life of Tacitus depends upon incidental references in his own works, together with the correspondence of his friend, Pliny Jr., and a few scattered notices from other writers. The chronology is, in its earlier part, conjectural.

His family was of equestrian rank, and probably came from the Umbrian town of Interamna. His father or uncle had been procurator of Gallia Belgica. He was born in A.D. 53, and his early years must have been impressed by the strange events of Nero's career; his opening manhood by the civil wars of Galba, Otho, and Vitellius, terminating in the empire of Vespasian in A.D. 70. He passed the following years at Rome, where he devoted himself to the ordinary course of liberal studies, and learned law under the direction of M. Aper and Julius Secundus. During this period he must also have filled one of the subordinate city magistracies, which paved the way for the quaestorship. He does not seem to have served as Tribunus militaris, and was certainly at Rome in 75. In 77 he married the daughter of Cn. Julius Agricola, a senator from Forum Julii in southern Gaul, who was Consul suffectus during that year, and who departed to Britain at its close, to govern the island as Legatus pro praetore. Tacitus was Quaestor in A.D. 78-79, being chosen to the office by Vespasian. In 80-81 he was Tribunus plebeius or Aedilis during the empire of Titus (June 79 to September 81).¹

During the evil times of Domitian, Agricola was recalled from Britain (in 84) and kept under surveillance at Rome. Tacitus, by caution and silence, escaped the suspicion of the tyrant, and in 88 was chosen Praetor by him. At this time he was also honoured by an appointment as Quindecimvir, and took part in the celebration of the secular games. The oppression of court and city life was very bitter to him under such circumstances, and he gladly left Rome in 90 on public business (probably as Legatus legionis). He had not returned to the city when Agricola died in 93. The death of Domitian and accession of Nerva in 96 afforded the greatest relief to honourable men. In the latter part of 97 Tacitus was appointed Consul suffectus, and during his office pronounced the funeral eulogy of Verginius Rufus. He was now one of the most prominent senators, and, in 100, was appointed, with his friend C. Plinius Caecilius Secundus, to conduct the prosecution of Marius Priscus, who was sentenced to banishment for extortion and violence in the proconsulship of Africa. The literary activity of Tacitus began at the accession of Nerva, when he published the Dialogus de Oratoribus, which had probably been composed at an earlier period, but could hardly have been published in the times of Domitian, on account of the freedom of its sentiments. In 98, after the accession of Trajan, he published the biography of Agricola, and an essay upon Germany and its inhabitants. His Histories,¹ in fourteen books (of which the first four, and part of the fifth, are preserved), were published during the early years of the second century. They covered the period from the death of Nero to the accession of Nerva (A.D. 69-96), and related the events contemporary with his own life. His latest work was the Annals, covering the reigns of Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, and Nero (A.D. 14-69). It originally consisted of sixteen books, of which the 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, with portions of the 5th, 6th, 11th, and 16th, have been lost. It was published in A.D. 116.¹ Of the subsequent life of Tacitus we have no information. He had planned histories of the reigns of Augustus, Nerva, and Trajan, as the work of his old age, but never completed them. This would make us suppose that he died soon after the accession of Hadrian in 117. The correspondence of Pliny represents Tacitus to us, during his latter years, as a senator of acknowledged worth and character, the principal man of letters at Rome, surrounded, as was the custom, by a number of young men, engaged in their law studies under his direction. It is uncertain whether he left children. The Emperor Tacitus, two hundred years later, claimed to belong to the same family.

A.D. 14.

1. urbem—habuere. Tacitus begins with short unconnected sentences, passing rapidly over the history of the kings and republic. The hexameter in the first sentence is intentional. Quintilian (Inst. Or. IX. 4) quotes and blames Livy's partial hexameter: Facturusne operae pretium sin.

2. consulatum. B.C. 509.
L. (Junius) Brutus.
ad tempus. Not more than six months at a time.

3. potestas. "Term of office." They governed as usurpers for seven months of the third year, B.C. 449.

tribunorum militum consulare ius diu valuit, Non Cinnae, non 5 Sullae longa dominatio; et Pompei Crassique potentia cito in Caesarem, Lepidi atque Antonii arma in Augustum cessere, qui cuncta discordiis civilibus fessa nomine principis sub imperium accepit. Sed veteris populi Romani prospera vel adversa claris scriptoribus memorata sunt; temporibusque 10 Augusti dicendis non defuere decora ingenia, donec gliscente adulatione deterrerentur. Tiberii Gaique et Claudii ac' Neronis res florentibus ipsis ob metum falsae, postquam occide-rant, recentibus odiis compositae sunt. Inde consilium mihi pauca de Augusto et extrema tradere, mox Tiberii principatum 15 et cetera, sine ira et studio, quorum causas procul habeo.

2. Postquam Bruto et Cassio caesis nulla iam publica arma, Pompeius apud Siciliam oppressus exutoque Lepido, interfecto Antonio ne Iulianis quidem partibus nisi Caesar dux reliquus, posito triumviri nomine consulem se ferens et ad 5 tuendam plebem tribunicio iure contentum, ubi militem donis, populum annona, cunctos dulcedine otii pellexit, insurgere

4. consulare ius. Given to the military tribunes on various occasions between B.C.
 444 and 367 by a compromise between patricians and plebeians.

(L. Cornelli) Cinnae. (L. Cornelli) Sullae. (Cn.) Pompeii (Magni). (M.
 Licinii) Crassi (Divitis). (C. Iulium)
 Caesarem. (M. Aemilii) Lepidi. (M.)
 Antonii.

5. Pompey, Crassus, and Caesar formed the first triumvirate (a private combination), B.C. 60-53; Lepidus, Antony, and Octavius the second triumvirate (an open assumption of power), B.C. 43-36.

7. principis. The title of princeps was conferred, under the republic, as an honourable distinction on the chief man of the senate. Q. Lutatius Catulus, who died in B.C. 60, had been the last to hold it. Augustus revived it for himself, to avoid the odium of the word rex or dictator (I. 9. N.).

9. scriptoribus. Tacitus constantly employs the dative of agent with passive verbs of all tenses.

10. decora ingenia. Asinius Pollio,
 T. Livius, Aufidius Bassus, Cremutius Cordus.

11. Tiberii (Neronis Imperatoris).
 Gaii or Caii (Caesaris Imperatoris).
 Claudii (Drusi Imperatoris).

Neronis (Claudii Caesaris Drusi Germanici).

15. cetera. To the death of Nero, where the Historiae began.

2. 1. (M. Junio) Bruto.

(C.) Cassio (Longino).

publica arma. There were no armies representing the senate and republic; the triumvirs and Sex. Pompey levied armies as individuals.

2. (Sex.) Pompeius (Magnus).

3. ne Iulianis quidem partibus. All the triumvirs claimed to be successors of Julius Caesar.

4. consulem se ferens. B.C. 31-28.
 In B.C. 23 he assumed the tribunicia potestas and held it for the rest of his life (§ 9, N.).

6. annona. Monthly corn doles of five modii (pecks) each were given in B.C. 5 to 350,000 Romans. The lower classes, when they lost their political power, were gratified by the Government with free bread and shows. In B.C. 2 the number of recipients was diminished by Augustus to 200,000. The soil of Italy had been cropped out, and was now devoted to grazing purposes (III. 54, N.), while the supplies of Rome were imported from abroad by the praefectus annonae
 (§ 7), an office instituted by Augustus paulatim, munia senatus magistratuum legum in se trahere, nullo adversante, cum ferocissimi per acies aut proscriptione cecidissent, ceteri nobilium, quanto quis servitio promptior, opibus et honoribus extollerentur ac novis ex rebus aucti 10 tuta et praesentia quam vetera et periculosa mallent. Neque provinciae illum rerum statum abnuebant, suspecto senatus populique imperio. ob certamina potentium et avaritiam magistratuum, invalido legum auxilio, quae vi, ambitu, postremo pecunia turbabantur. 15

3. Ceterum Augustus subsidia dominationi Claudium Marcellum sororis filium admodum adulescentem pontificatu et curuli aedilitate, M. Agrippam ignobilem loco, bonum militia et victoriae socium, geminatis consulatibus extulit, mox defuncto Marcello generum sumpsit; Tiberium Neronem et Claudium Drusum privignos imperatoriis nominibus auxit, integra etiam tum domo sua. Nam genitos Agrippa Gaium ac Lucium in familiam Caesarum induxerat, necdum posita puerili praetexta principes iuventutis appellari, destinari consules specie 5

(VI. 2, N.). The corn was laid up in large stone granaries on the banks of the Tiber, and was brought from Sicily, Africa, and the east. Egypt alone exported 20,000,000 modii annually. The absolute donation of corn was unusual under later emperors; more generally (XV. 18 and 39), it was distributed at low and uniform prices.

7. senatus, magistratuum, legum. As imperator (II. 18, N.) the emperor controlled the armies, as princeps (§ 1, N.) the senate, as pontifex maximus (IV. 17, N.) the religion, by the tribunicia potestas (I. 9, N.) the people, as censor (XI. 13, N.) he chose the senators, and his rescripts had the force of laws; but no names were changed.

8. per acies. The ablative aciebus is not Latin.

9. promptior. Int. 46, a.

11. mallent, etc. "Those who had risen by revolutions preferred the safety of the present to the dangers of the past."

12. provinciae. The provinces had borne the expense and furnished the soldiers for the civil wars, in which they had no interest. They were also better governed under the empire than under the republic, because the governors no longer were changed every year, and (those of the imperial provinces at least, § 74, N.)

were directly responsible to the emperor, instead of to a chamber of their peers.

14. legum. De pecuniis repetundis (§ 74, N.).

8. 1. (M.) Claudium Marcellum.

2. sororis. Octavia.

pontificatus. IV. 17, N.

3. curuli aedilitate. He was eighteen years old. The legal age for an edile was thirty-seven (XI. 22, N.).

ignobilem loco. The gens Vipsania was obscure, and Agrippa ignored the name, merely calling himself M. Agrippa.

bonum militia. He won the victories over Sex. Pompey at Mylae and over Antony at Actium.

5. generum. Julia was the only legitimate child of Augustus. She was married successively to Marcellus, Agrippa, and Tiberius, in hope of perpetuating the line. Her only children were by Agrippa, viz. Caius Caesar, Lucius Caesar, Agrippa Postumus, Julia, and Agrippina.

7. Agrippa. Ablative of source.

8. puerili praetexta. A toga with purple border, worn by free-born children under fifteen (XII. 41, N.), and also by nobles, officials, and priests (II. 14, N.).

9. principes iuventutis. Chiefs of the equites, by whom they were presented with silver shields and spears. The same honour, with the appointment that he

10 recusantis flagrantissime cupiverat. Ut Agrippa vita concessit, Lucium Caesarem euntem ad Hispaniensem exercitum, Gaium remeantem Armenia et vulnere invalidum mors fato propera vel novercae Liviae dolus abstulit, Drusoque pridem extincto Nero solus e privignis erat, illuc cuncta vergere: filius, collega
 15 imperii, consors tribuniciae potestatis adsumitur omnisque per exercitus ostentatur, non obscuris, ut antea, matris artibus, sed palam hortatu. † Nam senem Augustum devinxerat adeo, uti nepotem unicum, Agrippam Postumum, in insulam Planasiam proiecerit, rudem sane bonarum artium et robore corporis stolide 20 ferocem, nullius tamen flagitii conpertum. At hercule Germanicum Druso ortum octo apud Rhenum legionibus inposuit adscirique per adoptionem a Tiberio iussit, quamquam esset in domo Tiberii filius juvenis, sed quo pluribus munimentis insisteret. Bellum ea tempestate nullum nisi adversus Germanos 25 supererat, abolendae magis infamiae ob amissum cum Quintilio Varo exercitum quam cupidine proferendi imperii aut dignum ob praemium. Domi res tranquillae, eadem magistratum vocabula; iuniores post Actiacam victoriam, etiam senes plerique inter bella civium nati: quotusquisque reliquus qui 30 rem publicam vidisset?

4. Igitur verso civitatis statu nihil usquam prisci et integri moris: omnes exuta aequalitate iussa principis aspectare, nulla in praesens formidine, dum Augustus aetate validus seque et domum et pacem sustentavit. Postquam provecta iam senectus should enjoy the consulship at twenty, instead of the legitimate age of forty-two, was made in the case of Nero (XII. 41, N.).

12. Armenia. Names of countries are sometimes construed by Tacitus like names of towns (Int. 27, a.).

13. novercae Liviae dolus. That Tacitus believed her guilty appears from III. 19.

(Nero Claudius) Drusus (called Drusus Sr.)

17. hortatu. "By proclamation."

22. quamquam esset. Tacitus uses the subjunctive with quamquam, contrary to Cicero's custom (Int. 48).

23. filius juvenis. Drusus Jr.

25. abolendae—infamiae. Int. 50. amissum exercitum. Cut to pieces by Arminius, A.D. 8 (§ 62).

(P.) Quintilio Varo.

4. 5. aegro et corpore. "By a sickly body, too." Augustus was never robust, and suffered from want of circulation. In his old age he suffered with the gravel.

6. in cassum. Tacitus, with a strong love of old forms and of the republican constitution, was quite convinced that the Roman people had become too corrupt to govern themselves.

7. imminentis dominos. "The masters they expected." The term dominus was offensive to a freeman (II. 87, N.).

rumoribus differebant: trucem Agrippam et ignominia accensum non aetate neque rerum experientia tantae moli parem, Tiberium Neronem maturum annis, spectatum bello, sed vetere 10 atque insita Claudiae familiae superbia, multaque indicia saevitiae, quamquam premantur, erumpere. Hunc et prima ab infantia eductum in domo regnatrice; congestos iuveni consulatus, triumphos; ne iis quidem annis, quibus Rhodi specie secessus exul egerit, aliud quam iram et simulationem et secretas 15 lubidines meditatum. Accedere matrem muliebri inpotentia: serviendum feminae duobusque insuper adolescentibus, qui rem publicam interim premant, quandoque distrahant.

5. Haec atque talia agitantibus gravescere valetudo Augusti, et quidam scelus uxoris suspectabant. Quippe rumor incesserat, paucos ante menses Augustum, electis consciis et comite uno Fabio Maximo, Planasiam vectum ad visendum Agrippam; multas illic utrimque lacrimas et signa caritatis 5 spemque ex eo fore ut iuvenis penatibus avi redderetur: quod Maximum uxori Marciae aperuisse, illam Liviae. Gnarum id Caesari; neque multo post extincto Maximo, dubium an quaesita morte, auditos in funere eius Marciae gemitus semet incusantis, quod causa exitii marito fuisset. 8. Agrippam (Postumum). The oratio obliqua is to be translated in the present tense.

9. aetate. Twenty-six years old.

10. maturum annis. Fifty-six.

11. Claudiae familiae superbia. The family which produced the decemvir and the blind Censor. See Attus Clausus.

12. prima ab infantia. He followed his mother to the palace at the age of eight.

13. regnatrice. Int. 4.

consulatus. He was consul in his twenty-ninth year, B.C. 13, and again in B.C. 7. The legal age was forty-three.

14. triumphos. De Pannoniis, B.C. 9; de Germanis, B.C. 7.

ne—quidem. Int. 38, c.

15. exul egerit. His retreat at Rhodes became a practical exile when Augustus declined his proposal to return, though no vote of the senate was passed.

16. accedere matrem. "There is his mother (Livia) too."

17. duobus adolescentibus. Drusus

Jr., the son, and Germanicus, the nephew and adoptive son, of Tiberius. They will agree to oppress the empire for a time, and then, when their interests clash, will tear it asunder.

5. 1. agitantibus. Abl. abs. with iis understood. A frequent construction in Tacitus.

2. scelus uxoris. It was said that Livia poisoned figs on the trees in his garden. Augustus plucked them as he walked in the alley, ate, and died. The story appears to lack foundation, and Livia probably loved Augustus better than she did any one, except her sons.

4. (Paullo) Fabio Maximo.

8. quaesita = "unnatural."

11. Illyricum. Tiberius was on his way to settle the affairs of this province, which again threatened rebellion. Augustus had escorted him as far as Beneventum in Samnium, and died while returning to Rome.

properis. "Urgent."

Augustum apud urbem Nolum an exanimem reppererit. Acribus namque custodiis domum et vias saepserat Livia, laetique 15 interdum nuntii vulgabantur, donec provisus quae tempus monebat simul excessisse Augustum et rerum potiri Neronem fama eadem tulit.

6. Primum facinus novi principatus fuit Postumi Agrippae caedes, quem ignarum inermumque quamvis firmatus animo centurio aegre confecit. Nihil de ea re Tiberius apud senatum disseruit: patris iussa simulabat, quibus praescripsisset tribuno 5 custodiae adposito, ne cunctaretur Agrippam morte adficere, quandoque ipse supremum diem explevisset. Multa sine dubio saevaue Augustus de moribus adolescentis questus, ut exilium eius senatus consulto sanciretur perfecerat: ceterum in nullius umquam suorum necem duravit, neque mortem nepoti pro 10 securitate privigni inlatam credibile erat. Propius vero Tiberium ac Liviam, illum metu, hanc novercalibus odiis, suspecti et invisi iuvenis caedem festinavisse. Nuntianti centurioni, ut mos militiae, factum esse quod imperasset, neque imperasse sese et rationem facti reddendam apud senatum respondit.
15 Quod postquam Sallustius Crispus particeps secretorum (is ad tribunum miserat codicillos) comperit, metuens ne reus subderetur, iuxta periculoso ficta seu vera promeret, monuit Liviam ne arcana domus, ne consilia amicorum, ministeria militum vulgarentur, neve Tiberius vim principatus resolveret cuncta ad 20 senatum vocando: eam condicionem esse imperandi, ut non aliter ratio constet quam si uni reddatur.

13. reppererit. Velleius Paterculus and Suetonius say that he arrived in time; Dio Cassius denies it.

6. 4. quibus praescripsisset. "By which (Tiberius affirmed) he had given instructions."

tribuno. A military tribune. There were six in a legion of 6000 men, and they consequently corresponded to our colonels, but they commanded an undivided sixth of the legion, dividing their authority among themselves. Under the republic they were elected by the people from men who had seen service; but Augustus allowed the sons of senators to assume the latus clavus, and enter public service as tribunes as soon as they assumed the toga virilis. This ordinance, as well as others of Augustus, was intended to interest the governing classes in the administration of the empire, when the ambitions of public life under the republic were at an end. Tiberius assumed the appointment of tribunes. Tribunes were the lowest commissioned officers; centurions rose from the ranks.

9. duravit. "Hardened his heart."

15. (C.) Sallustius Crispus.

secretorum. Secreta has a bad sense; arcana a good one. Sallustius, as a courtier, uses the latter.

16. codicillos. "Death-warrant."

17. iuxta—periculoso. "Since it was as dangerous to lie as to tell the truth." Periculoso is abl. abs. with the following sentence (Int. 52).

20. eam condicionem, etc. "An empire is so constituted that accounts will not balance unless audited by the master alone."

7. At Romae ruere in servitium consules, patres, eques. Quanto quis inlustrior, tanto magis falsi ac festinantes, vultuque composito, ne laeti excessu principis neu tristiores primordio, lacrimas gaudium, questus adulationem miscebant. Sex. Pompeius et Sex. Appuleius consules primi in verba Tiberii 5 Caesaris iuravere, apudque eos Seius Strabo et C. Turranius, ille praetoriarum cohortium praefectus, hic annonae; mox senatus milesque et populus. Nam Tiberius cuncta per consules incipiebat, tamquam vetere re publica et ambiguus imperandi: ne edictum quidem, quo patres in curiam vocabat, nisi tribu- 10 niciae potestatis praescriptione posuit sub Augusto acceptae. Verba edicti fuere pauca et sensu permodesto: de honoribus parentis consulturum, neque abscedere a corpore idque unum ex publicis muneribus usurpare. Sed defuncto Augusto signum praetoriis cohortibus ut imperator dederat: excubiae, 15 arma, cetera aulae; miles in forum, miles in curiam comitabatur. Literas ad exercitus tamquam adepto principatu misit, nusquam cunctabundus nisi cum in senatu loqueretur. Causa praecipua ex formidine, ne Germanicus, in cuius manu tot legiones, immensa sociorum auxilia, mirus apud populum favor, 20 habere imperium quam exspectare mallet. Dabat et famae, ut vocatus electusque potius a re publica videretur quam per uxorium ambitum et senili adoptione inrepsisse. Postea cognitum est ad introspiciendas etiam procerum voluntates inductam dubitationem: nam verba vultus in crimen detorquens 25 recondebat.

7. 2. festinantes. An unseemly haste.

3. ne laeti. Sc. viderentur (Int. 18, b).

5. in verba—iuravere. "Swore allegiance," according to a set form of words. In a military oath (sacramentum) the first one concerned swore to regard the interests of the emperor above those of himself or his own father. The rest confirmed the imprecations upon their own heads with the words idem in me.

6. (L.) Seius Strabo.

7. cohortium. The praetorians (the emperor's Roman guard, distinguished from the German guard, § 24, N.) consisted of nine cohorts of 1000 men each, each commanded by a tribune. In a legion the first cohort, which protected the eagle, was of 960 men; the other nine of 480 each, under command of prefects.

annonae. § 2, N.

9. vetere re publica. Abl. abs.

11. praescriptione. The tribunician power gave the right to assemble the senate (§9, N.). Tiberius therefore headed his summons with the words "Ti. Claudius Nero, tribunicia potestate sextumdecimum."

13. parentis. His father by adoption.

14. signum. "Watchword."

15. excubiae. XII. 69, N.

16. cetera aulae. e.g. fasces twined with laurel.

18. cunctabundus. "Appearing to hesitate." Verbals in bundus give the force of appearance.

loqueretur. Int. 45.

19. tot legiones. Eight.

21. dabat—famae. "He considered his reputation."

24. inductam. As an actor puts on (inducit) a mask.

8. Nihil primo senatus die agi passus est nisi de supremis Augusti, cuius testamentum inlatum per virgines Vestae Tiberium et Liviam heredes habuit. Livia in familiam Iuliam nomenque Augustum adsumebatur; in spem secundam nepotes
 5 pronepotesque, tertio gradu primores civitatis scripserat plerosque invisos sibi, sed iactantia gloriaque ad posteros. Legata non ultra civilem modum, nisi quod populo et plebi quadringentis tricenis quinquies, praetoriarum cohortium militibus singula nummum milia, urbanis quingenos, legionariis ac cohortibus civium Romanorum trecentos nummos viritim dedit.  15 per annos sacramentum in nomen Tiberii; interrogatusque a Tiberio num se mandante eam sententiam prompsisset, sponte dixisse respondit, neque in iis quae ad rem publicam pertinerent consilio nisi suo usurum, vel cum periculo offensionis: ea sola species adulandi supererat. Conclamant patres corpus ad rogam

8. 2. virgines Vestae. Wills and valuables were deposited in the temples, which were guarded (in the days of Tertullian) by soldiers. The wills of Julius and Antonius, and the treaty between the triumvirs and Sex. Pompeius, were entrusted to the Vestals (II. 86, N.).

3. heredes. The property amounted to £1,250,000. Tiberius took two-thirds, and Livia the rest. Augustus had expended much larger sums for the benefit of the state (§ 11, N.).

4. nomenque Augustum. Augustum is an adjective. She was called Julia Augusta.

nepotes. Germanicus and Drusus Jr.

5. pronepotes. The three sons of Germanicus. Augustus saw his abnepos, M. Junius Silanus, born in the year of his own death.

7. civilem modum. What any citizen might leave.

populo et plebi. Of the 43,500,000 sesterces, 40,000,000 went to the public treasury (populo), 3,500,000 were doled out to the poor (plebi). With numerical adverbs centena is to be supplied.

9. nummum milia. The sestertius may be conveniently reckoned at twopence.

This is the statement usually given, based on the value of the English shilling. Assays of two denarii of Augustus by specific gravity give a value of but sixpence at the present market value of silver (1880). A denarius was worth four sesterces.

9. ac. MS. aut. Lipsius reads autem, Nipperdey ac. There were 32 cohorts of Roman citizens not enrolled in particular legions. The MS. does not mention the cohortes urbanae (IV. 5, N.), which received, according to Suetonius, 500 sesterces per man.

11. visi. To the people.

12. porta triumphali. Leading through the wall of Servius, according to Dyer, between the Capitoline and the river. It was only opened for the procession of a triumph. (C.) Asinius Gallus.

14. (M.) Valerius Messala (Corvinus).

15. sacramentum. The military oath of allegiance taken to Caesar as Imperator (§ 7, N.). It was usually repeated once in five or ten years.

20. remisit. "He left it to their discretion."

adroganti moderatione. As though he had a right to demand it if he pleased.

22. funus divi Iulii. Excited by the eloquence of Antonius, the people built a pyre of broken benches and banker's tables in the forum, and burned the body of Julius there, against the law which forbade intramural funerals.

23. sede destinata. In the mausoleum near the banks of the Tiber, which Augustus himself had built. It was a circular edifice of marble, with three terraces, on which cypresses were planted. The statue of Augustus adorned the summit. A pleasure ground for the people surrounded the building.

24. inridentibus. Abl. abs.

25. diem illum. 59 years before.

29. in rem publicam. "To gain control of the government." The display of troops was, of course, really intended to impress all classes with the military force of Tiberius.

9. 2. idem dies. August 19, on which he had received his first consulate, 56 years before.

4. (O.) Octavius (Rufus).

numerus consulatum. Valerius Corvus, 6; C. Marius, 7; Augustus, 13.

6. septem et triginta annos. 36 years and 2 months. The tribunicia potestas (including the idea of jus tribunicium) gave the emperor the powers of a tribunus plebis, viz. to call together senate or people; to propose laws; to veto unsatisfactory measures; to be the final court of appeal (as representative of the Roman people) in capital cases; and to have an inviolable person. It was assumed at intervals of five years, on the 27th of June, and, as it was invariably reassumed, fixed the year of the reign with subsequent emperors. Only the heir-apparent was associated in this power (§ 7, and III. 56). Augustus first received it in B.C. 23. Ordinary tribunes held office but for one year, and were allowed little freedom under the empire (VI. 47).

7. inperatoris. In the ancient fashion, by which a victorious general was hailed imperator by his troops on the battle-field, and the title was subsequently confirmed by the senate. It could only be enjoyed by a magistrate who had the right to take auspices, and on this ground Augustus claimed the victories won by his generals as legati (II. 18, N.).

10. necessitudine = necessitate.

15. non regno. Maecenas warned him against offending the Roman people with the title Rex (VI. 1, N.), and the examples of Sulla and Julius Caesar gave a gloomy idea of a perpetual dictatorship.

16. principis. § 1, N.

17. amnibus. The Rhine, Danube, and Euphrates.

18. conexas. By post-roads and relays of horses.

20. ornatu. He built a forum, and erected or restored countless temples, porticoes, aqueducts, etc. He boasted that he had found Rome of brick and left it of marble.

10. 2. ceterum. generally means in Tacitus "but in reality." He is here representing the views of the old republican party, to which he belonged by sympathy, though he had too good sense not to understand the necessity of the empire.

4. Pompeianarum—partium. The senate and nobles, or republican party, which had adhered to Pompey until his fall at Pharsalia.

5. decreto patrum. The senate invested him with praetorian authority, without having recourse to a popular election. He was called a propraetor. A praetor had two lictors in the city, and six in the provinces (§ 14, N.).

6. (A.) Hirtio, (C. Vibio) Pansa.

9. invito senatu. Ablative. The senate hesitated to give him the consulship which he demanded. His messenger, Cornelius, a centurion, touched the hilt of his sword, saying, "Hic faciet, si vos non feceritis."

10. proscriptionem civium. In which Cicero fell.

11. divisiones agrorum. The division of confiscated lands among victorious veterans, in which Virgil and Horace lost their estates.

12. Brutorum. Marcus, and Decimus, Junius Brutus.

(M. ~~Emillium~~) Lepidum.17. Lollianas Varianasque clades. See M. Lollius, P. Quintilius Varus.18. Varrones, etc. The plural, because they are used as instances. In French, such plurals are expressed by the article alone — Les Varron. See A. Terentius Varro Murena, Antonius Iulus, M. Egnatius Rufus.

19. (Ti. Claudio) Neroni.

24. coli vellet. An unfair exaggeration. During his lifetime Augustus suffered temples to be erected in his honour only in the provinces (a custom which had been introduced by the Greeks to please their later kings and governors). These temples of Augustus had a political intention, and his worship was associated with that of Rome (§ 57, N.).

30. de habitu cultuque et institutis. "Bearing, dress, and manners." Tiberius was awkward, silent, and cold.

31. ceterum. Tacitus returns from this scandal (he evidently does not believe all of it) to represent the facts which occurred.

templum. VI. 45, N.

11. 2. sua modestia. He spoke of his age (56), his weak eyes, etc.

3. partem curarum. Tribunician (§ 9, N.) and censorial (XI. 13, N.) power.

6. non—deferrent. Poetical construction, for ne.

12. quibus unus metus si. "Whose only fear was lest they should seem to understand" his real meaning.

13. effigiem Augusti. VI. 8, N.

14. libellum. Augustus placed three rolls, together with his will, in the hands of the Vestals. The first contained directions for his funeral, and the second an account of his deeds, to be engraved on brazen tables and set up in front of his mausoleum. A copy of the latter has been preserved, in Greek and Latin, on the walls of the temple of Augustus at Ancyra (now Angora) in Galatia; it is our most authentic source for the history of his life. The third roll (called by Suetonius breviarum totius imperii) is here mentioned.

15. quantum civium—in armis. 25 legions of 6000 men each.

sociorum. Including auxilia and socii proper (§ 36, N.). Together they amounted to a much larger body than the Roman legionaries.

16. classes. One at Misenum near Naples; another at Ravenna on the Adriatic; a third at Forum Julii (Fréjus) in Gaul (II. 63). There were flotillas on the Rhine (I. 45) and Danube. The marines (classarii) formed a separate branch of the service.

regna. Thrace, Cappadocia, Mauretania, etc. It was Roman policy to govern barbarous countries by vassal kings, until they learned to appreciate the value of civilisation and settled laws, when they were absorbed as provinces.

provinciae. § 74, N.

tributa aut vectigalia. Direct and indirect taxes (IV. 6; XIII. 50, NN.).

17. largitiones. Donativa in money to the army, besides bounties in money (§ 78, N.), and land to veterans; congiaria in corn (§ 2, N.) to the people. Augustus received £32,500,000 in legacies alone during the last twenty years of his reign, in addition to as much of the great fortune of Julius as he had been able to wrest from Antonius. He had expended almost all for the people.

19. invidiam. Of posterity. Trajan extended his boundaries beyond the Euphrates and Danube, only to meet new troubles from distant tribes. Tacitus, however, was writing during the greatest success of his arms (II. 61, N.).

12. 3. quaecumque = si quae. He offered to undertake a third of the government, Rome and Italy; the armies; or the provinces.

8. cul. Usually ab aliqua re.

9. vultu. "Expression."

12. laudem de. "A eulogy upon." Hence the construction with de instead of the genitive.

16. civilia. "A private position."

17. (C.) Asinius Pollio.

18. 5. adipisci. Depends on abnuerent.

7. Manium (Aemilium) Lepidum. Two Lepidi are mentioned by Tacitus. He praises the one highly. The manuscripts confuse the names Manius and Marcus. It is generally agreed to assign the name Manius to the greater of the two.

10. omnesque—circumventi sunt. Piso in A.D. 20; Gallus in 33; Arruntius in 37.

12. Mamercus (Aemilius) Scaurus.

15. quod relationi—non intercessisset. If Tiberius had been in earnest about refusing his election to the empire, he would have forbidden the consul to put the motion (relatio, II. 33, N.), in virtue of his tribunician power.

17. inplacabilis. The speech of Haterius was an awkward piece of flattery; that of Scaurus a covert sarcasm.

21. Palatium. See index, Palatinus.

genua advolveretur, prope a militibus interfectum, quia Tiberius casu an manibus eius inpeditus prociderat. Neque tamen periculo talis viri mitigatus est, donec Haterius Augustam oraret 25 eiusque curatissimis precibus protegeretur.

14. Multa patrum et in Augustam adulatio. Alii parentem, alii matrem patriae appellandam, plerique ut nomini Caesaris adscriberetur "Iuliae filius" censebant. Ille moderandos femin-
 5 arum honores dictitans eademque se temperantia usurum in iis quae sibi tribuerentur, ceterum anxius invidia et muliebri fastigium in deminutionem sui accipiens ne lictorem quidem ei decerni passus est aramque adoptionis et alia huiusce modi prohibuit. At Germanico Caesari proconsulare imperium petivit, missique legati qui deferrent, simul maestitiam eius ob excessum Augusti
 10 solarentur. Quo minus idem pro Druso postularetur, ea causa quod designatus consul Drusus praesensque erat. Candidatos praeturae duodecim nominavit, numerum ab Augusto traditum; et hortante senatu ut augeret, iure iurando obstrinxit se non excessurum.

22. Advolveretur. In Tacitus, it governs a direct accusative (Int. 23, c). Here in the middle voice.

23. an. Sc. incertum est.

25. curatissimis. "Most urgent."

14. 2. matrem patriae. Her name appears on provincial coins as Iulia Augusta, genetrix orbis.

3. Iuliae filius. He is regularly called in inscriptions Divi Augusti filius.

5. invidia. Tiberius steadily opposed his mother's political ambition. Livia and Agrippina Jr. were singular instances of women who were punished for their crimes by the sons for whom they had committed them.

6. lictorem. Yet the Vestals were allowed one, and Agrippina Jr. had two (XIII. 2). Livia was suffered to have one on occasions of sacrifice.

7. aram adoptionis. By her adoption, according to the will of Augustus, she legally became her husband's daughter, and is so named in inscriptions. Altars were used as monuments. Thus Tiberius was offered an altar of Vengeance for killing Piso; an altar of Clemency for not killing the senate; an altar of Friendship when Sejanus was his favourite, etc. (III. 18; IV. 74).

8. proconsulare imperium. A device of Augustus, by which he held the same authority over the provincials which the tribunicia potestas gave him over the citizens. It differed from the ordinary power of a proconsul in not being confined to one province, but extending over the whole empire, with the exception of the city. It was a very high and significant honour. Thus it was given to Nero, when he was recognised as the heir-presumptive of Claudius. Augustus had conferred it upon Germanicus during his lifetime, and Tiberius could not in decency avoid confirming it for life, as was now done.

11. designatus consul. As consul elect he would have been required to give the first vote in the matter of his own honour, when the consuls brought the question before the house (III. 22, N.).

Candidatos praeturae duodecim. There were originally two praetors, with high judicial functions, and more were added to administer justice in the provinces, as Rome's colonial empire increased. Julius raised the number from eight to sixteen, and Augustus, after some variations, settled on twelve. Men were eager to hold office, because it gave them the jus imaginum (II. 32, N.).

13. iure iurando. He afterwards appointed fifteen or sixteen. The reason of his oath was that the senate was eager to comitia. Under Augustus the people retained a nominal right of election, but practically chose the emperor's candidates. He courted popularity by introducing them to the people personally, and cast his own vote in his tribe. As it was easier to manage a small than a large body, Tiberius transferred the elections to the senate. As none but senators were eligible to curule magistracies, the candidates were now elected by their peers, instead of by a popular assembly, and were glad to be relieved from the necessity of bribery (largitionibus), and canvassing among the rabble (precibus sordidis). Praetors only are mentioned here, but all elections were henceforth in the control of the senate, and all nominations practically made by the emperor.

5. tenuit. Sc. jus.

6. quattuor candidatos commendaret. The account is rather confused. Twelve praetors were elected annually (the elections being held a year in advance (II. 36, N.), from candidates selected by the emperor. If he nominated but twelve, they must all be chosen ; but if he nominated more, there was a certain liberty of choice (XIV. 28, N.). In any case, however, four men who were called the emperor's nominees, par excellence (candidati Cae- saris), had to be elected without cavil. In this way the emperor became the appointing power for the praetorship, and practically for all offices, and was thus as completely in control of the senate as of the people. In order to increase the power of patronage, the number of consuls was increased from two to twelve, by appointing consules suffecti (§ 81, N.), and the system was introduced of granting ornamenta triumphalia, consularia, praetoria, quaestoria, etc., by which a man gained the rank and dress and statue of a victorious general, or of an ex-consul, praetor, or quaestor, without having attained those honours. Ornamenta quaestoria made him eligible to the senate (XIII. 29, N.).

8. fastis. The calendar of holy days.

9. Augustales. Celebrated October 12th. Games had been previously exhibited in honour of Augustus, but they were now made perpetual in his name, as a deity. The celebration was intrusted to the tribunes on account of the sanctity of their office.

ex aerario. XIII. 29, N.

10. per circum. The praetors presided at the Circensian games, riding to their seat in triumphal dress (I. 72, N.), at the head of a procession, and holding the mappa by which they gave the signal for the start. A part of these honours is now granted to the tribunes.

11. praetorem. Called the praetor peregrinus.

16. 4. castris aestivis. The hiberna of a legion were in the principal towns of a province, where the troops were quartered on the inhabitants or provided with suitable barracks, provisions being supplied beforehand. In summer the camp changed place according to military necessity, or to the supply of forage. Every camping-ground was, however, regularly laid out (§ 66, N.) and fortified. The tents were made of skin, and accommodated messes of ten men each. Sub pellibus hiemare was considered a hardship.

legiones tres. The eighth (Augusta), ninth (Hispana), and fifteenth (Apollinaris).

5. (Q.) Iunio Blaeso. As legatus pro praetore or governor of an imperial province (§ 74, N.).

6. iustitium. A vacation from duty in time of public mourning, originally applied to judicial business. The word gaudium, expressing the public rejoicing on the accession of Tiberius, is not found in the Medicean MS.

10. theatralium operarum. The claqueurs. Applause was managed in the theatres by hired bodies of men, and riots frequently arose between opposite factions among the 40,000 spectators. The leader of such a faction would be a skilful demagogue (§ 54, N.).

12. quaenam. Supply foret. Tacitus, contrary to the usage of Cicero, frequently omits the subjunctive of esse.

17. 2. contionabundus. "Prenant le ton d'un général qui harangue."—Bournouf. Verbals in bundus express the appearance of doing anything.

paucis centurionibus, etc. Sixty centurions and six tribunes to a legion (§ 18, N.).

3. ausuros. In direct discourse, audebimus.

6. tricena aut quadragena. The legitimate term of service was twenty years for legionaries, and sixteen for praetorians.

8. tendentes, Sc. tentoria.

alio vocabulo. i.e. Vexillarii. Veterans who had earned a discharge, but were retained in camp under various pretences. They were a reserve-guard for actual fighting, and were not obliged to do camp work. The government had a strong interest to retain the veteran until his death, as his claim for a retiring bounty was a personal one, and died with him. The vexillarii sometimes amounted to 500 in one legion. Vocabulo is used by Tacitus to express proper names and technical terms. It represents a collocation of sounds or letters without regard to sense, and is usually applied to barbarous names.

10. diversas. "Distant."

12. denis—assibus. Since the second Punic war the as was worth $\frac{1}{16}$ of a denarius, or $1\frac{1}{2}$ pence ; but the value had been reduced in civil matters to 16 to a denarius. In paying the troops, however, 10 of the smaller asses, or 5d., were called a denarius. Percennius, therefore, when setting forth the troubles of the legionaries, reminds them that their pay is but 10 asses a day ; but below, when invidiously exaggerating the double pay of the praetorians, he calls it 2 denarii.

14. munerum. Foraging, supplying wood and water, digging trenches, etc.

redimi. A zeugma. They had to buy their equipments, and buy off the centurions, who were rough men, risen from the ranks (§ 6, N.), and carried vine switches in token of their right to flog the men (§ 23, N.). The clothes, tents, etc., were furnished by the Government, and the amount deducted from their wages. In earlier and later times they were supplied gratis. The provisions were supplied for the legions, but not for the praetorians, who had double pay.

19. praemium. The bounty amounted to 3000 denarii (supposably camp denarii of 5d.). They demand the money in cash instead of land. The praetorians had 5000.

22. excubias. XII. 69, N.

23. sibi. Roby, 1146, 22.

18. 3. exprobrantes. "Complaining of."

5. honorem. Each legion desired the combined force to accept its peculiar name, eagle, leader, etc.

6. aquillas. 1 legion of 5280 to 6000 men was equal to 10 cohorts ; 1 cohort (I. 7, N.) = 3 maniples ; 1 manipulus = 2 centuries. Each legion had its eagle (a silver bird with outstretched wings, as large as a pigeon, and raised on a pole) ; each cohort its signum (a metal standard, often consisting of images of the gods or the emperors and their families, which were worshipped, together with the eagles,

19. Aggerabatur nihilo minus caespes iamque pectori usque adcreverat, cum tandem pervicacia victi inceptum omisere. Blaesus multa dicendi arte non per seditionem et turbas desideria militum ad Caesarem ferenda ait, neque veteres ab im-as the gods of the legions, II. 17, N.) ; each manipulus its vexillum. The rallying point for each century was the crest of its centurion. The eagle was borne by the centurio primipilus (§ 29, N.), other standards by signiferi and vexillarii appointed by the centurions. Each legion kept its standards on a spot which served as a sanctuary (§ 39, N.). By transferring them to a tribunal of their own, the soldiers practically claim the right to wage war under their own auspices.

7. tribunal. None but the emperor or his legatus had the right of allocutio, or addressing the troops from a raised platform. Consequently, Blaesus regards this action as rank mutiny. The tribunal (derived from tribus) was originally the place from which the comitia tributa were addressed ; then a judgment-seat sedes. For the standards.

19. 3. multa—arte. Ablative of quality (Int. 31). "A very skilful orator."

4. veteres. Scilicet legiones.

6. parum. Used ironically for minime. "It was hardly the time."

7. tenderent. After a historical present (ait), which allows both primary and secondary tenses in the oratio obliqua, the construction sometimes wavers.—Harkness, 481, iv. Expostulaverint follows in a clause of result.

13. provenissent. Would be future perfect in oratio recta.

20. 3. convellunt. The standard was shod with an iron point, and fixed in the ground.

4. municipii instar. It had a forum ; and Roman citizens resided there (§ 79, N.).

6. praefectum castrorum. One was appointed over each legion, with charge of camp, transports, artillery, and hospitals. Unlike the tribunes (§ 6, N.), he rose from the ranks; but he had the precedence of them, and, in the absence of a legatus legionis (§ 44, N.), commanded his legion (XIV. 37).

8. onera. Each soldier carried sixty pounds of baggage, and was expected to march twenty miles a day.

21. 3. carcere. The regular camp prison. When the army moved the prisoners marched in chains.

4. etiam tum. Not that the centurions afterwards joined the mutineers, but they had to fly for their lives.

9. nihil reliqui, etc. "They leave nothing undone to."

11. universis. "All with one consent."

22. 2. tribunal. In the middle of the camp, and at the crossing of the two principal streets, was an open square, where stood the general's tent (praetorium); on the left hand was the tribunal (§ 18, N.), and on the right the augurale (II. 13, N.).

6. Germanorum. Batavians, Friesians, and Ubians. Augustus disbanded them after the defeat of Varus, but seems to have collected them again. Without country or family ties, like the Varangers of the eastern empire, or the Swiss guards of modern sovereigns, the emperor's safety was their only object. They were divided into decuriae, and formed a collegium or guild of their own. They were stationed in the emperor's chamber, and accompanied him abroad on horseback, while the praetorians were stationed on the palace steps (XII. 69, N.).

10. per officium. "To do him honour."

11. insignibus. On holidays the troops appeared with their gold collars and trappings. They wreathed their standards (§ 18, N.) with laurel and roses, and anointed them. Signa incompta expressed mourning (III. 2).

25. 2. globos. Disorderly bodies pressed together in circular groups.

3. Stabat. Emphatic from position. "There stood Drusus."

5. rettulerant. The ringleaders were in front.

Caesare. All the royal family were Caesars. The word became an official title, and passed into the German Kaiser.

9. quibuscum—toleravisset. The insurrections of Pannonia which Tiberius quelled lasted B.C. 12-10, and A.D. 6-9. Suetonius speaks of the latter as the most serious foreign war since the time of Hannibal.

11. acturum, etc. "He would lay their demands before the senate."

13. quem neque, etc. "It would be fair to suppose that it would not fail both to reward and punish." The senate is used as a convenient tool, and hints of punishment quietly insinuated. Church and Brodribb translate: "which ought to have a voice in showing either favour or severity"; but this was contrary to fact, as is shown by the remark of the soldiers, novum plane, etc.

26. Responsum est a contione, mandata Clementi centurioni quae perferret. Is orditur de missione a sedecim annis, de praemiis finitae militiae, ut denarius diurnum stipendium foret, ne veterani sub vexillo haberentur. Ad ea Drusus cum arbitrium senatus et patris obtenderet, clamore turbatur. Cur venisset neque augendis militum stipendiis neque adlevandis laboribus, denique nulla bene faciendi licentia? filios familiarum. By Roman law an unemancipated son, however old he might be, was entirely in manu patris (IV. 16, N.). Tiberius had carefully abstained from exercising any independent authority during the life of Augustus.

13. dominis. An odious term in this generation, implying the relation of master and slave. Augustus and Tiberius carefully avoided it.

27. 2. occurreret. Indefinite frequency (Int. 45).

11. in sapientiam. “To wise ends.”

13. bonis artibus. “By honourable means.”

14. vigiliis, stationibus, custodiis portarum. The first were night watchmen who patrolled the ramparts; the second were pickets; the third, guardsmen.

18. pro. “Instead of.” Livia belonged to the Drusi, and her first husband was a Claudius Nero.

20. novissimi in culpam. Clemens naturally addresses the least refractory soldiers. At least, he pretends that he does not consider his audience very guilty.

Et Drusus non exspectato legatorum regressu, quia praesentia 15 satis considerant, in urbem rediit.

31. Isdem ferme diebus isdem causis Germanicae legiones turbatae, quanto plures, tanto violentius, et magna spe fore ut Germanicus Caesar imperium alterius pati nequiret daretque se legionibus vi sua cuncta tracturis. Duo apud ripam Rheni

12. promptum ad asperiora. Compare § 76 and IV. 3. Drusus was especially fond of gladiators, and was nicknamed Castor from his pugilistic propensities.

14. intra tabernaculum. So Dio Cassius.

15. extra vallum. Without the decumangate (§ 66, N.) at the back of the camp, where executions generally took place. So, at Rome, condemned malefactors were led without the gate (II. 32, N.).

30. 6. vix tutari signa. The standards were almost overthrown by the wind,—an evil omen which had foreshadowed the defeat of Crassus in Parthia (Florus. III. 16). The executions took place during this storm, according to Dio Cassius.

7. frustra. "Without good reason."

10. piaculo. "Their sin."

11. nonanus. Sc. miles.

31. 2. plures. Eight; the chief army of the empire.

Germanicum, agendo Galliarum censui tum intentum. Sed quibus Silius moderabatur, mente ambigua fortunam seditionis alienae speculabantur: inferioris exercitus miles in rabiem prolapsus est, orto ab unetvicesimanis quintanisque initio, 10 et tractis prima quoque ac vicesima legionibus: nam isdem aestivis in finibus Ubiorum habebantur per otium aut levia munia. Igitur audito fine Augusti vernacula multitudo nuper acto in urbe dilectu, lasciviae sueta, laborum intolerans, implere ceterorum rudes animos: venisse tempus quo veterani maturam 15 missionem, iuvenes largiora stipendia, cuncti modum miseriarum exposcerent saevitiamque centurionum ulciscerentur. Non unus haec, ut Pannonicas inter legiones Percennius, nec apud trepidas militum aures, alios validiores exercitus respicientium, sed multa seditionis ora vocesque: sua in manu sitam rem Romanam, 20 suis victoriis augeri rem publicam, in suum cognomentum adscisci imperatores.

32. Nec legatus obviam ibat: quippe plurium vaecordia constantiam exemerat. Repente lymphati destrictis gladiis in centuriones invadunt: ea vetustissima militaribus odiis materies et saeviendi principium. Prostratos verberibus mulcant, sexageni singulos, ut numerum centurionum adaequarent: tum 5 convulsos laniatosque et partim exanimos ante vallum aut in amnem Rhenum proiciunt. Septimius cum perfugisset ad tribunal pedibusque Caecinae advolveretur, eo usque flagitatus est, donec ad exitium dederetur. Cassius Chaerea, mox caede Gai Caesaris memoriam apud posteros adeptus, tum adulescens 10 et animi ferox, inter obstantes et armatos ferro viam patefecit.

censui. Julius Caesar forced a tribute of £330,000 from the Gauls. Augustus first taxed them according to their numbers and property, having completed, in B.C. 19, a statistical survey of the whole empire, begun by Julius Caesar. A new valuation of property was made from time to time, and the duty was entrusted to men of the highest rank.

13. vernacula. After the disaster of Varus, five years before, Augustus had bought up a number of slaves, of whom he organised the first legion for the defence of the Rhine (§ 42, N.).

21. suum cognomentum. Drusus Sr.

and his posterity (Germanicus and Claudius) received the title Germanicus by decree of the senate. Tiberius also used it, but less frequently.

8. tribunal. § 18, N.

Non tribunus ultra, non castrorum praefectus ius obtinuit :

33. Interea Germanico per Gallias, ut diximus, census pinam in matrimonio pluresque ex ea liberos habebat, ipse

Quippe Drusi magna apud populum Romanum memoria, credebaturque, si rerum potitus foret, libertatem redditurus ; unde in Germanicum favor et spes eadem. Nam iuveni civile ingenium,

Liviae in Agrippinam stimulis, atque ipsa Agrippina paulo commotior, nisi quod castitate et mariti amore quamvis indomitum animum in bonum vertebat.

34. Sed Germanicus quanto summae spei propior, tanto impensius pro Tiberio niti, seque et proximos et Belgarum civi-tates in verba eius adigit. Dehinc audito legionum tumultu raptim profectus obvias extra castra habuit, deiectis in terram

33. 2. accipienti. Because the census reports were handed in to him.

3. liberos. Nero, Drusus, Caius (Caligula). Agrippina, Drusilla, and Julia, were born afterwards.

5. patruī. The word patruus (father's brother) is used by the Romans with almost as odious a sense as noverca. Horace says, "Ne mihi patruus sis" (Don't talk to me like a Dutch uncle). Germanicus always speaks of himself as the son of Tiberius, on account of his adoption (§ 3).

acriores, quia iniquae :—

"Forgiveness to the injured doth belong,
But they ne'er pardon who have done the wrong."

7. libertatem redditurus. "That he would have restored the republic." According to Suetonius, Tiberius brought his more popular brother into disfavour with Augustus, and even into danger, by disclosing these plans ; and there was a tradition that Drusus really died of poison secretly administered (II. 82).

10. obscuris. "Hypocritical" (§ 10, N.).

novercalibus. The step-daughter, Julia, was dying in banishment, and Livia transferred her resentment to the grand-daughter.

trorum quaeruntur. Atrocissimus veteranorum clamor oriebatur, qui tricena aut supra stipendia numerantes, mederetur fessis, neque inopem requiem orabant. Fuere etiam qui legatam a divo Augusto pecuniam reposcerent, faustis in Germanicum

Tum vero, quasi scelere contaminaretur, praeceps tribunali desiluit. Opposuerunt abeunti arma, minitantes, ni regreder- 15

The Gauls and Germans in the army took no part in the mutiny. Auxilia were organised in cohorts, not legions; were commanded by officers called praefecti (usually their own chiefs); and were armed in national fashion (XII. 35, N.). They formed a part of the regular army, and their numbers were usually equal to those of the legions to which they were attached. The socii (I. 56; XII. 29, 49; XV. 3), called lecta auxilia (XII. 29), were provincial militia, only called out in case of danger.

vicesima, veteranique nuper missi sub vexillo hiemabant.

 N. Stabat Drusus.

10. muliebre, etc. "The pitiful band of women."

13. qui manebant. Germanicus and his staff.

41. 2. in urbe victa. The weeping women remind them of a sacked city.

3. progrediuntur contuberniis.
 Harkness, 425, 3, 4.

quis ille—sonus. Int. 19.

4. triste. Used as a noun with the adjective form quod. So Vergil says, Triste lupus stabulis.

5. nihil uxoris. "Nothing that became."

6. externae fidei. Genitive of quality, with homines understood.

et miseratio et patris Agrippae, Augusti avi memoria, socer Drusus, ipsa insigni fecunditate, praeclara pudicitia ; iam infans in castris genitus, in contubernio legionum eductus, quem militari vocabulo Caligulam appellabant, quia plerumque ad concilianda vulgi studia eo tegmine pedum induebatur. Sed nihil aequae flexit quam invidia in Treveros : orant obsistunt, rediret maneret, pars Agrippinae occursantes, plurimi ad Germanicum regressi. Isque ut erat recens dolore et ira, apud circumfusus ita coepit.

42. "Non mihi uxor aut filius patre et re publica cariores sunt, sed illum quidem sua maiestas, imperium Romanum ceteri exercitus defendent. Coniugem et liberos meos, quos pro gloria vestra libens ad exitium offerrem, nunc procul a furentibus summoveo, ut quidquid istud sceleris imminet, meo tantum sanguine pietur, neve occisus Augusti pronepos, interfecta Tiberii nurus nocentiores vos faciat. Quid enim per hos dies inausum intemeratumve vobis ? quod nomen huic coetui dabo ? militesne appellem, qui filium imperatoris vestri vallo et armis circum-sedistis ? an cives, quibus tam proiecta senatus auctoritas ? hostium quoque ius et sacra legationis et fas gentium rupistis. Divus Iulius seditionem exercitus verbo uno compescuit, Quirites vocando qui sacramentum eius detrectabant : divus Augustus vultu et aspectu Actiacas legiones exterruit : nos ut nondum eosdem, ita ex illis ortos si Hispaniae Syriaeve miles aspernaretur, tamen mirum et indignum erat. 8. fecunditate. § 33, N. Augustus had commended Agrippina as an example to the licentious and childless Romans of his time.

9. in castris genitus. He was really born at Antium, but afterwards fostered this idea, which was popular with the army.

10. Caligulam. A diminutive from caliga, the hob-nailed shoe of a common soldier. Niebuhr calls it a nickname unworthy of a dignified historian, but uses it himself.

14. dolore. Sc. ab. Cf. IV. 52, N. recens praetura.

42. 3. liberos. Caligula, Drusus, and Nero were at Rome, which Tacitus perhaps forgets.

5. istud. "That mad wickedness of yours."

9. vallo. The soldiers kept the camp gates.

12. seditionem. The tenth legion mutinied during the African war. Julius addressed them as Quirites (citizens—bourgeois) instead of commilitones, upon which they cried that they were his soldiers, and would follow him wherever he pleased. After the battle of Actium some of the troops mutinied at Brundisium, but Augustus quelled them.

14. vultu et aspectu. The majesty and calmness of Augustus were so great that a mountain guide, who had plotted to cast him from a precipice during the passage of the Alps, declared that he had been unable to harm so great a man.

15. ex illis ortos. Grand-nephew of Augustus, as Augustus was of Julius ; not to count adoptions.

Hispaniae Syriaeve miles. To whom he was personally unknown.

4. consci. With dative and genitive. Harkness, 399, 6.

9. tua—imago. "The memory of thee." Lipsius supposed that an image of Drusus Sr. stood among the ensigns (§ 18, N.), and that Germanicus pointed to it.

10. gloria. "Honour."

12. alla—ora. The clever peroration allows everyone to cast his lot with the general by turning against the ringleaders.

44. 2. puniret. Int. 42.

5. cetera. The punishment of the guilty.

6. vinctos. Int. 16.

7. legatum. Julius Cæsar first appointed a legatus over each legion; Augustus retained them. Military employments in the Roman system were interpolated in civil service at specified periods. A man poenas de singulis in hunc modum exercuit. Stabant pro contione legiones dstrictis gladiis; reus in suggestu per tri-bunum ostendebatur: si nocentem adclamaverant, praeceps 10 datus trucidabatur. Et gaudebat caedibus miles, tamquam semet absolveret; nec Caesar arcebat, quando nullo ipsius iussu penes eosdem saevitia facti et invidia erat. Secuti exemplum veterani haud multo post in Raetiam mittuntur, specie defendendae provinciae ob imminentis Suebos, ceterum ut avellerentur 15

 peratore nomen, ordinem, patriam, numerum stipendiorum, quae strenue in praeliis fecisset, et cui erant dona militaria, edebat.
 Si tribuni, si legio industriam innocentiamque adprobaverant, 20 objectavissent, solvebatur militia.

 primi seditionem coeptaverant: atrocissimum quodque facinus horum manibus patratum; nec poena commilitonum exterriti 5 nec paenitentia conversi iras retinebant. Igitur Caesar arma classem socios demittere Rheno parat, si imperium detrectetur, bello certaturus.

was tribunus militum (§ 6, N.), before his quaestorship (III. 29, N.), and legatus legionis between his praetorship and consulship. Under peculiar circumstances the position was sometimes held immediately before a praetorship. It was in the emperor's gift.

8. pro contione. "Before the tribunal" (§§ 18, 22, NN.).

14. defendendae provinciae. The regular duty of the veterans (§ 17, N.).

15. ceterum. "But in reality." Int. 9.

17. Centurionatum. A review and election of centurions.

18. ordinem. Centurions were gradually advanced until they became primipili (§ 29, N.).

19. dona militaria. The torques (gold collar); phalerae (horse trappings); hasta

4. cunctatione ficta. § 11.

5. duorum adulescentium. Germanicus was twenty-nine years old; Drusus about the same age (his mother was divorced from Tiberius B.C. 11).

8. munificentiae summum. The feudal lawyers called the king the fount or source of honours and possessions.

9. totiens in Germanias. He advanced on three occasions as far as Ravenna, Milan, and Aquileia, respectively.

10. vigentem annis. 56 years.

47. 1. immotum. Verg. Æn. IV. 15—“Si mihi non animo fixum immotumque sederet.” Vergil was evidently a favourite author with Tacitus, who often repeats his expressions, consciously or unconsciously.

2. caput rerum. Rome.

5. quos for utros. A rare liberty.

6. ac ne. Supply dubitabat before anteferret, and metuebat before ne incenderentur.

pariter. Both at the same time.

11. iturus. Paullo-post future (II. 35, N.).

12. naves. He might go by ship to Aquileia, on the way to Pannonia, or to Massilia, on the way to the Rhine.

13. vulgum. Tacitus frequently treats this word as masculine.

48. 3. Caecinam. He had led the 1st and 20th legions to Cologne (§ 37), and, after the arrival of Germanicus there, had been sent down to Vetera (Xanten).

5. aquiliferis signiferisque. § 18, N.

Tunc signo inter se dato inrumpunt contubernia, trucidant ignaros, nullo nisi consciis noscente quod caedis initium, quis finis.

49. Diversa omnium, quae umquam accidere, civilium armorum facies. Non proelio, non adversis e castris, sed isdem e cubilibus, quos simul vescentis dies, simul quietos nox habuerat, discedunt in partes, ingerunt tela. Clamor vulnera sanguis palam, causa in occulto; cetera fors regit. Et quidam bonorum 5 caesi, postquam intellecto in quos saeviretur, pessimi quoque arma rapuerant. Neque legatus aut tribunus moderator adfuit: permissa vulgo licentia atque ultio et satietas. socias cohortis. The auxilia (§ 36, N.).

7. incautum. "Unguarded."

12. vicos Marsorum. Tacitus describes the straggling villages of the Germans (Germ. § 16); their fondness for beer (Germ. § 23).

13. stationes. § 28, N.

15. ne pax quidem. They were stupid with drink, not peaceful.

51. 2. cuneos. "Columns"; not of necessity wedge-shaped.

3. Non sexus, non aetas. According to Roman maxims all was fair in war, especially with barbarians. The troops were bent on revenging the massacre of Varus and his legions.

5. templum. A sacred grove with images and altars (Germ. § 9).

9. itineri. Dative of end. Supply paratus.

13. porrigeretur. In long files through the forest paths.

15. leves cohortes. The auxilia, with their light native equipment (§ 36, N.), were exposed to the brunt of the fight by the regular Roman policy.

16. illud. "That they had been wishing."

gusto cum insectatione Tiberii scripsit a Graccho compositae credebantur. Igitur amotus Cercinam, Africi maris insulam, 15

52. 2. quod—quaesivisset. Sc. Germanicus. The clause is curiously co-ordinated with the ablative gloria.

4. rettulit. He reported the measures to the senate that they might confirm the action taken; a mere affectation, as the emperor had exclusive control of the army.

5. magis, etc. "Too highly coloured for anyone to believe."

7. intentior. "More to the purpose." Velleius Paterculus, reflecting the emperor's views, says: "Quo quidem tempore, ut pleraque ignave Germanicus, ita Drusus . . . prisca antiquaque severitate usus," etc.

9. exercitus. The legions, regarded as separate corps.

53. 3. Reginorum. The Latin form for Rheginorum, hence distinguished by the clause qui—accolunt, from the inhabitants of Regium Lepidi in Cisalpine Gaul.

5. ut inparem. "As her inferior." As mother of the heirs-apparent, Caius and Lucius, she aspired to the position of queen mother, like Livia, whose jealousy caused her ruin.

8. peremit. Sc. Tiberius.

9. (Tl.) Sempronium Gracchum.

10. prave facundus. As a lawyer he undertook bad cases, and whitewashed black characters.

12. contumacia, etc. "By arousing her defiance and hate against."

21. L. (Nonio) Asprenate.

54. 1. sodalium. After this, many emperors received divine honour at their deaths, and colleges of priests.

3. sodales Titios. Tacitus here corrects a former statement (Histt. II. 95), that Romulus instituted the Titii after the death of his colleague. The Medicean MS. gives Tattios, but is opposed to inscriptions.

5. Claudius (Drusus Caesar).

6. histrionum. Pantomimes, who represented a mythological story by dancing and gesticulation. Dio calls them ὀρχηστῆραι, and says that they struck for higher wages. The rival schools of pantomimes founded by Bathyllus and Pylades each had backers, and their factions produced frequent riots (§ 16, N.).

9. misceri. Middle voice.

10. molliter habitum. By the desire of Augustus, who wished to wean them from politics by panem et circenses.

55. 1. decernitur—triumphus. He enjoyed it two years later.

4. praecepit. "Anticipated."

dissidere. "Were divided between." Rare use of the present infinitive after spes.

10. crimina et innoxios discerneret. A zeugma. "Examine the charges and pardon the innocent" (Int. 56).

11. consensu gentis. A German chieftain was appointed from certain royal families, being chosen from among his kinsmen by the tribe for his personal qualifications. He enjoyed considerable power in his personal relations, but in national matters was obliged to yield to the will of an assembly of warriors.

13. filiam. Thusnelda or Thursinhilda. inimici soceri. There was a feud be-Germaniae. The plural here and in other cases does not refer to the Roman provinces of Upper and Lower Germany alone, but to the various tribes.

8. aram Ubiorum. It was the regular policy of Rome to establish the worship of its princes in newly won provinces. Augustus was honoured by altars at Lyons, Tarragona, and Cologne, and Claudius had a temple at Colchester in England. The neighbouring chiefs were appointed priests at these altars, and were encouraged by an appearance of honour to acts of extravagant loyalty. Augustus, conceding the policy of thus appealing to barbarous minds, would allow the worship, which he utterly refused in the city, to be offered in the provinces only to the joint honour of himself and Rome. Segimund here expresses his rejection of foreign allegiance by casting off his priestly dress.

membra, hastae ingentes ad vulnera facienda quamvis procul. Nox demum inclinantis iam legiones adversae pugnae exemit. Germani ob prospera indefessi, ne tum quidem sumpta quiete, quantum aquarum circum surgentibus iugis oritur vertere in 10 subiecta, mersaque humo et obruto quod effectum operis duplicatus militi labor. Quadragesimum id stipendium Caecina parendi aut imperitandi habebat, secundarum ambiguarumque rerum sciens eoque interritus. Igitur futura volvens non aliud repperit quam ut hostem silvis coerceret, donec saucii quan- 15 tumque gravioris agminis anteirent; nam medio montium et paludum porrigebatur planities, quae tenuem aciem pateretur. Deliguntur legiones quinta dextro lateri, unetvicesima in laevum, primani ducendum ad agmen, vicesimanus adversum secuturos. 20

65. Nox per diversa inquires, cum barbari festis epulis, laeto cantu aut truci sonore subiecta vallium ac resultantis saltus complerent, apud Romanos invalidi ignes, interruptae voces, atque ipsi passim adiacerent vallo, oberrarent tentoriis, insomnes magis quam pervigiles. Ducemque terruit dira quies : 5 nam Quintilium Varum sanguine oblitum et paludibus emersum cernere et audire visus est velut vocantem, non tamen obsecutus et manum intendentis reppulisse. Coepta luce missae in latera legiones, metu an contumacia, locum deseruere, capto propere campo umentia ultra. Neque tamen Arminius quamquam 10 libero incursu statim prorupit : sed ut haesere caeno fossisque impedimenta, turbati circum milites, incertus signorum ordo, utque tali in tempore sibi quisque properus et lentae adversum imperia aures, inrumpere Germanos iubet, clamitans “en Varus eodemque iterum fato vinctae legiones!” simul haec et cum 15 delectis scindit agmen equisque maxime vulnera ingerit. adversis. Equos dehinc, orsus a suis, legatorum tribunorumque nulla ambitione fortissimo cuique bellatori tradit, ut hi, mox 10 pedes in hostem invaderent.

68. Haud minus inquires Germanus spe, cupidine et diversis ducum sententiis agebat, Arminio sinerent egredi egressosque rursum per umida et inpedita circumvenirent suadente, atrociora Inguiomero et laeta barbaris, ut vallum armis ambirent: promptam expugnationem, plures captivos, incorruptam praedam 5 fore. Igitur orta die proruunt fossas, iniciunt crates, summa valli prensant, raro super milite et quasi ob metum defixo. Postquam haesere munimentis, datur cohortibus signum cornuaque ac tubae concinuere. Exim clamore et impetu tergis Germanorum circumfunduntur, exprobrantes non hic silvas nec 10 paludes, sed aequis locis aequos deos. Hosti facile excidium et paucos ac semermos cogitanti sonus tubarum, fulgor armorum quanto inopina, tanto maiora offunduntur, cadebantque, ut rebus secundis avidi, ita adversis incauti. Arminius integer Inguiomerus post grave vulnus pugnam deseruere: vulgus 15 trucidatum est, donec ira et dies permansit. Nocte demum reversae legiones, quamvis plus vulnerum, eadem ciborum egestas fatigaret, vim sanitatem copias, cuncta in victoria habuere.

Sed femina ingens animi munia ducis per eos dies induit, militibusque, ut quis inops aut saucius, vestem 5 et fomenta dilargita est. Tradit C. Plinius, Germanicorum bellorum scriptor, stetisse apud principium pontis, laudes et grates reversis legionibus habentem. 70. At Germanicus legionum, quas navibus vexerat, secundam et quartam decumam itinere terrestri P. Vitellio ducendas tradit, quo levior classis vadoso mari innaret vel reciproco sideret. Vitellius primum iter sicca humo aut modice adlabente aestu
 5 quietum habuit: mox impulsu aquilonis, simul sidere aequinoctii, quo maxime tumescit Oceanus, rapi agique agmen. Et opplebantur terrae: eadem freto litori campis facies, neque discerni poterant incerta ab solidis, brevia a profundis. Sternuntur fluctibus, hauriuntur gurgitibus; iumenta, sarcinae, 10 corpora exanima interfluunt, occursant. Permiscentur inter se manipuli, modo pectore modo ore tenus exstantes, aliquando subtracto solo disiecti aut obruti. Non vox et mutui hortatus iuvabant adversante unda; nihil strenuus ab ignavo, sapiens ab imprudenti, consilia a casu differre: cuncta pari violentia
 15 involvebantur. Tandem Vitellius in editiora enisus eodem agmen subduxit. Pernoctavere sine utensilibus, sine igni, magna pars nudo aut mulcato corpore, haud minus miserabiles quam quos hostis circumsidet: quippe illic etiam honestae mortis usus, his inglorium exitium. Lux reddidit terram,

The autumn flood-tides are unusually high on the Dutch coast, and the shoals make navigation difficult. Lipsius says pathetically that he has been aground there, and knows it. Drusus Sr. was stranded near the mouth of the Ems.

Ceterum ad supplenda exercitus damna certavere Galliae Hispaniae Italia, quod cuique promptum, arma equos aurum offerentes. Quorum laudato studio Germanicus, armis modo et equis ad bellum sumptis, propria pecunia militem iuvit. Utque cladis memoriam etiam comitate leniret, circumire saucios, facta singulorum extollere; vulnera intuens alium spe, alium gloria, cunctos adloquio et cura sibi et proelio firmabat.

72. Decreta eo anno triumphalia insignia A. Caecinae, L. Apronio, C. Silio ob res cum Germanico gestas. Nomen patris patriae Tiberius, a populo saepius ingestum, repudiavit; neque in acta sua iurari quamquam censente senatu permisit, cuncta mortalium incerta, quantoque plus adeptus foret, tanto se magis in lubrico dictitans. Non tamen ideo faciebat fidem civilis animi; nam legem maiestatis reduxerat, cui nomen apud veteres idem, sed alia in iudicium veniebant, si quis proditione exercitum aut plebem seditionibus, denique male gesta re publica maiestatem populi Romani minuisset: facta arguebantur, dicta inpune erant. Primus Augustus cognitionem de famosis libellis specie legis eius tractavit, commotus Cassii Severi libidine, qua viros feminasque inlustres procacibus scriptis diffamaverat; mox Tiberius, consultante Pompeio Macro praetore, an iudicia maiestatis redderentur, exercendas leges esse respondit. Hunc guished from Siegmer, the father of Arminius, mentioned § 55, N.

9. circumire saucios. Military hospitals are mentioned by Hyginus in the time of Trajan. Inscriptions record surgeons of legions and ships. Seneca and Celsus refer to public hospitals in cities.

72. 1. triumphalia insignia. These were a crown and patera of gold, an ivory sceptre, a curule chair, a gown of purple and embroidered tunic, a laureate statue (usually placed in a triumphal chariot), and the triumphal name (IV. 26, N.). The dress was displayed on the occasion of public games. After this time only members of the imperial family enjoyed regular triumphs (II. 18, N.).

2. patris patriae. The title is never found on the coins of Tiberius. Suetonius gives his reasons, Tib. 6, 7.

4. in acta sua iurari. In 42 B.C. the triumvirs swore to maintain the decrees of Julius Caesar. In 24 the senate ratified the measures of Augustus by an oath, which was repeated every year on 1st January. It became the custom for all statutes of previous emperors to be recited on that day, and for the senate to swear to maintain them. It was a tedious business.

10. dicta inpune erant. Yet Sulla had punished libels.

14. an—redderentur. "If he should admit impeachments for treason." Majestas laesa, or simply majestas, was the name for violation of the dignity of the republic, which, under the empire, was represented by the person of the emperor. As power was centralized, treason naturally became a more frequent offence, and many apparently indifferent actions were branded with this name. The legal penalty was deportatio (IV. 31, N.), which was increased to death by a custom which arose about this time (III. 50, N.).

16. carmina. Examples are given by Suetonius, Tib. § 59, e.g.— “Asper et immitis: breviter vis omnia dicam?

Dispeream si te mater amare potest.”

73. 1. modicis. With a fortune of £3300. Distinguished by Augustus from the Equites illustres, who had a senatorial fortune of £9900, and a right to wear the praetexta (§ 3, N.).

3. dein repressum sit. Tiberius entertained the charges of treason as lawful, but at first spared the accused.

5. per omnes domos. “From house to house.” The cultores formed a banqueting club under the cover of Augustus’s name.

10. consulibus. The presiding officers (II. 33, N.) of the senate, which, after the time of Augustus, had cognisance of the cases of senators and their families, and of impeachments for treason and embezzlement (majestas, § 74, N., and repetundae, § 74, N.). Other cases came before the praetor’s tribunal.

12. mater sua—sacrasset. They were scenic representations in the palace (hence called Ludi Palatini), and lasted three days.

14. alia numinum simulacra. Tertullian describes auctions of idols, and says that it was more dangerous to take the name of an emperor than of a god in vain. Simulacrum is the representation of an imaginary being; imago the copy of an actual object.

74. 1. praetorem Bithyniae. In 27 B.C. Augustus divided the provinces into two classes, and after certain changes and additions the list stood as follows in the time of Tiberius:—The first class, governed by the senate through proconsuls and praetors, comprised Hispania Baetica, Gallia Narbonensis, Achaia, Macedonia, Asia, Bithynia and Pontus, Cyprus, Africa, Cyrene and Crete; the second class, governed by the emperor through his legati (who were of consular or praetorian rank, according to the importance of the province), or by equestrian procurators (IV. 15, N.), were Lusitania, Hispania Tarraconensis, Gallia Lugdunensis, Gallia Belgica, Aquitania, the Gersubscribente Romano Hispone: qui formam vitae iniit, quam postea celebrem miseriae temporum et audaciae hominum fecerunt. Nam egens, ignotus, inquires, dum occultis libellis saevitiae principis adrepi, mox clarissimo cuique periculum facessit, potentiam apud unum, odium apud omnis adeptus, dedit exemplum, quod secuti ex pauperibus divites, ex contemptis metuendi perniciem aliis ac postremum sibi invenere. Sed Marcellum insimulabat sinistros de Tiberio sermones habuisse, inevitabile crimen, cum ex moribus principis foedissima quaeque deligeret accusator obiectaretque reo. Nam quia vera erant, etiam dicta credebantur. Addidit Hispo statuam Marcelli altius quam Caesarum sitam, et alia in statua amputato capite Augusti effigiem Tiberii inditam. Ad quod exarsit adeo, ut rupta taciturnitate proclamaret se quoque in ea causa laturum sententiam palam et iuratum, quo ceteris eadem necessitas fieret. Manebant etiam tum vestigia morientis libertatis. Igitur Cn. Piso “quo” inquit “loco censebis, Caesar? si primus, habebo quod sequar: si post omnis, vereor ne imprudens dissentiam.” Permotus his, quantoque incautius efferverat, paenitentia patiens tulit absolvi reum criminibus maiestatis: de pecuniis repetundis ad reciperatores itum est.

manies, Rhaetia, Vindelicia, Noricum, Pannonia, Illyricum, Moesia, Cilicia, Syria, Commagene, Egypt. All governors of senatorial provinces were styled proconsuls by courtesy, but Tacitus here calls Marcellus a praetor to explain his actual rank. On the other hand, the emperor's legati were styled propraetors, even when of consular rank. The emperor claimed a proconsulare imperium (§ 14, N.) over all provinces.

2. quaestor ipsius. It was a maxim of early times that a governor's subordinate could not be his accuser, on account of the fiduciary relations existing between them. Cicero showed the evils of an opposite practice by his Divinatio in Q. Caecilium.

3. subscribente. “Undertaking the case.”

qui—iniit. Caepio, not Romanus.

9. postremum sibi. One delator attacked another. After the death of Nero the senate turned against them.

13. Addidit Hispo. The lawyer inserted a charge which enabled the emperor to avenge himself under a pretence of filial piety.

17. palam et iuratum. “By word of mouth and under oath.” The oath was taken in solemn cases. If the emperor pronounced his opinion first and openly, he would oblige all who followed to concur with him, as Piso insinuates. If the vote were taken by division or ballot, senators could follow their own opinion. —Suet. Tib. 31.

19. Cn. (Calpurnius) Piso.

quo—loco. As princeps (§ 1, N.) the emperor pronounced his vote before all others (II. 33, N.), but this prerogative was often waived.

22. tulit. Sc. sententiam. “He voted.”

23. pecuniis repetundis. “Monies to be sought back” was the legal expression for embezzlement or extortion by provincial magistrates. The earliest law on the subject was a plebiscitum proposed in B.C. 149, by L. Calpurnius Piso, then tribune of the people (XV. 20). According to the Lex Julia, passed in Julius Caesar's first consulship, B.C. 59, the punishment was a fine and political infamy. Under the empire it was punished by exile (relegatio), and sometimes by the recipitatores. A commission of three or five persons appointed by the senate to decide civil cases. The criminal charge is dropped. Suetonius, who confuses the two charges, says that Marcellus was condemned in damages.

75. 2. tribunalis. At the end of the rectangular basilica or court room was the raised tribunal, in a semicircular recess. The praetor's curule chair stood in the centre, and around him (ad cornua) were arranged the judices, and the advocati or influential friends of the accused, who aided him by their presence.

3. ambitum. XV. 20, N.

4. veritati = justitiae. He gave his unlawful influence on the right side.

6. labefactas aedis suas. The lateral pressure of the flint road and the columns of the aqueduct had disturbed the foundations of the house.

7. aerarii praetoribus. XIII. 29, N.

8. tribuit. From the fiscus (§ 15, N.).

10. veniam ordinis. The senatorial fortune was fixed by Augustus at £9900. Those who fell below it could be removed by the censors, and Propertius wished to avoid disgrace.

11. pateras. He had not inherited enough from his father.

13. in iis etiam quae rite faceret acerbis. "The tender mercies of the wicked are cruel." Seneca de Beneficiis (II. 7) says: "Aliquid Tiberius consecutus est. Puto noluit plures esse, qui idem rogaturi concurrerent."

76. 3. strages. Buildings were undermined, and the dampness occasioned disease.

libri Sibullini. Burned in the Marsian war (B.C. 90), and supplied by collections from the East. They were placed in golden coffers under the pedestal of the Palatine Apollo, and consulted by the quindecimviri by vote of the senate on important occasions. Tiberius was superstitious (VI. 21), and feared that evil prophecies of his reign might be found. He displayed his dread of fate by forbidding the haruspices to be consulted in private, and by an attempt to put an end to the oracles in the vicinity of Rome. He was checked by an alleged miracle, in the case of the sortes Praenestinae (Suet. Tib. 63). The quindecimviri were priests of Apollo, and each one kept in his house a tripod consecrated to that god. They had charge of his festivals, and particularly of the ludi saeculares.

7. proconsulari imperio. § 74, N. The proconsuls of the senate were chosen by lot, changed every year, and subject only to a tedious judicium repetundarum. The legates of the emperor were carefully selected, held office during good behaviour, and were immediately responsible to the sovereign. The vices of Tiberius were felt by the senate, but his firm rule was a blessing to the provinces which were under his control. He said it became a good shepherd to shear his sheep—not flay them.

8. Germanici fratris. The honest affection of Drusus for Germanicus, and his freedom from jealousy, were his best characteristics. On his cruel temper, see § 29, N.

11. abstinuerit. Aorist perfect.

12. tristitia ingenii. The avoidance of the amphitheatre was a charge against the early Christians, as showing an odium humani generis (XV. 44, N.).

9. divus Augustus. Augustus, desiring to quiet the people with amusements, had granted certain immunities to actors (who were slaves or freedmen); but they could be exiled or imprisoned.

78. 1. Templum—Augusto. An altar had been erected at Tarraco, to the honour of Rome and Augustus (§ 57, N.), during the lifetime of the latter. The citizens sent an embassy to him, to announce that a young palm tree had sprouted on the altar. "It shows," said the emperor, "how often you kindle it." Now the province erected a temple to the sole honour of Augustus.

4. militare aerarium. Established by Augustus, A. D. 6. It was supplied by the centesima rerum venalium and the vicesima hereditatum (taxes of one per cent on all sales, and five per cent on legacies), imposed on Roman citizens who had previously been tax-free, all burdens falling on the provinces. It was instituted by Augustus to provide retiring pensions for veterans, which in his time first became a serious burden, the soldiers of the civil wars having been satisfied by confiscations. The aerarium militare was under the charge of three praefecti of praetorian rank, who served for three years each.

5. simul. "Even with that."

6. vicesimo militiae anno. See § 17, and NN.

7. sedecim stipendiorum finem. "A retiring bounty after sixteen campaigns."

79. 1. Arruntio et Ateio. § 76.

2. verterentur = avertentur.

3. municipiorum et coloniarum. A municipium enjoyed local self-government; the citizens of coloniae had a vote at Rome as well, but these early distinctions were obliterated by the extension of the franchise and the decline of the comitia. See XIII. 48, N.

6. Interamna. Now Terni, on the Nar (Nera), a few miles below the falls of Terni, where the waters of Lake Velinus flow into the Nar through an emissary constructed by Curius Dentatus. Reate is on Lake Velinus. The valleys of Umbria were celebrated for their cattle.

7. in rivos diductus. By a system of irrigation similar to that pursued with the waters of the Alban lake. But the snow-fed Nar would submerge a whole district.

12. sociorum. A word loosely used, sacra et lucos et aras patriis amnibus dicaverint: quin ipsum Tiberim nolle prorsus accolis fluviis orbatum minore gloria fluere. Seu preces coloniarum seu difficultas operum sive 15 superstitio valuit, ut in sententiam Cn. Pisonis concederetur, qui nil mutandum censuerat.

80. Prorogatur Poppaeo Sabino provincia Moesia, additis Achaia ac Macedonia. Id quoque morum Tiberii fuit, continuare imperia ac plerosque ad finem vitae in isdem exercitibus aut iurisdictionibus habere. Causae varie traduntur: alii taedio novae curae semel placita pro aeternis servavisse, quidam 5 invidia, ne plures fruerentur; sunt qui existiment, ut callidum eius ingenium, ita anxium iudicium; neque enim eminentis virtutes sectabatur, et rursum vitia oderat: ex optimis periculum sibi, a pessimis dedecus publicum metuebat. Qua haesitatione postremo eo provectus est, ut mandaverit quibusdam provincias, 10 quos egredi urbe non erat passurus.

81. De comitiis consularibus, quae tum primum illo principe for Roman citizenship had been extended to the peninsula by the Marsian war, and by the broad views of Julius Caesar.

80. 1. (C.) Poppaeo Sabino. He governed his province for twenty-four years, being chosen by Tiberius, says Tacitus, nullam ob eximiam artem, sed quod par negotiis neque supra erat.

3. exercitibus aut iurisdictionibus. The imperial provinces were governed by legati cum imperio (§ 74, N.) when they were exposed to barbarian incursions, and were protected by armies. The more peaceful jurisdictions were under civilians, procuratores cum potestate (IV. 15, N.).

4. causae varie. Suetonius says that he was too lazy to make changes. Tiberius himself said that he avoided change lest too many governors should fatten on the provinces, and told the story of the Flies and the Wounded Man. "He was a delayer of affairs," says Josephus, "if ever there was one." Maecenas (in Dio Cassius) advises Augustus to leave his governors in office between three and five years. "Long enough to know the province, and not long enough to grow too strong."

6. ut callidum, etc. "His judgment was as undecided as his wits were keen." He was unhappy enough to see both sides of a subject, without having the manliness to make up his mind.

11. non erat passurus. "He could not induce himself to let them leave the city." It was characteristic of Tiberius's jealous temper that he dared not employ the best men for his ministers and governors, as Augustus had done, but chose men of moderate capacity like Sabinus. When he was compelled by public opinion to appoint an important noble to a province, he made pretexts to keep him at Rome, and allowed him to govern by lieutenants. It was this moral cowardice and distrust of his own judgment which made Tiberius avoid and ruin his best friend, Germanicus, and finally throw himself in despair into the arms of the infamous Sejanus.

81. 1. De comitiis consularibus. Augustus had appointed consuls for the year after his death, so that the elections are now held for the first time since. All the comitia had been transferred from the people to the senate at the accession of Tiberius, who had held the elections for praetors at that time (§ 15 and N.). Since the alterations introduced by Augustus the consuls who went into office at the beginning of the year, and gave it their name (consules ordinarii), retired on July 1st, and were succeeded by other pairs of consules suffecti (chosen at the same time with the ordinarii). The number of suffect consuls in a year varied at different periods.

 10 aut meritis confiderent : speciosa verbis, re inania aut subdola, quantoque maiore libertatis imagine tegebantur, tanto eruptura ad infensius servitium.

2. deinceps. During the reign of Tiberius.

5. forent = futuri essent. "What kind of officers they would be."

6. ea quoque significatione subtracta. Sometimes he would make no nominations at all ; but it is to be understood that in all cases the emperor made his own desires known to the senate by private agents, and virtually controlled the elections.

fidei popularium. Phraates IV. feared that his sons, if kept at home, might rebel against him. He had himself poisoned his father, murdered his thirty-nine brothers, and was finally poisoned by his illegitimate son Phraataces. 4. Caesar. Augustus. The embassy reached Rome A.D. 4, and Vonones was crowned A.D. 5.

auxitque opibus. Thus Tiberius furnished Tiridates with a retinue (VI. 32). Nero gave £830,000 to Tiridates of Armenia.

5. ut. "As is their way."

7. solium Arsacidarum. Hor. Carm. II. 2—"Redditum Cyri solio Phraaten."

11. raro venatu. Hunting was always the accomplishment of eastern princes, as is shown by the paradisi of the Persians, and by Assyrian sculptures. Parthian kings abstained from hunting and feasting during times of public mourning.

14. anulo clausa. The Romans sealed doors as well as papers. The treasury vaults were guarded in this way, and Juvenal represents a miser sealing his cupboard.

15. ignotae Parthis virtutes. Even his virtues were disliked. The Parthians could not appreciate a prince who kept accounts and made himself accessible to the people.

8. 1. e sanguine. On his mother's side (VI. 42, N.).

2. reparat vires. In the mountains of Media.

3. vacua. Without a king.

7. nobis infensus. He put to death all the Romans in his realm.

10. Tiberio Nerone. He bore this name until he succeeded Augustus and became Tiberius Caesar by adoption. The coronation of Tigranes took place in B.C. 20.

11. liberis. Tigranes III. and Erato. They married each other in oriental fashion.

4. 8. in regnum. "To the throne."

12. promptam ipsis possessionem. "They could easily seize a position without the knowledge of the enemy."

13. maturius incipi. If they marched by land they must wait until the floods of the rivers were over. The climate of ancient Germany, before its forests were cleared, was wet and cold.

6. 1. census Galliarum. I. 31.

2. (A.) Caecina (Severus).

4. breves. Opposed to naves longae, or triremes.

utero = alveo. ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

5. planæ carinæ. Dutch luggers (Lipsius had sailed in them), adapted to the tides and sandbanks of the North Sea (I. 70, N.).

6. gubernacula. An ancient ship was steered by sweeps projecting through rudder holes on each side of the stern. In these boats stem and stern were alike. The rowers could change their seats, and so pull themselves off a sandbank.

7. pontibus stratae. "Decked."

9. citæ. "Propelled"; no stretch of imagination could make them "swift."

7. 7. tumulum—structum. I. 61.

8. Druso. "In honour of Drusus (Sr.)" Probably built by the soldiers at the place where he died, at some distance from the Rhine. Other monuments were erected at Mayence (still extant) and Ravenna. On the use of altars, see I. 14, N.

10. decucurrit. "Marched thrice around it." A regular ceremony at military funerals, which is represented on the base of the Antonine column.

11. novis limitibus. "Earthworks." The aggeres were log roads across the morasses.

8. 2. fossam. Drusus Sr. dug a canal from the old Rhine to the Yssel, which is still navigable, and appears a part of the river. By sailing through the canal, the river, and lake Flevo (now the Zuyder Zee), Germanicus reached the North Sea at a point much further east than the Rhine mouth (see XI. 20, N.).

3. Drusum patrem. He had sailed the North Sea, and beaten a fleet of German canoes (XI. 18, N.) on the Ems.

7. subvexit et transposuit. He would have avoided the tide by going farther, and have escaped the necessity of a bridge. Et has fallen out in the MS. between two ŕ's.

10. aestuaria. Salt marshes covered at high tide.

7. saltibus. Ablative.

9. in orbem. What we should call a hollow square ; troops arranged to repel an attack from several quarters ; distinct from a globus, which was a disorganised group (I. 25, N.).

10. saevitia. "Assault."

12. suffosso equo. I. 65, N. The Romans, though hard pressed in the engagement, maintained their ground on the east of the Weser, and enabled Germanicus to complete his bridge.

12. 2. alias nationes. Natio is a tribe. The Angrivarii, Bructeri, Chamavi, and others, belonged to this Saxon confederation.

3. silvam. I. 59, N. J. Grimm supposed that Hercules was the God Irmin, whose sûl, or pillar, stood on the Bückberg, near Hameln, where remains of a pagan altar have been found. More probably Irmin was a deification of Arminius himself, and the sûl a monument of his victory.

8. incorruptum. "How he could make a fair test."

10. libertorum. IV. 7, N.

12. adstrepere. "When a few begin, the rest join the cry."

13. inter—cibos. Ten soldiers formed a decuria or mess under a decurion, and shared a tent.

13. 1. augurali. A consecrated enclosure (templum) on the right of the praetorium (I. 22, N.), in which the general took the omens. It was provided with an altar, containing sods from the Capitoline hill, which rendered the spot Roman soil (III. 59, N.). This augurale was omitted in the camps of a later period, because legati had no proper auspicia (§ 18, N.).

2. umeros. Greek accusative (Int. 22).

5. per seria per iocos. In contrast to the gloomy and hypocritical Tiberius.

6. perfidos. "Traitors and truce-breakers." Referring to the betrayal of Varus.

9. sestertios centenos. An aureus = 16 shillings. A high bid, but Arminius needed to learn the enemy's plans. The Germans used Roman money; barbarous nations have always been reservoirs of specie, and the Indies drained the Roman coin as they do our own.—Plin. N. H. XII. 18.

13. matrimonia. Int. 2.

14. tertia—vigilia. The four watches of the night (from 6 P.M. to 6 A.M.) were regulated by clepsydrae. The watchmen were called to their posts by the sound of trumpets, and dismissed when the watch was over by the blast of horns. At the beginning of each watch a centurion informed the general in his tent that all was well (XV. 30, N.).

15. pro munimentis. "In defence of"; so pro ripa (§ 9); pro muris (§ 81).

14. 1. quietem. "Vision."

2. operatum. Aorist participle.

sacri = hostiae. The praetexta (I. 3, N.) was worn by priests and augurs. Germanicus was both (I. 62, N.). Augustus boasted that his toga was always woven by Livia and her maids, after the fashion of the primitive Roman household.

8. haberi. "Could they be handled."

11. nervo = corio.

tenuis et fucatas colore tabulas ; primam utcumque aciem hastatam, ceteris praeusta aut brevia tela. Iam corpus ut visu torvum et ad brevem impetum validum, sic nulla vulnerum patientia : sine pudore flagitii, sine cura ducum abire, fugere, 15 pavidos adversis, inter secunda non divini, non humani iuris memores. Si taedio viarum ac maris finem cupiant, hac acie parari : propiorem iam Albim quam Rhenum neque bellum ultra, modo se, patris patruisque vestigia prementem, isdem in terris victorem sisterent. 20

15. Orationem ducis secutus militum ardor, signumque pugnae datum. Nec Arminius aut ceteri Germanorum proceres omittebant suos quisque testari, hos esse Romanos Variani exercitus fugacissimos, qui ne bellum tolerarent, seditionem induerint ; quorum pars onusta vulneribus terga, pars fluctibus 5 et procellis fractos artus infensis rursum hostibus, adversis dis obiciant, nulla boni spe. 12. fucatas colore. "Scuta lectissimis coloribus distinguunt."—Germ. 6. The origin of heraldry.

primam utcumque, etc. "The first line was provided with spears, after a fashion ; the rest had poles burned at the end (enormis hastas), or short pikes" (called frameae in the Germania). Among the North Germans iron was rare and valuable, though the Noricans of the south forged good steel.

15. sine cura ducum. An exaggeration of the barbarian mode of fighting described in the Germania : "Cedere loco, dummodo instes, consilii quam formidinis arbitrantur." Personally they were most loyal to their chiefs, but had never learned discipline.

18. neque bellum ultra. The Suevi, beyond the Elbe, had no quarrel with the Romans.

19. patris patruisque. Drusus Sr. and Tiberius. Drusus reached the Elbe in B.C. 9, and there was warned of his approaching death by a dream. His son seemed to inherit his superstitious disposition (§ 70, N.).

15. 4. fugacissimos. "The greatest cowards." Arminius assumes that the present army consists of the fugitives from the legions of Varus ; and that the mutiny for higher pay in A.D. 14 had been occasioned by their fear of meeting the Germans.

5. onusta vulneribus terga, etc. He says that some ran away the year before, and some were shipwrecked, which was true enough.

16. 2. Idisiaviso. "The meadow of the nymphs," or swan-maidens. The battlefield was probably near Minden, a hundred miles from the sea. The Weser (600 feet broad) was on the west ; hills on the east ; a forest on the south. The Romans marched from the north.

3. ut ripae fluminis. "As the banks of the stream recede, or the spurs of the hills advance."

4. pone tergum. Sc. Germanorum. To the south.

5. pura humo. Clear of thickets; a pine wood.

6. iuga insedere. On the east.

11. equite sagittario. In earlier times the archers were occasional troops; usually Cretan infantry. But the Romans, who always learned from an enemy, had adopted the mounted bowmen of the Parthians (VI. 34, 35, NN.).

13. ut ordo agminis. "To keep the line of march in the line of battle." The auxilia, as usual (I. 51, N.), bore the brunt of the fight. Two praetorian cohorts (I. 24, N.) had been sent from Rome as a guard of honour for Germanicus.

17. 4. octo aquilae. Bald eagles, still found in Germany.

5. advertere. "Attracted the attention."

7. numina. The legions swore by their standards and adored them. They were the idols, or "abomination of desolation," whose presence at Jerusalem was a sign to the Jews.

9. agmina. When flying they were no longer acies.

10. medii inter hos. The German centre is driven into the woods toward the south; the left wing into the plain (by Stertinus, who assailed them from the rear); the Cherusicans are forced from their hills on the right into the place which their allies had held.

passim trucidati. Et plerosque tranare Visurgim conantes iniecta tela aut vis fluminis, postremo moles ruentium et incidentes ripae operuere, quidam turpi fuga in summa arborum 20 nisi ramisque se occultantes admotis sagittariis per ludibrium figebantur, alios prorutae arbores adflixere.

18. Magna ea victoria neque cruenta nobis fuit. Quinta ab hora diei ad noctem caesi hostes decem milia passuum cadaveribus atque armis opplevere, repertis inter spolia eorum catenis, quas in Romanos ut non dubio eventu portaverant. Miles in loco proelii Tiberium imperatorem salutavit struxitque 5 aggerem et in modum tropaeorum arma subscriptis victarum gentium nominibus imposuit.

19. Haud perinde Germanos vulnera, luctus, excidia quam ea species dolore et ira adfecit. Qui modo abire sedibus, trans Albim concedere parabant, pugnam volunt, arma rapiunt; plebes primores, iuventus senes agmen Romanum repente incursant, turbant. Postremo deligunt locum flumine et silvis 5 clausum, arta intus planitie et umida: silvas quoque profunda palus ambibat, nisi quod latus unum Angrivarii lato aggere extulerant, quo a Cheruscis dirimerentur. Hic pedes adstitit: equitem propinquis lucis texere, ut ingressis silvam legionibus a tergo foret. 10

20. Nihil ex his Caesari incognitum: consilia locos, prompta occulta noverat astusque hostium in perniciem ipsis

21. nisi. Nitor, or gnitor, is derived from genu; climbing or swarming up a tree is a primitive meaning.

18. 1. quinta ab hora. The Romans divided the time from sunrise to sunset into twelve hours, whose length varied with that of the day. At the equinox the fifth hour would be 11 A.M.

5. imperatorem salutavit. In the original signification of the word (I. 9, N.). The empire had entirely changed the character of military distinctions. Under the republic a consul took the auspices on the day before a campaign, and might be hailed imperator by his troops, or granted a triumph by the senate. But when Augustus assumed the praenomen of imperator (III. 74, N.), he also assumed sole command of all armies; wars were waged by different generals under his auspices, and as his legati (I. 44, N.). Consequently, they could not enjoy a triumph or be hailed imperator without special permission, which was never given to any outside the imperial family. The empty honour of ornamenta triumphalia (I. 72, N.) was invented to ennoble successful generals.

6. in modum tropaeorum. A Greek custom, adopted by the later Romans.

victarum gentium. § 12, N.

19. 2. ea species. The sight of the monument.

5. locum. It seems that the Romans marched down from a hill to the plain, with a wood in front of them, a river (the Leine or Aller) on one side, and a marsh (extending also behind the wood) on the other. Near the marsh was a dyke protecting a part of the wood; it was the boundary line of the Angrivarii, who lived north of the Cherusci in Brunswick and Hanover.

20. 2. prompta. "Public."

vertebat. Seio Tuberoni legato tradit equitem campumque ; peditum aciem ita instruxit, ut pars aequo in silvam aditu 5 incederet, pars obiectum aggerem eniteretur ; quod arduum sibi, cetera legatis permisit. Quibus plana evenerant, facile inrupere : quis inpugnandus agger, ut si murum succederent, gravibus superne ictibus conflictabantur. Sensit dux inparem comminus pugnam remotisque paulum legionibus funditores 10 libritoresque excutere tela et proturbare hostem iubet. Missae e tormentis hastae, quantoque conspicui magis propugnatores, tanto pluribus vulneribus deiecti. Primus Caesar cum praetoriis cohortibus capto vallo dedit impetum in silvas ; conlato illic gradu certatum. Hostem a tergo palus, Romanos flumen aut 15 montes claudebant : utrisque necessitas in loco, spes in virtute, salus ex victoria.

21. Nec minor Germanis animus, sed genere pugnae et armorum superabantur, cum ingens multitudo artis locis praelongas hastas non protenderet, non colligeret, neque adsultibus et velocitate corporum uteretur, coacta stabile ad proelium ;

 hostium aperiret, inprompto iam Arminio ob continua pericula, sive illum recens acceptum vulnus tardaverat. Quin et Inguimerum, tota volitantem acie, fortuna magis quam virtus 10 deserebat. Et Germanicus quo magis adgnosceretur, detraxerat tegimen capiti orabatque insisterent caedibus : nil opus captivis, solam internicionem gentis finem bello fore. Iamque sero diei subducit ex acie legionem faciendis castris : ceterae ad noctem cruore hostium satiatæ sunt. Equites ambigue certavere.

3. Seio Tuberoni. Took the place of Apronius, who had retired to Rome as a senator (§ 34).

legato. I. 44, N.

5. quod arduum sibi. Supply sumpsit by zeugma from permisit (Int. 56).

7. ut si—succederent. "As though they were assailing."

8. superne and comminus modify nouns.—Madvig, 301, c. 2 (Int. 10).

9. funditores hurled stones from a sling, while libritores threw bullets fastened to a strap.

11. tormentis. XII. 56, N.

21. 2. praelongas hastas. § 14, N.

3. non colligeret. "Nor withdraw them." They were packed in too close a phalanx for individual fighting.

5. insidens capulo manus. "Fitting into the hilt."

6. nuda ora foderet. § 14—"Ora mucronibus quaerent." Germ. 6—"Vix uni alterive cassis aut galea."

8. sive. "Or perhaps."

14. Equites ambigue certavere. The blame of a partial defeat is usually thrown by Roman writers on the auxiliary cavalry. Although Germanicus undoubtedly held the field after these engagements, they produced little effect on a barbarous enemy ; and the Romans were obliged

22. Laudatis pro contione victoribus Caesar congeriem armorum struxit, superbo cum titulo: debellatis inter Rhenum Albimque nationibus exercitum Tiberii Caesaris ea monimenta Marti et Iovi et Augusto sacravisse. De se nihil addidit, metu invidiae an ratus conscientiam facti satis esse. Mox bellum in Ampsivarios Stertinio mandat, ni deditiorem properavissent. Atque illi supplices nihil abnuendo veniam omnium acceperere.

23. Sed aestate iam adulta legionum aliae itinere terrestri in hibernacula remissae; plures Caesar classi inpositas per flumen Amisiam Oceano invexit. Ac primo placidum aequor; mille navium remis strepere aut velis impelli: mox atro nubium globo effusa grando, simul variis undique procellis incerti fluctus prospectum adimere, regimen impedire; milesque pavidus et casuum maris ignarus dum turbat nautas vel intempestive iuvat, officia prudentium corrumperebat. Omne dehinc caelum et mare omne in austrum cessit, qui tumidis Germaniae terris, profundis amnibus, immenso nubium tractu validus et rigore vicini septentrionis horridior rapuit disiecitque naves in aperta Oceani aut insulas saxi abruptis vel per occulta vada infestas. Quibus paulum aegreque vitatis, postquam mutabat aestus eodemque quo ventus ferebat, non adhaerere ancoris, non exhaurire inrumpentis undas poterant: equi, iumenta, sarcinae, to retire without reducing any part of Germany beyond the Ems to subjection.

22. 3. exercitum Tiberii Caesaris. § 18, N.

5. metu. Int. 54, 3.

6. Ampsivarios. Here, as in §§ 8 and 24, the MS. gives Angrivarios. Germanicus, however, would not have left Stertinus behind in the territory beyond the Weser. He sends him ahead to curb the rebellious tribe on the Ems, and to clear the way for the retreat of the army.

ni—properavissent. Supply et bellum iis illatum esset.

23. 1. aestate—adulta. June, July, and August were respectively named aestas nova, adulta, and praeceps. The same distinction prevailed with the other seasons.

4. mille. A neuter noun, subject of strepere and impelli.

5. globo. "Bank."

6. regimen. "The helm." The oar-rudders were awkward to manage in a storm, and the flat-bottomed ships were not fit to bear up against the wind (§ 6, N.).

9. in austrum cessit. The uncertain squalls settled into a steady blow from the south; the same kind of July storm which dispersed the Invincible Armada.

tumidis. "Mountainous." The Roman imagination magnified the Hartz mountains, etc. Tacitus ascribes wind to mountains (Agric. X.); Seneca (Nat. Quaest. IV. 13) says, "Facit ergo ventum resoluta nubes" (§ 5, N.).

12. insulas. A number of sandy islets (the Wadden) line the Dutch coast. The nearest rocky island is Heligoland, 70 miles N.E. of the Ems mouth.

15. exhaurire. The ancients seem to have used scoops, not pumps, though force-pumps were used for other purposes (XV. 43, N.).

etiam arma praecipitantur, quo levarentur alvei, manantes per latera et fluctu superurgente.

24. Quanto violentior cetero mari Oceanus et truculentia caeli praestat Germania, tantum illa clades novitate et magnitudine excessit, hostilibus circum litoribus aut ita vasto et profundo, ut credatur novissimum ac sine terris mare. Pars
5 navium haustae sunt, plures apud insulas longius sitas eiectae; milesque nullo illic hominum cultu fame absumptus, nisi quos corpora equorum eodem elisa toleraverant. Sola Germanici triremis Chaucorum terram adpulit; quem per omnes illos dies noctesque apud scopulos et prominentis oras, cum se tanti
10 exitii reum clamitaret, vix cohibuere amici quo minus eodem mari oppeteret. Tandem relabente aestu et secundante vento claudae naves raro remigio aut intentis vestibus, et quaedam a validioribus tractae, revertere; quas raptim reffectas misit ut scrutarentur insulas. Collecti ea cura plerique: multos
15 Ampsivarii nuper in fidem accepti redemptos ab interioribus reddidere; quidam in Britanniam rapti et remissi a regulis. Ut quis ex longinquo revererat, miracula narrabant, vim turbinum et inauditas volucres, monstra maris, ambiguas hominum et beluarum formas, visa sive ex metu 20 credita.

25. Sed fama classis amissae ut Germanos ad spem belli, ita Caesarem ad coercendum erexit. C. Silio cum triginta peditum, tribus equitum milibus ire in Chattos imperat; ipse maioribus copiis Marsos inrumpit, quorum dux Mallovendus nuper in 5 deditionem acceptus propinquo luco defossam Varianae legionis

17. fluctu superurgente. Only the ships which carried machines or horses were decked. Superurgente is ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

24. 3. excessit. Sc. ceteras clades. ita vasto et profundo. Abl. abs., with mari understood.

5. insulas. On the west coast of Denmark.

7. toleraverant. "Kept alive." The pluperfect refers to the time when they were recovered (Int. 14, δ).

8. Chaucorum terram. The coast of Hanover is sandy; scopulos is a mistake.

11. oppeteret. Sc. mortem.

15. ab interioribus. "From more distant tribes."

19. ambiguas—formas. i.e. mermen. Juvenal calls them juvenes marinos, and speaks of them as a sailor's yarn. Tacitus, who is sceptical enough when he pleases, uses the supernatural without scruple for rhetorical purposes.

25. 2. ad coercendum erexit. The fact that Germanicus, after his laborious and expensive campaign in interior Germany, was obliged to make a new attack upon the Rhine Germans, whose country he had harried in two previous campaigns, shows how slight an impression he had made upon the country, and how little occasion there was for his triumph.

4. dux Mallovendus. He had deserted to the Romans with his personal attendants like Segimer (I. 71, N.).

aquilam modico praesidio servari indicat. Missa extemplo manus quae hostem a fronte eliceret; alii qui terga circumgressi recluderent humum; et utrisque adfuit fortuna. Eo promptior Caesar pergit introrsus, populatur, exscindit non ausum congregi hostem aut, sicubi restiterat, statim pulsum nec umquam magis, ut ex captivis cognitum est, paventem. Quippe invictos et nullis casibus superabiles Romanos praedicabant, qui perdita classe, amissis armis, post constrata equorum virorumque corporibus litora eadem virtute, pari ferocia et velut aucti 15
numero inrupissent.

26. Reductus inde in hiberna miles, laetus animi quod adversa maris expeditione prospera pensavisset. Addidit munificentiam Caesar, quantum quis damni professus erat, exsolvendo. Nec dubium habebatur labare hostes petendaeque pacis consilia sumere, et si proxima aestas adiceretur, posse bellum patrari. Sed crebris epistulis Tiberius monebat rediret ad decretum triumphum: satis iam eventum, satis casuum. Prospera illi et magna proelia: eorum quoque meminisset quae

venti et fluctus, nulla ducis culpa, gravia tamen et saeva damna intulissent. Se novies a divo Augusto in Germaniam missum plura consilio quam vi perfecisse. Sic Sugambros in deditionem acceptos. Sic Suebos regemque Maroboduum pace obstrictum. Posse et Cheruscos ceterasque rebellium gentes, quoniam 15
Romanae ultioni consultum esset, internis discordiis relinqui. Precante Germanico annum efficiendis coeptis, acrius modestiam eius adgreditur alterum consulatum offerendo, cuius munia praesens obiret. Simul adnectebat, si foret adhuc bellandum, relinqueret materiem Drusi fratris gloriae, qui nullo tum alio 20
hoste non nisi apud Germanias adsequi nomen imperatorium et deportare lauream posset. Haud cunctatus est ultra Germanicus, quamquam fingi ea seque per invidiam parto iam decori abstrahi intellegeret.

6. aquilam. One had been recovered the year before; the third remained in the possession of the Germans until the reign of Claudius.

9. exscindit. "He utterly destroys." The intensive ex corresponds to the German ent.

26. 3. quantum quis damni. The men had lost their tents and equipments, which they were bound to supply from their pay (I. 17, N.).

4. labare. "Were disheartened."

7. decretum triumphum. Voted the year before (I. 55).

14. internis discordiis. § 44, sqq.

19. nomen imperatorium. It had been granted to Tiberius by Augustus, but Germanicus had of late avoided assuming it.

27. Sub idem tempus e familia Scriboniorum Libo Drusus defertur moliri res novas. Eius negotii initium, ordinem, finem curatius disseram, quia tum primum reperta sunt quae per tot annos rem publicam exedere. Firmius Catus senator, ex
 5 intima Libonis amicitia, iuvenem improvidum et facilem inanibus ad Chaldaeorum promissa, magorum sacra, somniorum etiam interpretes impulit, dum proavum Pompeium, amitam Scriboniam, quae quondam Augusti coniunx fuerat, consobrinos Caesares, plenam imaginibus domum ostentat, hortaturque ad 10 luxum et aes alienum, socius libidinum et necessitatum, quo pluribus indiciis inligaret.

28. Ut satis testium et qui servi eadem noscerent repperit, aditum ad principem postulat, demonstrato crimine et reo per Flaccum Vescularium equitem Romanum, cui propior cum Tiberio usus erat. Caesar indicium haud aspernatus congressus
 5 abnuit: posse enim eodem Flacco internuntio sermones commeari. Atque interim Libonem ornat praetura, convictibus adhibet, non vultu alienatus, non verbis commotior (adeo iram condiderat); cunctaque eius dicta factaque, cum prohibere posset, scire malebat, donec Iunius quidam, temptatus ut infernas umbras
 10 carminibus eliceret, ad Fulcinium Trionem indicium detulit. Celebre inter accusatores Trionis ingenium erat avidumque famae malae. Statim corripit reum, adit consules, cognitionem senatus poscit. Et vocantur patres, addito consultandum super re magna et atroci.

29. Libo interim, veste mutata, cum primoribus feminis circumire domos, orare adfines, vocem adversum pericula poscere,

27. 1. Drusus Libo (M. Scribonius Libo Drusus).

6. Chaldaeorum. Professional astrologers. One of the most frequent charges in capital cases at this period was, that the accused had sought to learn the hour of his victim's death by astrology, or had practised witchcraft to destroy him. Superstition seemed to flourish in the decay of national belief (§ 69, N.). When the emperor's horoscope was cast it became high treason. Lipsius quotes Tertullian: "Non enim ea mente de caris consulitur qua de dominis."

magorum sacra. XVI. 31, N.

28. 1. qui—noscerent. "Who were willing to confess."

4. congressus abnuit. He refused to admit Catus.

8. cunctaque, etc. "He might have stopped all that Libo did and said, but preferred to watch him." This was strictly in accordance with the temper of Tiberius; moreover, he avoided violent action at the beginning of his reign.

29. 1. veste mutata. By established custom, men accused of capital charges appeared in black garments, with beard unshaven (sordes). Their immediate friends adopted the same dress. Women also appeared in mourning for their friends.

2. vocem. "An advocate."

abnuentibus cunctis, cum diversa praetenderent, eadem formidine. Die senatus metu et aegritudine fessus, sive, ut tradidere quidam, simulato morbo, lectica delatus ad fores curiae innisusque fratri et manus ac supplices voces ad Tiberium tendens immoto eius vultu excipitur. Mox libellos et auctores recitat Caesar ita moderans, ne lenire neve asperare crimina videretur.

30. Accesserant praeter Trionem et Catum accusatores Fonteius Agrippa et C. Vibius, certabantque cui ius perorandi in reum daretur, donec Vibius, quia nec ipsi inter se concederent et Libo sine patrono introisset, singillatim se crimina obiecturum professus, protulit libellos vaecordes adeo, ut consultaverit Libo, an habiturus foret opes quis viam Appiam Brundisium usque pecunia operiret. Inerant et alia huiusce modi stolidi vana, si mollius acciperes, miseranda. Uno tamen libello manu Libonis nominibus Caesarum aut senatorum additas atroces vel occultas notas accusator arguebat. Negante reo adgnoscentes servos per tormenta interrogari placuit. Et quia vetere senatus consulto quaestio in caput domini prohibebatur, callidus et novi iuris repertor Tiberius mancipari singulos actori publico iubet, scilicet ut in Libonem ex servis salvo senatus consulto quaereretur. Ob quae posterum diem reus petivit domumque digressus extremas preces P. Quirinio propinquo suo ad principem mandavit.

3. eadem formidine. Their dread of the emperor.

4. Die senatus. September 13th (§ 32).

5. simulato morbo. Dio Cassius took another view. "He was in dying condition, and Tiberius had him brought into the senate house in a covered litter, such as the wives of senators use."

innisus fratri. L. Libo, consul ordinarius of the year, had been succeeded by a consul suffectus on 1st July (I. 81, N.).

6. tendens. Compare the zeugma in Verg. Aen. III. 176:

"tendoque supinas ad coelum cum voce manus."

7. libellos et auctores. "The written charges, and list of witnesses."

8. moderans. "Tempering his voice."

30. 2. C. Vibius (Serenus).

4. singillatim. He would simply state and arrange the charges.

5. libellos. Libo's private papers.

6. opes quibus. Brotier computes the amount at 15,000,000,000 livres, in copper sesterces.

8. Uno—tamen libello. Nipperdey's reading—"In one document were notes of a criminal or mysterious nature, placed against the names of the imperial family and of senators, in the handwriting of Libo, as the accuser maintained." The notes were intended as a kind of sorcery.

11. per tormenta. Torture took the place of an oath with slaves, who were not considered morally responsible. Their evidence was invalid in law against their master, but Tiberius accepted it (as the law of England admits a wife's testimony) in treason cases.

13. repertor Tiberius. Augustus had used the same device.

actori publico. A public slave, who could hold no property, but purchased in the name of the treasury.

14. scilicet. Irony.

16. P. (Sulpicio) Quirinio. Had married Libo's second cousin.

31. Responsum est ut senatum rogaret. Cingebatur interim milite domus, strepebant etiam in vestibulo, ut audiri, ut aspici possent, cum Libo ipsis quas in novissimam voluptatem adhibuerat epulis excruciatu vocare percussorem, prensare
 5 servorum dextras, inserere gladium. Atque illis, dum trepidant, dum refugiunt, evertentibus adpositum in mensa lumen, feralibus iam sibi tenebris duos ictus in viscera derexit. Ad gemitum conlabentis adcurrere liberti, et caede visa miles abstinit. Accusatio tamen apud patres adseveratione eadem peracta, 10 iuravitque Tiberius petiturum se vitam quamvis nocenti, nisi voluntariam mortem properavisset.

32. Bona inter accusatores dividuntur, et praeturae extra ordinem datae iis qui senatorii ordinis erant. Tunc Cotta Messalinus, ne imago Libonis exsequias posterorum comitaretur, censuit, Cn. Lentulus, ne quis Scribonius cognomentum Drusi 5 adsumeret. Supplicationum dies Pomponii Flacci sententia constituti. Dona Iovi, Marti, Concordiae, utque iduum Septembrium dies, quo se Libo interfecerat, dies festus haberetur, L. Piso et Gallus Asinius et Papius Mutilus et L. Apronius decrevere; quorum auctoritates adulationesque rettuli, ut sciretur vetus id in 10 re publica malum. Facta et de mathematicis magisque Italia pellendis senatus consulta; quorum e numero L. Pituanus saxo deiectus est, in P. Marcium consules extra portam Esquilinam cum classicum canere iussissent, more prisco advertere.

81. 2. vestibulo. The court between the street and the house.

3. ipsis—epulis excruciatu. The food choked him.

"Faucibus ut morbo siccis interque molares Difficili crescente cibo."—Juv. XIII. 212.

9. adseveratione. "Solemnity."

10. petiturum. Sc. fuisse (Int. 18, c).

82. 1. extra ordinem. i.e. by anticipation of the lex annalis (XI. 22, N.), and ahead of the offices already held (I. 44, N.).

2. (M. Aurelius) Cotta Messalinus.

3. imago. Roman families preserved in their atria wax images of all ancestors who had held curule offices. They were displayed at funerals, and constituted the family claim to nobility.

4. Cn. (Cornelius) Lentulus.

cognomentum Drusi. Certain names were reckoned unlucky in certain families. Suetonius says that no Lucius Claudius ever ended well.

5. (L.) Pomponius Flaccus.

6. iduum Septembrium. September 13th.

7. L. (Calpurnius) Piso.

8. (C.) Asinius Gallus.

9. auctoritates. "Weighty names."

10. mathematicis. "Astrologers." A decree of banishment was passed against them in B.C. 140, and repeatedly re-enacted (§ 27, N.).

11. saxo. Traitors (Sen. de Ira, I. 16), incestuous persons (VI. 19), and sorcerers, were executed by being cast from the Tarpeian rock.

12. portam Esquilinam. Now the Porta Maggiore. Without it was the place of execution, and a burial-place for criminals and slaves.

13. classicum. The trumpet was sounded in the forum, and in front of the house of the condemned person.

more prisco, or more majorum. The neck of the criminal was fixed in a fork of wood, and he was beaten to death

33. Proximo senatus die multa in luxum civitatis dicta a Q. Haterio consulari, Octavio Frontone praetura functo; decretumque ne vasa auro solida ministrandis cibis fierent, ne vestis serica viros foedaret. Excessit Fronto ac postulavit modum argento, suppellectili, familiae: erat quippe adhuc frequens senatoribus, si quid e re publica crederent, loco sententiae promere. Contra Gallus Asinius disseruit: auctu imperii adolevisse etiam privatas opes, idque non novum, sed e vetustissimis moribus: aliam apud Fabricios, aliam apud Scipiones pecuniam; et cuncta ad rem publicam referri, qua tenui angustas civium domos, postquam eo magnificentiae venerit, gliscere singulos. Neque in familia et argento quaeque ad usum parentur nimium aliquid aut modicum nisi ex fortuna possidentis. Distinctos senatus et equitum census, non quia diversi natura, sed ut locis ordinibus dignationibus antistent, et aliis quae ad requiem animi aut salubritatem corporum parentur, nisi forte clarissimo cuique plures curas, maiora pericula subeunda, delenimentis curarum et periculorum cendum esse. Facilem adsensum Gallo sub nominibus honestis confessio vitiorum et similitudo audientium dedit. Adiecerat et Tiberius non id tempus censurae nec, si quid in moribus labaret, defuturum corrigendi auctorem.

34. Inter quae L. Piso ambitum fori, corrupta iudicia, with rods. The head was then severed from the body.

33. 4. vestis serica. Silken crape, imported from China at an enormous expense. Seneca declaims against the indecency of these garments, which displayed every motion of the limbs.

Excessit. "Went on to say." Every motion (relatio) was formally put to the house by the presiding consul, who called on each of the senators for his opinion, in order of rank. Each in turn (loco sententiae) gave his vote, and might go on to make remarks, or propose amendments, or even introduce a new subject. If new matter were introduced, the consul was not obliged to bring it before the house, though it was customary to do so if an especial request was made.

6. frequens. "Customary."

9. aliam apud Fabricios. "A fortune was one thing in the days of Fabricius; another under the Scipios," who began the foreign conquests of Rome.

10. et cuncta. "And everything varied with the condition of the state."

12. familia. Households of 500 slaves were not uncommon among the nobles; one man under Augustus owned 4100. Athenaeus mentions families of 10,000 and 20,000. They were a motley crowd of all nations and colours. Slaves of different countries were sought for different services.

14. senatus et equitum census. I. 73, N.

15. dignationibus. Int. I, c.

17. nisi forte. Int. 44.

19. sub nominibus. "Under decent pretexts."

21. non id tempus censurae. Tiberius claimed the censoria potestas, and was jealous of any attempt of the senate to play the censor (III. 30, N.).

34. 1. Inter quae. He seems to have made these remarks in his loco sententiae on the motion just passed.

ambitum fori. "The power of influence in the courts, of bribery with jurors."

saevitiam oratorum accusationes minitantium increpans, abire se et cedere urbe, victurum in aliquo abdito et longinquo rure testabatur; simul curiam relinquebat. Commotus est Tiberius, 5 et quamquam mitibus verbis Pisonem permulsisset propinquos quoque eius impulit ut abeuntem auctoritate vel precibus tenerent. Haud minus liberi doloris documentum idem Piso mox dedit vocata in ius Urgulania, quam supra leges amicitia Augustae extulerat. Nec aut Urgulania obtemperavit, in 10 domum Caesaris spreto Pisone vecta, aut ille abscessit, quamquam Augusta se violari et imminui quereretur. Tiberius hactenus indulgere matri civile ratus, ut se iturum ad praetoris tribunal, adfuturum Urgulaniae diceret, processit Palatio, procul sequi iussis militibus. Spectabatur occursante populo com- 15 positus ore et sermonibus variis tempus atque iter ducens, donec propinquis Pisonem frustra coercentibus deferri Augusta pecuniam, quae petebatur, iuberet. Isque finis rei, ex qua neque Piso inglorius et Caesar maiore fama fuit. Ceterum Urgulaniae potentia adeo nimia civitati erat, ut testis in causa 20 quadam, quae apud senatum tractabatur, venire dedignaretur: missus est praetor qui domi interrogaret, cum virgines Vestales in foro et iudicio audiri, quotiens testimonium dicerent, vetus mos fuerit.

35. Res eo anno prolatae haud referrem, ni pretium foret Cn. Pisonis et Asinii Galli super eo negotio diversas sententias noscere. Piso, quamquam afuturum se dixerat Caesar, ob id magis agendas censebat, ut absente principe senatum et equites 5 posse sua munia sustinere decorum rei publicae foret. Gallus, abire for abiturum expresses a paullo-post future.

2. oratorum = delatorum.

4. relinquebat. Inceptive. "He made as though he would leave."

7. doloris. "Indignation."

10. abcessit. "Nor would he leave her." He met her in the forum, cited her to appear, and when she swept on in her sedan chair to Livia's palace he followed.

12. civile ratus. "Thinking it would not be arrogant in himself." "En prince citoyen."—Burnouf.

14. militibus. I. 24, N.

15. sermonibus variis. Chatting with the friends he met, like a man going down town to business.

21. missus est praetor. To take her evidence. This became usual under later emperors, in the cases of personae egregiae. Dig. l. 12, 2, 1, 15.

Vestales. I. 14, N.

35. 1. Res—prolatae. "An adjournment which occurred."

2. Cn. (Calpurnii) Pisonis.

3. afuturum. Tiberius was always proposing to make a tour in the provinces; the people in jest called him Callippides, "the fine horseman who always galloped and never advanced."

4. ut. "On the ground that."

equites. They served as jurymen (XI. 22, N.).

quia speciem libertatis Piso praeceperat, nihil satis inlustre aut ex dignitate populi Romani nisi coram et sub oculis Caesaris, eoque conventum Italiae et affluentis provincias praesentiae eius servanda dicebat. Audiente haec Tiberio ac silente magnis utrimque contentionibus acta, sed res dilatae. 10

36. Et certamen Gallo adversus Caesarem exortum est. Nam censuit in quinquennium magistratum comitia habenda, utque legionum legati, qui ante praeturam ea militia fungebantur, iam tum praetores destinarentur, princeps duodecim candidatos in annos singulos nominaret. Haud dubium erat 5 eam sententiam altius penetrare et arcana imperii temptari. Tiberius tamen, quasi augeretur potestas eius, disseruit: grave moderationi suae tot eligere, tot differre. Vix per singulos annos offensiones vitari, quamvis repulsam propinqua spes soletur: quantum odii fore ab iis qui ultra quinquennium 10 proiciantur. Unde prospici posse quae cuque tam longo temporis spatio mens, domus, fortuna? superbire homines etiam annua designatione: quid si honorem per quinquennium agitent? quinquuplicari prorsus magistratus, subverti leges, quae sua spatia exercendae candidatorum industriae quaerendisque 15 aut potiundis honoribus statuerint. Favorabili in speciem oratione vim imperii tenuit.

8. conventum. The gathering of Italians and provincials on public business during a session of the senate.

3. legionum legati. I. 44, N.

5. haud dubium. "The proposition evidently went too far, and interfered with the secret machinery of the Government." By appointing so far ahead the emperor would lose his immediate power of rewarding officers, and that of advancing friends outside of the army.

12. mens. Disposition toward the Government; domus. Number of children (§ 51, N.); fortuna. Wealth to support the dignity of office (§ 33, N.).

13. annua designatione. The nominations were regularly made a year in advance.

14. agitent. "What if they expected," i.e. brooded over their office and plans.

15. exercendae—industriæ. "For trying the good qualities of candidates."

37. 1. census—juvit. This M. Hortensius Hortalus, lacking the property qualification of a senator (I. 75, N.), had received 1,000,000 sesterces from Augustus, which he had squandered, and now came for more. In later times this liberalitas Augusti was exaggerated by Nero to pensions of £4100 per annum, paid to decayed noblemen.

the fall of the republic. His father, a profligate man, had been put to death after the battle of Philippi.

Egere alii grates: siluit Hortalus, pavore an avitae nobilitatis etiam inter angustias fortunae retinens. Neque 25 miseratus est posthac Tiberius, quamvis domus Hortensii pudendam ad inopiam delaberetur.

Nec id Archelaus per superbiam omiserat, sed ab intimis Augusti monitus, quia florente Gaio Caesare missoque ad res orientis intuta Tiberii amicitia credebatur. Ut versa Caesarum subole imperium adeptus est, elicit Archelaum matris literis, quae non dissimulatis filii offensionibus clementiam offerebat, si ad precandum veniret. Ille ignarus doli vel, si intellegere crederetur, vim metuens in urbem properat: exceptusque immiti a principe et mox accusatus in senatu, non ob crimina quae fingebantur, sed angore, simul fessus senio et quia regibus aequa, nedum infima insolita sunt, finem vitae sponte an fato implevit. 14. consulari obtinente. Asia and Africa, the chief senatorial provinces (I. 74, N.), were governed by ex-consuls, other senatorial proconsuls being often only ex-praetors. The proconsuls of Africa had a salary of £8,300. A proconsul had twelve lictors; a praetor six; a commissioner like Ateius or an imperial legatus pro praetore five. They bore, in the provinces, fasces with axes, to express the absolute dominion of Rome.

48. 2. liberalitate. Individual benefaction.

Aemiliae Musae. A woman of Greek extraction. She died without heirs, and the procurators urged that her goods be escheated to the fiscus. A claim was advanced by Lepidus that she was descended from a freedman of his family, which would give him a prior right (IV.

7, N.). The assertion rested on probable, though not legal, evidence, and Tiberius resigned his own claim.

 Laetabatur Tiberius, cum inter filios eius et leges senatus dis-

 Mazippa. Divisusque exercitus, ut Tacfarinas lectos viros et Romanum in modum armatos castris attineret, disciplinae et 10

5. lex iubebat. The lex Papia Poppaea, enacted A.D. 9. It directed that among candidates for office the married should be preferred to the unmarried; the father of children to the childless; the father of a greater to the father of a less number. A law directing the action of the senate of Malaga (lex Malacitana), which has been preserved, confines this preference to the case of a tie vote, but the distinction seems to have gone further at Rome (XV. 19). The lex Papia Poppaea also related to privileges of fathers in matters of taxation and inheritance (III. 25, N.).

52. 2. auxiliaria stipendia. Tacfarinas, like Arminius (§ 10, N.), had learned the art of war from his Roman masters.

25. triumphalia insignia. I. 72, N.

53. 1. tertio for tertium, to avoid four words with the same ending. Tiberius held the office for a few days, and Seius Tuberus was made consul suffectus in his place.

3. Achaiae. From this passage it is supposed that some part of southern Epirus was at this time (A.D. 18) included in the province of Achaia. At a later time the connection ceased.

7. sacratas ab Augusto manubias. After the victory Augustus adorned his camp with stone walls and the beaks of ships. He rebuilt the temple to Apollo which stood there, and instituted quinquennial games of literary contests, wrestling, and horse-racing, in honour of the god, and to commemorate his triumph.

9. avunculus Augustus, avus Antonius. See table, § 51, N.

11. ut uno lictore uteretur. The proconsul's lictors (§ 47, N.) were symbols of military dominion. Germanicus entered Athens as a friend.

12. vetera suorum facta. To give weight to their flattery they suggested that they were the descendants of Solon and Pericles.

54. 3. Propontidis angustias. The Dardanelles.

4. locos for loca.

6. magistratum injuriis. The native Greek magistrates. Asia Minor never recovered its prosperity after it had been pillaged by Brutus and Cassius.

7. sacra Samothracum. The Cabeiri were mystic deities worshipped at Samothrace, and Germanicus desired to be initiated in their mysteries. He was tainted with the superstition of his day, and consulted the Egyptian oracles as well as Piso, quo properantius destinata inciperet, civitatem Atheniensium turbido incessu exterritam oratione saeva increpat, oblique Germanicum perstringens, quod contra decus Romani nominis non Athenienses tot cladibus extinctos, sed conluviem illam nationum comitate nimia coluisset: hos 5 enim esse Mithridatis adversus Sullam, Antonii adversus divum Augustum socios. obvii aquilones. A strong current sets to the south from the Dardanelles, and is greatly increased by a north wind. The ancient ships, with latteen sails, could not sail as close to the wind as ours.

9. nostri. Int. 34.

13. fontis arcani aqua. Pliny says it shortened the life of the priest who drank it, and Tertullian called it scaturigo daemonica.

55. 2. turbido incessu. With armed guards and no notice.

5. conluviem—nationum. From the time of Demosthenes the Athenians had traded upon their ancient fame by selling their citizenship. Augustus stopped the abuse.

6. Mithridatis, etc. The Athenians had been controlled by superior force in both cases.

8. violenter in suos. Aristides, Socrates, etc.

9. Areo iudicio. The Areopagus had an ancient jurisdiction of criminal cases, and a general censorship of the public morals; falsi includes false coining and forgery.

vagum ac lascivientem. The injury thus done to the provincials was urged in the impeachment of Piso (III. 13).

25. decursibus. The regular reviews, held thrice a month. Plancina was trying to emulate Agrippina's popularity with the Rhine legions (I. 69, N.).

29. praeverti. A middle voice. "To turn his attention first."

insigne regium. A tiara adorned with gems. It was shaped like a bishop's mitre, and was blue or purple, with white spots.

14. legatum. Asproconsul, Germanicus had three consular legati (IV. 56, N.), and Veranius, who was one of them, is now appointed to regulate the constitution of the new province, which was afterwards placed under a procurator of the emperor.

16. praetoris. The governor of Syria

57. Cunctaque socialia prospere composita non ideo laetum Germanicum habebant ob superbiam Pisonis, qui iussus partem legionum ipse aut per filium in Armeniam ducere utrumque neglexerat. Cyrrhi demum apud hiberna decumae legionis convenere, firmato vultu, Piso adversus metum, Germanicus, ne minari crederetur; et erat, ut rettuli, clementior. Sed amici accendendis offensionibus callidi intendere vera, adgerere falsa ipsumque et Plancinam et filios variis modis criminari. Postremo paucis familiarium adhibitis sermo coeptus a Caesare, qualem ira et dissimulatio gignit, responsum a Pisone precibus contumacibus; discesseruntque apertis odiis. Post quae rarus in tribunali Caesaris Piso, et si quando adsideret, atrox ac dissentire manifestus. Vox quoque eius audita est in convivio, cum apud regem Nabataeorum coronae aureae magno pondere Caesari et Agrippinae, leves Pisoni et ceteris offerrentur, principis Romani, non Parthi regis filio eas epulas dari; abiecitque simul coronam et multa in luxum addidit, quae Germanico quamquam acerba tolerabantur tamen.

58. Inter quae ab rege Parthorum Artabano legati venere. Miserat amicitiam ac foedus memoraturos, et cupere renovari dextras, daturumque honori Germanici ut ripam Euphratis accederet: petere interim ne Vonones in Suria haberetur neu procures gentium propinquis nuntiis ad discordias traheret. Ad ea Germanicus de societate Romanorum Parthorumque magnifice, de adventu regis et cultu sui cum decore ac modestia respondit. Vonones Pompeiopolim Ciliciae maritimam urbem

6. crederetur. Int. 54, 6.

7. intendere. "Exaggerated."

8. filios. Only M. Piso was with his father, but they accused Gnaeus of intriguing against Germanicus at Rome.

10. precibus contumacibus. "With ironical entreaties."

12. in tribunali. As assessor (I. 75, N.). Wherever the Roman magistrate went he was judge. The pavement (Gabatha) of the tribunal was his especial province.

14. coronae aureae. The entertainer always supplied fresh garlands for his guests. These were sometimes replaced by golden crowns, which might serve as a delicate present or artistic bribe. ■

15. principis Romani. In Piso's estimation Tiberius is merely the princeps senatus (I. 1, N.), the greatest nobleman at Rome, primus inter pares.

58. 2. foedus. Made B.C. 20 (§ 1, N.).

3. daturum. "He would compliment Germanicus by advancing to the Euphrates." In the same way, Phraates IV. had condescended to meet Caius Caesar, as prince and heir of Augustus, and renewed the alliance with him during an interview on an island in the Euphrates, A.D. 2.

5. propinquis nuntiis. Vonones, now under Roman protection, took advantage of the neighbourhood of Parthia to stir up rebellion among his former vassals by secret emissaries (XV. 2, N.).

 lenibus verbis perstricto, acerrime increpuit quod contra instituta Augusti non sponte principis Alexandriam introisset. Nam
 10 Augustus inter alia dominationis arcana, vetitis nisi permissu

 Aegyptum, ne fame urgueret Italiam, quisquis eam provinciam

3. apertis horreis. The public magazines, where corn was stored for exportation to Rome (I. 2, N.). There was a great famine in Egypt at the time, owing to the low flood of the Nile, but the officials dared not employ the imperial corn for the starving people until they were authorized by Germanicus himself.

4. pedibus intectis. He wore sandals and the chlamys, instead of the calceus and toga of a Roman. Romans clung to their national dress in the east as an Englishman does in India.

5. P. (Cornellii) Scipionis (Africani Majoris).

9. sponte = permissu (Int. 33). Germanicus supposed that his commission to govern "the provinces beyond the sea" (§ 43) included Egypt. Otherwise he would have been transgressing a lex Julia.

11. equitibus Romanis inlustribus.
 The peculiar position and importance of Egypt, and his experience with Cornelius Gallus, made Augustus claim it as a peculiar imperial province, to be governed by appointees of the emperor, of too low rank to think of successful rebellion.

 These equestrian praefecti, however, enjoyed as large power as the consular governors of other provinces. Seius Strabo now held it.

12. ne fame urgueret Italiam. Ves-pasian, when aspiring to the empire, closed the ports of Egypt to starve Rome.

13. claustraque terrae ac maris.
 Alexandria, the great seaport, and Pelusium on the isthmus of Suez. Encompassed as it is by desert and sea, Egypt can only be attacked from these points, while it commands the intercourse between Asia and Africa. General Kléber, who, with a handful of French troops, held Egypt against the combined forces of England and Turkey, wrote to the Directory in 1800: "I am aware how important the possession of Egypt is; when in Europe, I have said that France could, from this single spot, influence the commerce of the four quarters of the globe."

7. eosque, etc. The sun-gods of other nations resemble Herakles in their attributes. According to Pliny, Germanicus visited the temple of Apis at Memphis, but the sacred bull (an evil omen) refused food from his hand. The pyramids and Lake Moeris (§ 61), which lie in northern Egypt, near Memphis, should have been mentioned in this connection.

One of them, shattered by an earthquake, was said to emit the sound of a breaking harpstring at dawn. Similar sounds have been observed by modern travellers among the ruins of Thebes, and are ascribed to the sudden expansion of the stone under the first rays of an African sun.

3. disiectasque inter, etc. The pyramids are founded on a rock, but their bases are covered by the drift-sand of the desert, which overwhelmed the army of Cambyses. The base of the pyramid of Cheops covers $13\frac{1}{2}$ acres, and it is 484 feet high.

4. certamine. "Emulation."

5. lacusque, etc. Lake Moeris, probably a natural reservoir, but connected with the Nile by a great canal. The modern lake is thirty miles long and seven broad, but the ancient dimensions were much greater. It is still flooded by the river.

63. Maroboduo undique deserto non aliud subsidium quam misericordia Caesaris fuit. Transgressus Danuvium, qua Noricam provinciam praefluit, scripsit Tiberio non ut profugus aut supplex, sed ex memoria prioris fortunae : nam multis nationibus 5 clarissimum quondam regem ad se vocantibus Romanam amicitiam praetulisse. Responsum a Caesare tutam ei honoratamque sedem in Italia fore, si maneret : sin rebus eius aliud conduceret, abiturum fide qua venisset. Ceterum apud senatum disseruit non Philippum Atheniensibus, non Pyrrhum aut Antiochum 10 populo Romano perinde metuendos fuisse. Extat oratio, qua magnitudinem viri, violentiam subiectarum ei gentium et quam propinquus Italiae hostis, suaeque in destruendo eo consilia extulit. Et Maroboduus quidem Ravennae habitus, si quando insolescerent Suebi, quasi rediturus in regnum ostentabatur : 15 sed non excessit Italia per duodeviginti annos consenuitque multum imminuta claritate ob nimiam vivendi cupidinem. 64. 2. ovantes. An ovation was granted when a war had not been regularly declared, or had been settled without bloodshed. The general wore a myrtle crown, entered the city on horseback, and sacrificed a sheep (whence the name).

3. Martis Ultoris. On the forum of Augustus, at the foot of the Quirinal. Augustus vowed it when he undertook the war against Brutus and Cassius to avenge the death of Julius. The arches have perished.

4. effigie Caesarum. Germanicus and Drusus. The porticoes of the forum extended in a semicircle on both sides of the temple, and were adorned with statues of Roman heroes. The bolder adulation of a later day placed a statue of Nero in the temple itself (XIII. 9).

11. mite et amoenum. Ovid (who had died at Tomi the year before this) addressed an elegy to Cotys, ex Pont. II. 9, in which he calls him mitissime juvenum, and appeals to his protection as a brother poet.

9. convivium. No treaty was without a sacrifice, no sacrifice without a feast.

11. sacra regni. "There's such divinity doth hedge a king."

18. invidiam criminis. "The burden of proof," which he had taken upon himself by his violent actions.

66. 1. pro praetore Moesiae. Pop-paeus Sabinus had governed Moesia for a time (I. 80), and was still continued in charge of Macedonia and Achaia (V. 10). Latinius Pandusa is not elsewhere mentioned.

7. (L.) Pomponius Flaccus.

67. 3. praesidia Romana. "The Roman lines," guarded by a chain of forts.

6. ab uxore Cotyis. A daughter of Polemo of Pontus. She is represented on her husband's coins.

Specie venandi omissis maritimis locis avia saltuum petiit, mox pernecitate equi ad amnem Pyramum contendit, cuius pontes accolae ruperant audita regis fuga: neque vado penetrari poterat. Igitur in ripa fluminis a Vibio Frontone praefecto equitum vincitur, mox Remmius evocatus, priori custodiae regis adpositus, quasi per iram gladio eum transigit. Unde maior fides conscientia sceleris et metu indicii mortem Vononi inlatam. 10

69. At Germanicus Aegypto remeans cuncta, quae apud legiones aut urbes iusserat, abolita vel in contrarium versa cognoscit. Hinc graves in Pisonem contumeliae, nec minus acerba quae ab illo in Caesarem intentabantur. Dein Piso abire Suria statuit. Mox adversa Germanici valetudine detentus, ubi recreatum accepit votaue pro incolumitate solvebantur, admotas hostias, sacrificalem apparatus, festam Antiochensium plebem per lictores proturbat. Tum Seleuciam degreditur, opperiens aegritudinem, quae rursum Germanico acciderat. Saevam vim morbi augebat persuasio veneni a Pisone accepti; et reperiebantur solo ac parietibus erutae humanorum corporum reliquiae, carmina et devotiones et nomen Germanici plumbeis tabulis insculptum, semusti cineres ac tabo obliti aliaque malefica, quis creditur animas numinibus infernis sacrari. Simul missi a Pisone incusabantur ut valetudinis adversa rimantes. 15

68. 1. amotum in Ciliciam. To Pompeiopolis.

3. consanguineum. The Parthian kings, who were of Tartar extraction (§ 1, N.), often intermarried with the Scyths.

7. praefecto equitum. I. 49, N.

8. evocatus. A veteran who volunteered for further service, with the rank of a centurion.

10. conscientia sceleris. That is, if he had been bribed to permit the escape, and feared to have it known. But Suetonius says that Tiberius had Vonones slain in order to seize his wealth, so Remmius may have played a double game. Vonones had immense possessions in jewels, and by his presents had acquired the good will of Plancina.

70. Ea Germanico haud minus ira quam per metum accepta. Si limen obsideretur, si effundendus spiritus sub oculis inimicorum foret, quid deinde miserrimae coniugi, quid infantibus liberis eventurum? Lenta videri veneficia; festinare et urguere,

70. 1. quam per metum. The bent of Germanicus to superstition (§ 54, N.) made him give greater weight to the stories of sorcery. A sombre tendency of his mind, which caused him to offer sacrifices at the graves of the illustrious dead, is noticed by Suetonius, Cal. 3.

3. infantibus liberis. He had with him Caligula (seven years old) and Julia (born the year before). Agrippina (aged three) was probably left at Rome, as her mother lands at Brundisium (III. 1) with two children.

7. quis amicitiam. It was an old custom to break friendship by a solemn announcement, forbidding the house. It may have referred particularly to guest-friends, but friendship meant more to a Roman than to us, and certain formalities were observed in it. When Augustus was offended with Gallus he forbade him his house (which, in the emperor's case, included his provinces), and Gallus committed suicide in consequence. Augustus is said to have lamented that he, alone of men, could not show personal feeling without destroying its object.

71. 3. fato. Ablative.

4. parentibus. His mother Antonia, and Tiberius, his father by adoption.

7. fratri. Drusus. Claudius, his brother by blood, was weak minded, and had no influence (III. 18).

9. spes meae. "My expectations." As heir of the empire.

11. muliebri fraude. "Unmanly treachery." Lipsius refers it to the machinations of Livia and Plancina.

ingenti luctu. During the illness of Germanicus the greatest consternation had prevailed at Rome. When the news of his death arrived the mob stoned the temples and broke down the altars of the merciless gods. Cf. § 71—justus mihi dolor etiam adversus deos.

7. exterae nationes. On receiving tidings of the death, foreign chiefs made truces with each other, and the king of Parthia abstained from hunting and feasting (§ 2, N.).

73. 1. sine imaginibus. The images of the Claudii and Drusi were in the palace at Rome (§ 32, N.).

3. propinquitatem—locorum. Germanicus at Antioch, Alexander at Babylon ; 700 miles away, but still in the east.

5. triginta annos. Alexander, 32 ; Germanicus, 33.

6. suorum insidiis. It was suspected that Alexander's death was caused by poison, though most writers ascribe it to his intemperance.

7. mitem erga amicos. While Alexander slew Philotas, Parmenion, and Clitus.

8. certis liberis. "Legitimate children."

 where a cenotaph was erected. Agrippina bore the ashes to Rome.

 that there were blotches on the body, and foam on the mouth, and that the heart would not burn. Pliny quotes the oration of Vitellius, who urged the last fact in the accusation of Piso.

Piso filius properandum in urbem censebat : nihil adhuc inexpiabile admissum, neque suspicionem inbecillas aut inania famae pertimescenda. Discordiam erga Germanicum odio fortasse dignam, non poena : et ademptione provinciae satis factum inimicis. Quod si regrederetur, obsistente Sentio civile bellum incipi ; nec duraturos in partibus centuriones militesque, apud quos recens imperatoris sui memoria et penitus infixus in Caesares amor praevaleret. 5 10

76. 1. centuriones. From the Syrian legiones. Piso had removed their old officers and replaced them by his own nominees (§ 55).

2. non iure ablatam. Tiberius, they said, had given it him, and Germanicus had no right to take it away.

3. consultantl. An ethical dative. Censeo is equivalent to suadeo.

9. imperatoris sui. Germanicus.

10. iustitio. A season of public mourning, usually appointed by the government. The nobles and people wore black garments, houses were darkened, the courts adjourned. On this occasion the Saturnalia of December were passed in sadness (this gives the time [October 10th–December 17th] required to transmit news from Syria to Rome).

18. templorum fores. It was night, Suetonius says, and the great crowd rushed to the capitol with torches and victims, almost tearing down the temple doors in their eagerness. Tiberius was awakened on the Palatine by the shouts, "Salva Roma, salva patria, salvus est Germanicus !"

83. 2. Saliari carmine. Among the names of gods and demigods. The words of the hymn had remained unchanged since the days of Numa, and nothing could more effectually perpetuate a name. The same honour had been paid to Augustus.

3. locis. Seats were to be reserved for the priests of Augustus (I. 54) in the forum, circus, and theatres. Among these the ivory chair of Germanicus was always to be placed, as though he were absent on an expedition.

4. querceae coronae. The oak crown (corona civica), adorned with gold and gems, was given to him who had saved the life of a citizen in battle (III. 31, N.). It had been proposed as an honour for Cicero, when he saved the city from Catiline, and was presented a genere humano to Augustus for ending the civil wars.

11. clipeus. § 37, N.

14. veteres inter scriptores. Cato, the Gracchi, Hortensius, Cicero, etc.

15. cuneum. A triangular block of seats in the theatre. The equites were divided into seniores (above 45 years) and juniiores.

16. turmae. There were six in each century. The transvectio, or solemn procession of equites, occurred on July 15th, the anniversary of the battle of Lake Regillus. They appeared on horseback, with olive crowns and trabeae, to the number of 5000, and passed from the temple of Mars, without the walls, to the temple of Castor and Pollux on the forum. Henceforth, the image of Germanicus was to be borne before them as their standard.

84. 2. duos virilis sexus. One of them, named Germanicus after his uncle, died in A.D. 23. The other was Tiberius Gemellus, murdered by Caligula in 37. There was also a daughter, Julia, born some years before.

85. 4. apud aediles. Prostitutes were obliged to register themselves with the aediles, and were distinguished by an infamous dress. This woman hoped to escape the laws against adultery (§ 50, N.) by abandoning her dignity as a matron.

8. sexaginta dies. The husband was allowed sixty days to punish an unfaithful wife; if he failed to do so, he was supposed

Occiae, quae septem et quinquaginta per annos summa sanctimonia Vestalibus sacris praesederat ; egitque grates Fonteio Agrippae et Domitio Pollioni, quod offerendo filias de officio aliud quam quod mater eius in eodem coniugio manebat : nam Agrippa discidio domum imminuerat. Et Caesar quamvis posthabitam deciens sesterii dote solatus est.

11. sacris Aegyptiis Iudaicisque. The worship of Isis had been disgraced by the trickery of the priests (Josephus, A. J. 18, 3). They were crucified, and the image of the goddess thrown into the Tiber. The Jews, who were very numerous at Rome, were punished on account of an impostor who cheated a lady of a sum of gold, promising to dedicate it in the temple at Jerusalem.

12. quattuor milia. They were all Jews, and were transported under pretence of military service.

13. Sardiniam. Disturbed by its robber tribes, of Ligurian origin. The climate was unhealthy, in consequence of the salt marshes and Sirocco.

15. certam—diem. Dies, when feminine, represents a day with its events (cf. jour and journée) ; hence a day appointed for a certain occurrence.

86. 1. rettulit. The emperor brought his propositions before the senate by his private quaestor (XVI. 27, N.). As pontifex maximus it would be his own duty to initiate (capere) the new virgin, who must be a child between six and ten years of age, and who passed by the ceremony from the control of her father to that of the pontifex (IV. 16, N.). There were six virgins ; the eldest (virgo maxima) presided over the rest.

6. mater ejus. A vestal must be patrima and matrima, i.e. having both parents alive. Their divorce was not an absolute bar to a choice, but was considered a disadvantage.

8. deciens sestertii. £8300. Apparently the usual amount of a dower (XI. 27, N.).

87. 1. Saevitiam annonae. The scarcity of corn in consequence of the Egyptian famine (§ 59, N.).

4. antea. I. 72, N.

5. divinas occupationes. "Dominus appellatus a quodam, denunciavit ne se amplius contumeliae causa nominaret. 88. Reperio apud scriptores senatoresque eorundem temporum Adgandestrii principis Chattorum lectas in senatu literas, quibus mortem Arminii promittebat, si patranda neci venenum mitteretur; responsumque esse non fraude neque occultis, sed palam et armatum populum Romanum hostes suos ulcisci. 5 Qua gloria aequabat se Tiberius priscis imperatoribus, qui venenum in Pyrrum regem vetuerant prodiderantque. Ceterum Arminius abscedentibus Romanis et pulso Maroboduo regnum adfectans libertatem popularium adversam habuit, petitusque armis cum varia fortuna certaret, dolo propinquorum cecidit: 10 liberator haud dubie Germaniae et qui non primordia populi Romani, sicut alii reges ducesque, sed florentissimum imperium laccessierit, proeliis ambiguus, bello non victus. Septem et triginta annos vitae, duodecim potentiae explevit, caniturque adhuc barbaras apud gentes, Graecorum annalibus ignotus, qui 15 sua tantum mirantur, Romanis haud perinde celebris, dum vetera extollimus recentium incuriosi.

88. 1. senatores. Who often left private memoirs. Pliny Sr. wrote a history of the German wars.

6. priscis imperatoribus. Fabricius Luscinius, and his colleague Aemilius Papus, B.C. 278.

8. regnum adfectans. Arminius endeavoured to promote greater discipline and centralisation in his Saxon confederation than Germans of that age could endure.

13. proeliis ambiguus, etc. "Battu quelquefois, jamais il ne fut dompté." —Burnouf.

14. canitur adhuc. Dr. Latham quotes a German popular song:

Herman, sla dermen,
Sla pipen, sla trummen;
De fürsten sind kammen Met all eren mannen;
Hebt Varus uphangen.

"Hermann, sound fiddles, sound pipes, sound drums; the chiefs are come with all their men; hang up Varus." The form and rhyme are comparatively recent, but it may be the echo of an old hero song.

16. haud perinde. "Not especially." celebris. Rare form of celeber.

I. Nihil intermissa navigatione hiberni maris Agrippina Corcyram insulam advehitur, litora Calabriae contra sitam. Illic paucos dies componendo animo insumit, violenta luctu et nescia tolerandi. Interim adventu eius audito intimus quisque amicorum et plerique militares, ut quique sub Germanico stipendia fecerant, multique etiam ignoti vicinis e municipiis, pars officium in principem rati, plures illos secuti, ruere ad oppidum Brundisium, quod naviganti celerrimum fidissimumque adpulsu erat. Neque satis constabat quid pro tempore foret, cum classis paulatim successit, non alacri, ut adsolet, remigio, sed cunctis ad tristitiam compositis. Postquam duobus cum liberis, feralem urnam tenens, egressa navi defixit oculos, idem omnium gemitus; neque discerneres proximos alienos, virorum feminarumve planctus, nisi quod comitatum Agrippinae longo maerore fessum obvii et recentes in dolore anteibant.

2. Miserat duas praetorias cohortes Caesar, addito ut magistratus Calabriae Apulique et Campani suprema erga memoriam filii sui munia fungerentur. Igitur tribunorum centurionumque umeris cineres portabantur; praecedebant incompta signa, versi fasces; atque ubi colonias transgrederentur, atrata plebes, trabeati equites pro opibus loci vestem odores aliaque funerum sollemnia cremabant. Etiam quorum diversa oppida, tamen obvii et victimas atque aras dis manibus statuentes lacrimis et conclamationibus dolorem testabantur. Drusus Tarracinam progressus est cum Claudio fratre liberisque Germanici, qui in urbe fuerant. Consules M. Valerius et M. Aurelius (iam enim magistratum occeperant) et senatus ac magna pars populi viam complevere, disiecti et ut cuique libitum flentes; aberat quippe adulatio, gnaris omnibus laetam Tiberio Germanici mortem male dissimulari.

3. Tiberius atque Augusta publico abstinuere, inferius maiestate sua rati, si palam lamentarentur, an ne omnium sium surrounds the city like a crescent: at its middle a narrow passage communicates with the outer port (proxima maris), where a lighthouse on an island commands a distant view. Both inner and outer harbours were swarming with boats on this occasion.

14. paulatim. With measured beat of the oars. The sad approach is contrasted with the joyful hailing of land by most ships, which came into port with flags flying, incense burning, and oars plying to the sound of gay music.

4. incompta signa. I. 24, N.

5. fasces. Of Germanicus as proconsul (II. 47, N.).

6. vestem, etc. As at funerals. Pyres were erected at the wayside, and funeral rites were observed in each town.

7. diversa. "Off the road."

8. dis manibus. The spirits of Germanicus and his ancestors.

10. liberis. Nero, Drusus, Drusilla, Agrippina.

11. M. Valerius (Messalla Corvinus), M. Aurelius (Messallinus Cotta).

oculis vultum eorum scrutantibus falsi intellegerentur. Matrem Antoniam non apud auctores rerum, non diurna actorum scriptura reperio ullo insigni officio functam, cum super Agrippinam et Drusum et Claudium ceteri quoque consanguinei nominatim perscripti sint, seu valetudine praepediebatur, seu victus luctu animus magnitudinem mali perferre visu non toleravit. Facilius crediderim Tiberio et Augusta, qui domo non excedebant, cohibitam, ut par maeror et matris exemplo avia quoque et patruus attineri viderentur.

4. Dies quo reliquiae tumulo Augusti inferebantur, modo per silentium vastus, modo ploratibus inquires; plena urbis itinera, conlucentes per campum Martis faces. Illic miles cum armis, sine insignibus magistratus, populus per tribus concidisse rem publicam, nihil spei reliquum clमितabant, promptius apertiusque quam ut meminisse imperitantium crederes. Nihil tamen Tiberium magis penetravit quam studia hominum accensa in Agrippinam, cum decus patriae, solum Augusti sanguinem, unicum antiquitatis specimen appellarent versique ad caelum ac deos integram illi subolem ac superstitem iniquorum precarentur.

diurna actorum scriptura. The acta diurna were official bulletins, daily posted, and largely circulated by copies in the city and provinces. They contained accounts of holidays, judicial proceedings, births, deaths, divorces, and general scandal, with such particulars of the proceedings of the senate and of foreign news as the government chose to publish.

8. perferre—non toleravit. "She could not bear to see it." φέρειν οὐκ ἔτλη.

9. Tiberio. Int. 29.

4. 1. tumulo Augusti. I. 8, N.

2. per silentium vastus. "Dreary through silence."

3. faces. The symbols of marriage and death. Propertius says, "Viximus insignes inter utramque facem."

miles cum armis. To perform the decursio (II. 7, N.).

4. sine insignibus. Fasces, curule chairs, robes of state, etc.

per tribus. The thirty-five tribes, arranged in order on the Campus Martius, for the first time since they lost the right to vote.

6. meminisse imperitantium. "That they remembered the princes who were left."

8. solum Augusti sanguinem. They do not count the younger Julia, still living in banishment.

10. integram, etc. "That her children might be preserved to survive their enemies."

5. 1. publici funerals. Called a funus censorium (IV. 15, N.).

 memoriam virtutis carmina et laudationes, et lacrimas vel doloris imitamenta ? 15

6. Gnarum id Tiberio fuit ; utque premeret vulgi sermones, monuit edicto multos inlustrium Romanorum ob rem publicam obisse, neminem tam flagranti desiderio celebratum. Idque et sibi et cunctis egregium, si modus adiceretur. Non enim eadem decora principibus viris et imperatori populo, quae 5 modicis domibus aut civitatibus. Convenisse recenti dolori luctum et ex maerore solacia ; sed referendum iam animum ad firmitudinem, ut quondam divus Iulius amissa unica filia, ut divus Augustus ereptis nepotibus abstruserint tristitiam. Nil opus vetustioribus exemplis, quotiens populus Romanus clades 10 exercituum, interitum ducum, funditus amissas nobiles familias constanter tulerit. Principes mortales, rem publicam aeternam esse. Proin repeterent sollemnia, et quia ludorum Megalesium spectaculum suberat, etiam voluptates resumerent.

5. Claudiorum Iuliorumque imagines. II. 32, N. Drusus was a Julius by adoption. See the account of Drusus Jr.'s funeral (IV. 9).

6. laudatum pro rostris. The funeral of a noble halted in the forum on the way to the Campus Martius, and the next of kin pronounced the funeral oration. On that occasion Augustus prayed the gods to grant himself as glorious a death as they had granted Drusus.

11. fratrem. Drusus Jr.

12. unius diei via. Tarracina is sixty-two miles from Rome. Horace spent two days and a night on the journey.

13. propositam toro effigiem. Where the body could not be displayed, a wax image was carried on a cushion.

14. vel. "Or at least." Hired mourners were employed at funerals.

6. 2. monuit edicto. The emperor was accustomed to publish, not only decrees, but proclamations and requests, by posting them in conspicuous places.

ob rem publicam. II. 83, N.

3. Idque. "This indeed did honour both to himself and the citizens." To himself, as the kinsman of Germanicus : to the people, whose good feeling it proved.

8. unica filia. Julia, the wife of Pompey. She died just before her father's British expedition.

10. clades exercituum. At the Trebia, Thrasymene, Cannae, etc.

11. interitum ducum. The Scipios in Spain, Aemilius Paullus at Cannae, Claudius Marcellus ; nobiles familias, the Fabii at the Cremera.

13. Megalesium. The feast of Cybele, April 4th to 10th. The mourning had lasted since December, even the Saturnalia having been given up.

7. Tum exuto iustitio reditum ad munia, et Drusus Illyricos ad exercitus profectus est, erectis omnium animis spe petendae e Pisone ultionis et crebro questu, quod vagus interim per amoena Asiae atque Achaiae adroganti et subdola mora

8. At Piso praemisso in urbem filio datisque mandatis per quae principem molliret ad Drusum pergit, quem haud fratris interitu trucem quam remoto aemulo aequiorem sibi sperabat. Tiberius quo integrum iudicium ostentaret, exceptum comiter

10 Tiberio, cum incallidus alioqui et facilis iuventa senilibus tum artibus uteretur.

9. Piso Delmatico mari tramisso relictisque apud Anconam navibus per Picenum ac mox Flaminiam viam adsequitur legionem, quae e Pannonia in urbem, dein praesidio Africae ducebatur: eaque res agitata rumoribus, ut in agmine atque itinere

7. 1. munia. Holding court, and worshipping the gods.

2. spe. A conjecture of Freinsheim, from the words animi-s, pe-tendae.

4. adroganti. Because he despised the charges; subdolae, because he was gaining time to suppress evidence.

7. nodo crinium. In a hollow bodkin; a similar story was told of Cleopatra.

8. nec ulla—signa. Which seemed to show that she had been smothered to suppress her evidence.

8. 1. filio. Marcus (II. 76, N.).

2. haud—trucem = non tam trucem. Piso mistook the temper of Drusus, who shared none of his father's suspiciousness, and was personally attached to Germanicus. On coins they are represented as sitting on one curule chair, or standing together at an altar. Drusus afterwards protected the children of Germanicus.

4. integrum iudicium. "A fair trial." Sc. fore.

5. sueta—liberalitate. Young nobles on a governor's staff received no pay. Tiberius attached rising statesmen to himself by these personal favours.

10. facilis. "Apt to commit himself."

9. 1. Anconam. Hence he struck west to the Flaminian Way, which brought him to Narnia.

2. legionem. Nonam. It was sent to Africa to aid against Tacfarinas (II. 52), and returned to Pannonia in A.D. 24.

4. in agmine atque itinere. "On their march and his journey." His ambitious conduct and loose discipline in Syria (II. 55) made his influence with the army suspected.

5. vitandae suspicionis. Int. 50.

Tiberi devectus auxit vulgi iras, quia navem tumulo Caesarum ipse, feminarum comitatu Plancina et vultu alacres incessere.

Fuit inter inritamenta invidiae domus foro imminens festa ornatu 10 conviviumque et epulae et celebritate loci nihil occultum.

10. Postera die Fulcinius Trio Pisonem apud consules postulavit. Contra Vitellius ac Veranius ceterique Germanicum comitati tendebant, nullas esse partis Trioni; neque se accusatores, sed rerum indices et testes mandata Germanici perlaturus. Ille dimissa eius causae delatione, ut priorem vitam 5 accusaret obtinuit, petitumque est a principe cognitionem exciperet. Quod ne reus quidem abnuebat, studia populi et patrum metuens: contra Tiberium spernendis rumoribus validum et conscientiae matris innexum esse; veraque aut in deterius credita iudice ab uno facilius discerni, odium et invidiam apud 10 multos valere. Haud fallebat Tiberium moles cognitionis quaque ipse fama distraheretur. Igitur paucis familiarium adhibitis minas accusantium et hinc preces audit integramque causam ad senatum remittit.

11. Atque interim Drusus rediens Illyrico, quamquam patres censuissent ob receptum Maroboduum et res priore aestate gestas ut ovans iniret, prolato honore urbem intravit.

5. priorem vitam. Roman law did not confine a prosecution to the facts in issue; former misdeeds could be urged as matter of aggravation.

8. spernendis rumoribus validum.
Tiberius was constitutionally indifferent to the good or ill opinion of his contemporaries, for whom he entertained a cynical contempt. Compare IV. 39—"Validus spernendis honoribus."

9. conscientiae matris. All this is expressed as Piso's opinion. Tacitus avoids committing himself.

12. paucis familiarium adhibitis.
The emperor acted as supreme judge when he pleased, but avoided too frequent use of the office. When he took cognizance of a case, he employed men of learning and influence as his assessors and advisers.

veneni crimen visus est diluisse, quod ne accusatores quidem satis firmabant, in convivio Germanici, cum super eum Piso 5 discumberet, infectos manibus eius cibos arguentes. Quippe absurdum videbatur inter aliena servitia et tot adstantium visu, ipso Germanico coram, id ausum; offerebatque familiam reus

Several words are missing before scripsissent. A similar lacuna is found at § 16, showing that a defective leaf in an old manuscript made gaps in two pages. Perhaps the meaning is, that the senate asked to see what Tiberius and Piso had written to each other. A bold request ; but men were greatly excited.

15. Gemonias. A flight of steps from the capitol (on the site of the modern church of Ara Coeli) to the forum, near the Mamertine dungeon. On the last New Year's Day of Sejanus's power, while he descended from the capitol by the Sacer Clivus, his attendants were forced by the crush of the people to go down the Gemoniae, when they slipped and fell—an ill omen for their master (IV. 70, N.). This gives an idea of the position and steepness of the steps. Down them the naked bodies of executed traitors were cast, and lay, guarded by soldiers, at the bottom until corruption began (VI. 19). They were then dragged by a flesh-hook through the streets and cast into the Tiber.

Pisonem vocari iubet* crebrisque interrogationibus 10 exquirat, qualem Piso diem supremum noctemque exegisset. Atque illo pleraque sapienter, quaedam inconsultius respondente, recitat codicillos a Pisone in hunc ferme modum compositos: "conspiratione inimicorum et invidia falsi criminis oppressus, quatenus veritati et innocentiae meae nusquam locus 15 est, deos immortales testor vixisse me, Caesar, cum fide adversum te, neque alia in matrem tuam pietate; vosque oro liberis meis consulatis, ex quibus Cn. Piso qualicumque fortunae meae non est adiunctus, cum omne hoc tempus in urbe egerit, M. Piso repetere Suriam dehortatus est. Atque utinam ego potius 20 filio iuveni quam ille patri seni cessisset. 27. 2. tuendae libertatis et firmandae concordiae. Int. 50. Refers to the laws for electing tribunes and regulating debts.

3. decemviri. B.C. 450. The laws of the twelve tables, gathered, according to tradition, from Greek sources, were the fountain of Roman jurisprudence.

4. finis aequi iuris. "Which ended sound legislation." Tacitus, a staunch aristocrat, looked with disapproval upon the constitutional history which followed, and of which he gives a summary. A few laws were passed to restrain crime, as the Calpurnian, de pecuniis repetundis, or the Cornelian, de veneficiis, but most of the legislation related to the attainment of privileges and honores illicitos (consulship, etc.) by the plebeians, or was directed against illustrious patricians, e.g. Camillus. The popular cause was supported by Ti. and C. Gracchus (B.C. 133-121), and disgraced by Saturninus, who resisted the lawful government, and was slain in 100 B.C. M. Livius Drusus Libo endeavoured to bribe the rabble to support the senate (B.C. 91) by proposing grain and land laws, but was murdered. The socii, or Italian nations, were promised citizenship by some tribunes, and cheated of it by the veto (intercessionem) of others, until they won it for themselves by the Italian war (B.C. 91-88), followed by the civil war between Marius and Sulla. The latter, during his dictatorship, re-established by legislation the authority of the senate, but his laws were attacked by Lepidus immediately after his death in 78, and Pompey restored the power of the tribunes in 70. In the last age of the republic special laws were passed to injure individuals (a measure contrary to the twelve tables), and Cicero was driven into banishment by Clodius.

6. apiscendi. Sc. causa.

28. 1. tertium consul. B.C. 52. Pompey was appointed sole consul, to settle the disorders of the state.

3. auctor idem ac subversor. He ordained that proconsuls should receive provinces five years after their consulship; that no one could stand for an office unless present in the city; that no personal influence should be used with juries; and increased the penalties for bribery at elections. But he had his proconsulship in Spain extended for four years; allowed Caesar to seek the consulship while ab-

11. altius penetrabant. The informers went too far.

12. status. "Their fortunes," on which their political status depended (I. 75, 9).

29. 2. ingressum iuventam. On the day of majority, June 7th, A.D. 20.

3. vigintiviratus. City officials were of four classes—triumviri capitales, triumviri monetales, quatuorviri viarum curandarum, and decemviri stlitibus iudicandis. An eques must have held one of these twenty posts, or have served as tribunus militum (I. 44, N.), to be eligible to the quaestorship, and consequently to the senate. This constituted a political apprenticeship. The legal age for quaestors was twenty-four.

4. non sine inrisu. Tiberius, like Augustus, played the farce of maintaining republican institutions. Augustus had prayed favours for his stepsons, Tiberius and Drusus, from the subservient senate in B.C. 24 and 19.

15. videbatur. Sc. Tiberius.

16. ultra. Sc. quam fas esset.

30. 1. L. Volusius (Saturninus).

3. censoria — potestate. The last regular censors were Munatius Plancus and Aemilius Lepidus in B.C. 22. After this Augustus held the difficult and delicate authority of censor in his own hand, acting with perpetual censoria potestas, while republican censors only held office for eighteen months in each lustrum of five years. In virtue of this office the emperor appointed and degraded senators and equites, controlling them by the censoria, as he did the nation by tribunicia potestas.

4. equitum decuriis. Equites who had an equus publicus were divided into turmae, but all who had the equestrian fortune of £3300 were divided into decuriae, and liable to jury duty.

8. aditu. The door was open for political advancement.

13. incolumi Maecenate. "While Maecenas retained his influence."

31. 1. Drusi secundus consulatus. Xiphilinus says that the Romans considered it unlucky to be the emperor's colleague. Varus, Piso, and Germanicus had enjoyed the ill-omened honour, as Sejanus did afterwards.

patris atque filii collegio insignis. Nam biennio ante Germanici cum Tiberio idem honor neque patruo laetus neque natura tam conexus fuerat. Eius anni principio Tiberius quasi firmandae valetudini in Campaniam concessit, longam et 5 continuum absentiam paulatim meditans, sive ut amoto patre Drusus munia consulatus solus impleret. Ac forte parva res magnum ad certamen progressa praebuit iuveni materiem apiscendi favoris. Domitius Corbulo praetura functus de L. Sulla nobili iuvene questus est apud senatum, quod sibi inter spec- 10 tacula gladiatorum loco non decessisset. Pro Corbulone aetas, patrius mos, studia seniorum erant: contra Mamercus Scaurus et L. Arruntius alique Sullae propinqui nitebantur. Certabantque orationibus et memorabantur exempla maiorum, qui iuventutis irreverentiam gravibus decretis notavissent, donec Drusus 15 apta temperandis animis disseruit; et satisfactum Corbuloni per Mamercum, qui patruus simul ac vitricus Sullae et oratorum ea aetate uberrimus erat. 6. meditans. "Practising." Tiberius returned to Rome in the next year (22), but five years later left the city for ever.

10. inter spectacula. Seats were reserved for senators at the theatre, but not at the circus or amphitheatre until the reign of Claudius (XV. 32, N.).

12. Mamercus (Aemilius) Scaurus married Sextia, the widow of his half-brother, so that Sulla was at once his nephew and stepson.

19. magistratuum. Besides the quatuorviri viarum curandarum (§ 29, N.), who took charge of the city streets, commissioners were appointed for the national roads (ex-praetors or ex-consuls for the more important ones), who let out the work to contractors (manripes).

hasta. Their goods were sold at public auctions (sub hasta).

32. 6. Asiae sorte depellendum. In appointing proconsuls to the provinces (I. 74, N.) the senate chose ex-consuls, or ex-praetors, grading them by seniority; and by the provisions of the lex Papia Poppaea (§ 25, N.) Asia and Africa, the richest provinces (II. 47, N.), were assigned to the two oldest consulars, who depellendum incusavit, adverso senatu, qui Lepidum mitem magis quam ignavum, paternas ei angustias et nobilitatem sine probro actam honori quam ignominiae habendam ducebat.

33. Inter quae Severus Caecina censuit ne quem magistratum, cui provincia obvenisset, uxor comitaretur, multum ante repetito concordem sibi coniugem et sex partus enixam, seque quae in publicum statueret domi servavisse, cohibita intra 5 Italiam, quamquam ipse pluris per provincias quadraginta stipendia explevisset. Haud enim frustra placitum olim ne feminae in socios aut gentes externas traherentur: inesse mulierum comitatu quae pacem luxu, bellum formidine morentur et Romanum agmen ad similitudinem barbari incessus con-
 10 vertant. Non inbecillum tantum et inparem laboribus sexum, sed si licentia adsit, saevum, ambitiosum, potestatis avidum; incedere inter milites, habere ad manum centuriones; praesedissem nuper feminam exercitio cohortium, decursu legionum. Cogitarent ipsi, quotiens repetundarum aliqui arguerentur, 15 plura uxoribus obiectari; his statim adhaerescere deterrimum quemque provincialium, ab his negotia suscipi, transigi; duorum egressus coli, duo esse praetoria, pervicacibus magis et inpotentibus mulierum iussis, quae Oppiis quondam aliisque legibus constrictae, nunc vinclis exsolutis domos, fora, iam et exercitus

34. Páucorum haec adsensu audita: plures obturbabant, then drew lots for them. On this occasion Tiberius advises the senate to pass by the regular order, and appoint a young man for Africa. Pompeius uses the opportunity to attack Lepidus, the senior consular (seniority was counted from the year of office), and advises that he should be deprived of the peaceful province of Asia.

8. paternas et angustias. His poverty was no fault of his own; moreover, it was the comparative poverty of a Roman consular (§ 17, N.), for Lepidus afterwards restores a basilica (§ 72) at his own expense.

neque relatum de negotio neque Caecinam dignum tantae rei censorem. Mox Valerius Messalinus, cui parens Messalla inerat-que imago paternae facundiae, respondit multa duritiae veterum melius et laetius mutata; neque enim, ut olim, obsideri urbem bellis aut provincias hostilis esse. Et pauca feminarum necessitatibus concedi, quae ne coniugum quidem penates, adeo socios non onerent; cetera promiscua cum marito, nec ullum in eo pacis impedimentum. Bella plane accinctis obeunda: sed revertentibus post laborem quod honestius quam uxorum levamentum? At quasdam in ambitionem aut avaritiam prolapsas. Quid? Ipsorum magistratuum nonne plerosque variis libidinibus obnoxios? Non tamen ideo neminem in provinciam mitti. Corruptos saepe pravitatibus uxorum maritos: num ergo omnis caelibes integros? Placuisse quondam Oppias leges, sic temporibus rei publicae postulantibus: remissum aliquid postea et mitigatum, quia expedierit. Frustra nostram ignaviam alia ad vocabula transferri nam viri in eo culpam, si femina modum excedat. Porro ob unius aut alterius inbecillum animum male eripi maritis consortia rerum secundarum adversarumque. Simul sexum natura invalidum deseri et exponi suo luxu, cupidinibus alienis. Vix praesenti custodia manere inlaesa coniugia: quid fore, si per plures annos in modum discidii oblitterentur? Sic obviam irent iis quae alibi peccarentur, ut flagitiorum urbis meminissent. Addidit pauca Drusus de matrimonio suo; nam principibus adeunda saepius longinqua imperii. Quotiens divum Augustum in occidentem atque orientem meavisse comite Livia! Se quoque in Illyricum profectum et, si ita conducatur, alias ad gentes iturum, haud semper aequo animo, si ab uxore carissima et tot communium liberorum parente divelleretur. Sic Caecinae sententia elusa est.

Cestius senator disseruit principes quidem instar deorum esse, sed neque a dis nisi iustas supplicum preces audiri, neque quemquam in Capitolium aliave urbis templa perfugere, ut eo subsidio ad flagitia utatur. This sacredness had been extended to the ensigns of the army (I. 39, N.), and finally to all images of the emperor. 40. 1. magnitudinem aeris alieni. The Gauls, ignorant of the laws of trade, suddenly introduced to the Roman luxury and subjected to the Roman tribute, had recourse to the usurers, who charged ten per cent in the city (VI. 16, N.), and whatever they could get in the provinces. Seneca had £330,000 at interest in Britain; he suddenly called in his loans, and the general distress occasioned the rebellion of Boadicea. He reasonably observes in his writings that a small loan makes a debtor; a large one an enemy.

5. civitas—data. Julius Caesar admitted many of his Gallic adherents to the citizenship. They became his clients, and assumed his name, which was very common in Gaul (Julius Indus, Julius Africanus, etc.), as was the name of Pompeius in Spain (XIV. 41, N.).

10. tributorum. The direct land tax levied from the provincials by census, but without their consent (I. 31, N.). The Gauls complain that there is no end of it.

13. nihil validum. The praetorians and the city cohorts were Italians, but the legions consisted of provincials, who acquired citizenship by enrolment. Half of the army consisted of the auxilia of conquered nations (I. 36, N.).

11. super eo. i.e. seizing Sacrovir.

42. 1. alam. I. 49, N. Called the ala Trevirorum, and mentioned by Tacitus in the Histories, showing that the auxilia, under the empire, had a permanent organisation.

5. clientium. A Celtic lord protected a body of clansmen and vassals, who were bound by the closest ties of duty and honour to support him in war. The relationship is described by Sir Walter Scott, as it existed among the Gaels of the middle ages.

7. C. Silius. Commander in Alsace. The two generals advance upon the wood in opposite directions. Silius brought with him from the south Julius Indus, whose regiment (ala Indiana) was named from its commander, as is proved by inscriptions.

10. adhuc. Int. 10.

43. 2. procul. 300 miles from Mayence, where the legions of Upper Germany were stationed.

Augustodunum. Now Autun. Caesar's Bibracte (Beuvrai) was in the immediate neighbourhood. Autun is a flourishing town of 20,000 inhabitants, with interesting local antiquities, and a société Éduenne. The college was called scholae Maenianae. It was restored by Constantius Chlorus, who appointed Eumenes president (A.D. 296). Eumenes' inaugural address is extant.

6. juventuti. The young men of the Aeduan nation ; not simply the students.

quadraginta milia. The Aeduans in Caesar's time furnished 35,000 men as a second levy.

7. sul. Int. 34.

44. 1. quattuor et sexaginta. Intended to include all the tribes. Sixty tribes inscribed their names on the altar of Augustus at Lyons (I. 57, N.). Arrian says there were 400 in Gaul, but most of these were subdivisions of more important tribes.

46. Non diu haec nec apud laetos: etenim propinquabat legionum acies, inconditque ac militiae nescii oppidani neque oculis neque auribus satis competebant. Contra Silius, etsi praesumpta spes hortandi causas exemerat, clamitabat tamen, pudendum ipsis quod Germaniarum victores adversum Gallos 5 tamquam in hostem ducerentur. "Una nuper cohors rebellem Turonum, una ala Treverum, paucae huius ipsius exercitus turmae profligavere Sequanos. Quanto pecunia dites et voluptatibus opulentos, tanto magis inbelles Aeduos evincite et fugientibus consulite." Ingens ad ea clamor, et circumfudit 10 eques frontemque pedites invasere; nec cunctatum apud latera. Paulum morae attulere ferrati restantibus lamminis adversum pila et gladios; sed miles correptis securibus et dolabris, ut si murum perrumperet, caedere tegmina et corpora; quidam trudibus aut furcis inertem molem prosternere, iacentesque 15 nullo ad resurgendum nisu quasi exanimes linquebantur. Sacrovir primo Augustodunum, dein metu deditiois in villam propinquam cum fidissimis pergit. Illic sua manu, reliqui mutuis ictibus occidere: incensa super villa omnes cremavit.

46. 3. competebant. They were hardly fit to look upon the legions, or to hear their shout, without running away.

8. Quanto. Sc. magis (Int. 46, b).

9. evincite. "Prove to the world."

10. consulite = parcite. He wished to spare the young noblemen whom Sacrovir had forced into his army.

11. cunctatum. The only instance of the passive of cunctor, though it is common enough with some other deponents.

15. trudibus. A pole, shod with a semi-circular iron blade, for pushing. See Smith's Dictionary of Antiquities, dolabrum.

19. super. "Over their heads."

47. 3. superfuisse = superasse. "Had overcome the danger."

5. neque decorum principibus. On the steadfastness and policy of Tiberius, see I. 47.

6. omisisse urbem. A conjecture of Freinsheim for omissa urbe, which would leave a lacuna. Omisisse is aorist infinitive used for a present.

48. Sub idem tempus, ut mors Sulpicii Quirini publicis exsequiis frequentaretur, petivit a senatu. Nihil ad veterem et patriciam Sulpiciorum familiam Quirinius pertinuit, ortus apud municipium Lanuvium: sed impiger militiae, et acribus 5 ministeriis consulatum sub divo Augusto, mox expugnatis per Ciliciam Homonadensium castellis insignia triumphi adeptus, datusque rector Gaio Caesari Armeniam optinenti, Tiberium quoque Rhodi agentem coluerat. Quod tunc patefecit in secoram multisque inlustribus feminis, per vaniloquentiam iecerat.

 Ut delator extitit, ceteris ad dicendum testimonium exterritis, sola Vitellia nihil se audivisse adseveravit. Sed arguentibus ad safe return of Tiberius from Gaul, and thanksgivings for the success of his plans.

11. e Campania. To be construed with ovans. Tiberius was to enjoy an ovation (II. 64, N.), as though he had won a victory there.

13. tot—triumphos. Suetonius says that Tiberius enjoyed both ovations and triumphs; Velleius, that he triumphed three times, and might have claimed four triumphs more.

48. 1. publicis exsequiis. IV. 15, N.

3. Sulpiciorum. One was an eminent jurist in Cicero's time. The emperor Galba belonged to the family.

12. sordidamque et praepotentem senectam. § 23, N.

49. 2. celebre carmen. Dio Cassius calls it ἐπιτάφιον ἐπιφανή.

4. composuisse. He wrote an obituary eulogy of Drusus in expectation of his death.

maiore praemio. Because Drusus was dearer to the emperor than Germanicus had been.

6. iecerat. Such recitations of poems were the only means of publishing them, and the duty of listening to one's friends' performances became a serious nuisance. In this case, Lutorius could not resist the temptation to read the poem to some ladies of his acquaintance, thinking that they could keep the secret.

50. Contra M'. Lepidus in hunc modum exorsus est : " Si, patres conscripti, unum id spectamus, quam nefaria voce Lutorius Priscus mentem suam et aures hominum polluerit, neque carcer neque laqueus, ne serviles quidem cruciatus in eum sufferint. Sin flagitia et facinora sine modo sunt, suppliciis ac 5 remediis principis moderatio maiorumque et vestra exempla temperant, et vana a scelestis, dicta a maleficiis differunt, est locus sententiae, per quam neque huic delictum impune sit et nos clementiae simul ac severitatis non paeniteat. Saepe audivi principem nostrum conquerentem, si quis sumpta morte misericordiam eius praevenisset. Vita Lutorii in integro sit, qui neque servatus in periculum rei publicae neque interfectus in exemplum ibit. Studia illi, ut plena vaecordiae, ita inania et fluxa sunt ; nec quicquam grave ac serium ex eo metuas, qui suorum ipse flagitiorum proditor non virorum animis sed mulier- 15 ularum adrepat. Cedat tamen urbe et bonis amissis aqua et igni arceatur : quod perinde censeo ac si lege maiestatis tene- retur."

51. Solus Lepido Rubellius Blandus e consularibus ad- sensit : ceteri sententiam Agrippae secuti, ductusque in carcerem Priscus ac statim exanimatus. Id Tiberius solitis sibi ambagi- bus apud senatum incusavit, cum extolleret pietatem quamvis modicas principis iniurias acriter ulciscientium, deprecaretur tam 5

50. 3. neque carcer. The Mamertine dungeon, for state criminals, was built at the foot of the Capitoline hill by Servius Tullius. The lower of its two cells is the traditional place of St. Peter's imprisonment, and is still in good preservation. Additions were made to this prison at the era of the empire.

4. neque laqueus. Traitors cast into the dungeon were strangled. This punishment was rarely employed under the republic (e.g. in the case of Catiline's accomplices), but became more frequent under the tyranny of the emperors, until it was superseded by the military punishment of decapitation (XV. 60, N.).

serviles—cruciatus. The cross.

5. Sin. This must be understood again before supplicia, making a protasis of three clauses ; the apodosis begins with est locus.

6. exempla. "Precedents."

9. Saepe audivi. II. 31 ; III. 16.

11. in integro. Lutorius had not committed suicide, and they might spare themselves future regret.

17. quod perinde censeo. "For by this motion I propose the penalty of treason." Lepidus hints two things—1st, That Lutorius was not technically guilty of treason, which could only be committed against the emperor and his mother (IV. 34) ; 2d, That deportation (IV. 31, N.) was the legal penalty for treason, though custom had begun to authorise the capital punishment which afterwards became the law.

51. 1. e consularibus. For they voted first after the consul elect.

4. pietatem. "Loyalty." As pater patriae the emperor claimed the filial duty of his subjects.

 5 pretiis occultabantur ; ventris et ganeae paratus adsiduis sermonibus vulgati fecerant curam, ne princeps antiquae parsimoniae durius adverteret. Nam incipiente C. Bibulo ceteri quoque aediles disseruerant, sperni sumptuariam legem vetitaeque utensilium pretia augeri in dies, nec mediocribus remediis sisti
 10 posse. Et consulti patres integrum id negotium ad principem distulerant. Sed Tiberius saepe apud se pensitato, an coerceri tam profusae cupidines possent, num coercitio plus damni in rem publicam ferret, quam indecorum adtrectare quod non obtineret vel retentum ignominiam et infamiam virorum inlus-15 trium posceret, postremo literas ad senatum composuit, quarum sententia in hunc modum fuit.

8. ante diem decimum. The numeral, omitted in the MS., is supplied from Dio Cassius, who adds that Tiberius granted the days of grace, not to benefit the condemned, but to keep all punishment in his own hands.

ad aerarium. The treasury of the nation, and the repository of archives (tabularium), were connected with the temple of Saturn at the foot of the Capitoline (II. 41, N.). In them all decrees of the senate were registered and engraved on brazen tablets. Before this was done a vote was called auctoritas (not consultum) senatus, and merely expressed the sentiment of the house. The same name was given to votes passed by less than a quorum (400 under Augustus) of the senate.

52. 1. C. Sulpicius (Galba), D. Haterius (Agrippa).

2. domi suspecta. "(The year) was marked at Rome by the expectation of severe measures."

6. antiquae parsimoniae. Tiberius made a display of it, serving remains of yesterday's dinner at entertainments in the palace. He stopped the public sale of pastry, and checked the luxury of cook shops, by issuing directions to the aediles in virtue of his censoria potestas (§ 30, N.). He did not like to have them interfere of their own motion.

8. aediles. They assisted in the regimen morum (II. 85, N.). Aediles had no right to put a motion (II. 33, N.) themselves ; one of the consuls must have started the question at their request. Both consuls were notorious profligates, but they might make the more show of virtue on this account.

sumptuariam legem. Augustus, by a series of enactments, relating to entertainments, furniture, etc., had completed legislation on this subject dating from the period of the leges Oppiae (III. 33, N.).

9. utensilium. Refers especially to provisions. Three mullets were sold about this time for £250.

14. retentum. "Even if it succeeded."

53. "Ceteris forsitan in rebus, patres conscripti, magis expediat me coram interrogari et dicere quid e re publica censeam: in hac relatione subtrahi oculos meos melius fuit, ne denotantibus vobis ora ac metum singulorum, qui pudendi luxus arguerentur, ipse etiam viderem eos ac velut deprenderem. Quod si mecum ante viri strenui, aediles, consilium habuissent, nescio an suasurus fuerim omittere potius praevalida et adulta vitia quam hoc adsequi, ut palam fieret quibus flagitiis impares essemus. Sed illi quidem officio functi sunt, ut ceteros quoque magistratus sua munia implere velim: mihi autem neque honestum silere neque proloqui expeditum, quia non aedilis aut praetoris aut consulis partis sustineo. denotantibus vobis. "While you were scanning."

6. aediles, consilium. Perhaps a sarcasm. The counsellors of the aediles were among the lowest officials (Juv. III. 163). Tiberius throughout implies that the aediles have been meddling with matters beyond their sphere.

14. unius invidia. Sc. Principis.

16. Villarumne infinita spatia? Seneca says that villas were as large as cities, with their outbuildings, colonnades, gardens, etc.

Familiarum. II. 33, N.

17. aeris tabularumque. Corinthian bronzes of archaic or artistic interest, and the works of Greek painters, were almost beyond price. Compare the virtuoso Damasippus's remarks in Horace, Sat. II. 3, 20.

18. vestes (Sericas et Coas). II. 33, 75, NN. Men wore the dress of women, painted their faces, pulled out their beards, etc.

19. lapidum causa. Oriental gems. Pliny calculates the annual exportation of specie to India for pearls at £830,000. Lollia Paulina wore £330,000 in gems for one toilet. They were brought from the east by her nabob grandfather.

54. 6. coerceas. Indefinite second person.

10. securiorem. "More reckless."

13. unius urbis. Until the franchise was extended by the social war, B.C. 88 ; but under the empire, "the Syrian Orontes poured into the Tiber."

14. intra Italiam. Before the conquests of the Scipios had introduced Greek art and eastern luxury.

15. nostra consumere. Refers to the fortunes acquired by confiscation during the civil wars.

18. nemo refert. "No one brings up the question." Tiberius rightly urges that the most alarming symptom of luxury is the extent of pleasure grounds, which were destroying Italian agriculture. —Hor. Carm. II. 15. In reality, corn-raising did not pay in the peninsula after the Punic wars had opened the granaries of Sicily and Africa. Even in the time of Cato the Censor grazing was the only profitable farming, and this destroyed the free rural population, the strength of Rome ; Latifundia perdidere Italiam. Sir Thomas More, in the Utopia, makes the same complaint of large sheep farms in the England of his day.

55. 1. remissa aedilibus. "The aediles were excused from the duty." A polite way of putting it.

luxusque mensae, a fine Actiaci belli ad ea arma, quis Servius Galba rerum adeptus est, per annos centum profusis sumptibus exerciti paulatim exolvere. Causas eius mutationis quaerere libet. Dites olim familiae nobilium aut claritudine insignes studio magnificentiae prolabebantur. Nam etiam tum plebem socios regna colere et coli licitum; ut quisque opibus domo paratu speciosus, per nomen et clientelas inlustrior habebatur. Postquam caedibus saevitum et magnitudo famae exitio erat, ceteri ad sapientiora convertere. Simul novi homines e municipiis et coloniis atque etiam provinciis in senatum crebro adsumpti domesticam parsimoniam intulerunt, et quamquam fortuna vel industria plerique pecuniosam ad senectam pervenirent, mansit tamen prior animus. Sed praecipuus adstricti moris auctor Vespasianus fuit, antiquo ipse cultu victuque. Obsequium inde in principem et aemulandi amor validior quam poena ex legibus et metus. Nisi forte rebus cunctis inest quidam velut orbis, ut quem ad modum temporum vices, ita morum vertantur; nec omnia apud priores meliora, sed nostra quoque aetas multa laudis et artium imitanda posteris tulit. Verum haec nobis in maiores certamina ex honesto maneant.

etiam tum. Under Augustus and Tiberius the Roman nobles were greater than kings. They bought the attendance of the people at their levees by doles and shows. They won the devotion and flattery of foreign kings and cities by their conduct when invested with proconsular power, or by advancing provincial interests at Rome. The Marcelli were hereditary patrons of the Sicilians, the Fabii of the Allobroges, etc.

5. publicis privatisve. The indefinite ve is properly used in proposed laws, to connect different classes which will arise in the future.

7. qui tribuniciam potestatem ge-rerent. As the tribunicia potestas was counted by years, it marked the year of the emperor's reign. It was regularly employed on coins, but in general usage the custom was retained of dating by the consules ordinarii of the year (I. 83, N.).

8. aureis literis. The speeches of the emperor were often graven on brass and suspended in the senate chamber, while decrees of the senate were kept in the tabularium (§ 51, N.).

9. deridiculo. He was eighty-five years old, and the world had nothing to offer in return for his flattery, but he flattered on through habit.

Quinque et septuaginta annis post Cornelii Merulae caedem neminem suffectum, neque tamen cessavisse religiones. Quod si per tot annos possit non creari nullo sacrorum damno, quanto facilius afuturum ad unius anni proconsulare imperium? 59. Adversus quae cum augur Lentulus aliique varie dissererent, eo decursum est ut pontificis maximi sententiam operirentur. Tiberius dilata notione de iure flaminis, decretas ob tribuniciam Drusi potestatem caerimonias temperavit, nominatim arguens insolentiam sententiae aureasque literas contra patrium morem. Recitatae et Drusi epistolae quamquam ad modestiam flexae pro superbissimis accipiuntur. sorte. § 32, N. He was senior consular.

3. egredi Italia. In early times the Dialis could not leave the city, even for a night. Augustus had somewhat modified this rule (§ 71, N.).

4. Martialium Quirinaliumque. Also forbidden to leave the city by early law. Sharp contentions had arisen on this subject between the flamens and their superior, the pontifex maximus, in B.C. 242, 189, and 131. In the latter case, the pontifex Crassus, who was also consul, forbade the other consul, Flaccus, who was flamen Martialis, to leave the city. But Crassus himself soon abandoned his pontifical duties in the city to attack Aristonicus in Asia, and was slain; an event considered ominous. Under Tiberius the Martialis and Quirinalis had been set free from the restriction.

7. pontifices. The pontifices served all the gods; the flamen, one.

9. (L.) Cornelii Merulae. Dialis in 87 B.C. Elected consul in Cinna's place, he killed himself in the temple of Jupiter at Cinna's return, cursing his enemies. Julius Caesar was elected his successor, but not consecrated, because of Sulla's displeasure. Augustus revived the office B.C. 11. The MS. gives duo, some early transcriber having written LXXII for LXXV.

14. summum hominum. It was the invariable custom of the emperors to control religious matters by holding the pontificate. Tiberius received it A.D. 15.

59. 3. notione = cognitione.

5. insolentiam sententiae. "The unusual character of the vote" (§ 57, N.).

9. auspicia. Auspices could only be taken in proper form upon the arx Romana. As general, Drusus had fought under his father's auspices, but as consors tribuniciae potestatis he was expected to take them for himself.

4. asyla. § 36, N.

5. obaerati. The temple of Diana at Ephesus, with its extensive enclosure, was a special refuge for debtors.

3. Cenchreum amnem. A small stream which flows into the Aegean south of the city. It passed through the cypress grove Ortygia, traditionally named from Latona's midwife. Delos was also called Ortygia in early times.

Sullae constitutis nitebantur, quorum ille Antiocho, hic Mithridate pulsus fidem atque virtutem Magnetum decoravere, uti Dianae Leucophrynae perfugium inviolabile foret. Aphrodisienses posthac et Stratonicensis dictatoris Caesaris ob vetusta in partis merita et recens 5 divi Augusti decretum adtulere, laudati quod Parthorum inruptionem nihil mutata in populum Romanum constantia pertulissent. 63. Auditae aliarum quoque civitatum legationes. Quo-slew Aesculapius. Apollo, in penance, was obliged to serve Admetus. Ephesus and Smyrna were said to be named from two Amazons, who appear on Ephesian coins, with the four temples of Diana, Apollo, Bacchus, and Hercules.

10. post Macedonas. The temple of Diana was burned down the night that Alexander the Great was born, and it took 220 years to rebuild it. Alexander fixed the boundaries of the asylum a furlong from the temple; Mithridates put them a little farther (as far as he could shoot an arrow); Marcus Antonius doubled the distance so as to take in a part of the city (for the temple stood by itself in the fields). As this made a rogue's quarter in Ephesus, Augustus abated the nuisance.

62. 1. Magnetes. Magnesia, on the Maeander, was one of the first cities which submitted to Scipio Asiaticus, when he had defeated Antiochus at Magnesia of Mount Sipylus (II. 47) in B.C. 190. In the first Mithridatic war, concluded by Sulla in 84 B.C., Magnesia was the only Asiatic city which remained faithful to Rome.

3. Leucophrynae. She was especially revered in the neighbouring town of Leucophrys.

4. Aphrodisienses. Aphrodisias was a town of Phrygia on the borders of Caria. A decree of the senate, ratifying a grant of asylum made by Julius Caesar to the temple of Aphrodite in this city, is extant; also a letter of Marcus Antonius confirming its privileges. Its name is now Keira.

10. Persicam—Dianam. Anaitis, an eastern personification of the productive powers of nature (like Diana Multimammaea at Ephesus). On her altar, wood was said to be kindled without the aid of man.

13. tribus de delubris. Supply exposuere from above. "They put in claims for three temples."

14. Paphiae Veneri. Paphos was on the extreme west coast of Cyprus, Amathus on the south, and Salamis on the east. Auctor = founder.

2. studiis. Among the senators, who favoured different cities.

4. super. Takes the accusative when it means besides.

7. Zmyrnaeos. The subject of referre, which here means "to quote." Smyrna was on the shore, S.W. of Mount Sipylus. Seleucus II. (B.C. 246-226) established its asylum near the previously existing temple of Aphrodite Stratoniceis.

9. Propiora. "More recent events."

11. sed cultus, etc. "But the worship of the two states consisted in adoring Diana or Apollo." The Sardians worshipped Artemis Coloëne, and the Milesians Apollo Didymaeus (the Twin).

12. Petere. Sc. ius asyli.

14. modus—praescribatur. The reform was so sweeping that Suetonius describes it as an abolition of all asylum rights.

15. aera. These records would prevent future usurpation by the rivalry (ambitio) of priests.

64. 1. Iuliae Augustae. On the name of Livia see I. 8.

4. theatro Marcelli. Built by Augustus on the Campus in memory of his nephew, and partly preserved. On the Praenestine calendar the record for April 21st states—"Signum divo Augusto patri ad theatrum Marc(elli) Julia Augusta et Ti. Augustus dedicaverunt."

ludi magni. Games at the circus. The greater the occasion the higher the priests that presided. There were sixteen pontifices (IV. 17, N.), sixteen augures, the quindecimviri (I. 76, N.), and the septemviri epulones, who had charge of religious feasts. These four great colleges formed the upper priesthood (§ 19, N.). With them were associated on this occasion the sodales Augustales (I. 54), in honour to the family. Tiberius explains this to satisfy the other priests, who were postponed.

quindecimviri septemviris simul et sodalibus Augustalibus ederent. Censuerat L. Apronius ut fetiales quoque iis ludis praesiderent. 10 Contra dixit Caesar, distincto sacerdotiorum iure et repetitis exemplis: neque enim umquam fetialibus hoc maiestatis fuisse. Ideo Augustales adiectos, quia proprium eius domus sacerdotium esset, pro qua vota persolverentur.

Ceterum tempora illa adeo infecta et adulatione sordida fuere, ut non modo primores 5 civitatis, quibus claritudo sua obsequiis protegenda erat, sed omnes consulares, magna pars eorum qui praetura functi multi-que etiam pedarii senatores certatim exsurgerent foedaque et nimia censerent. Memoriae proditur Tiberium, quotiens curia egrederetur, Graecis verbis in hunc modum eloqui solitum "o 10 homines ad servitutem paratos!" Scilicet etiam illum, qui libertatem publicam nollet, tam proiectae servientium patientiae taedebat.

Cottam a Scipione Africano, Servium Galbam a Catone censorio, P. Rutilium a M. Scauro accusatos. Videlicet Scipio et Cato talia ulciscebantur, aut ille Scaurus, quem proavum suum obprobrium maiorum Mamercus infami opera dehonestabat. 10. fetiales. Twenty priests who presided over international relations.

11. repetitis. "From early times."

65. 8. pedarii senatores were those who had held no curule office. As they were the last to be called upon for a vote in a relatio, they rarely had anything new to propose, and merely used their feet to vote on division of the house. Yet even they could invent flatteries.

66. 2. C. (Junium) Silanum.

3. Mamercus (Aemilius) Scaurus.

Junius Otho had been a schoolmaster, and was advanced by the favour of Sejanus. He was a good rhetorician, but affected a mysterious and confidential style, which made Scaurus say that he read even the newspapers (acta) in a whisper.

Neque posse principem sua scientia cuncta complecti, neque expedire ut ambitione aliena trahatur. Ideo leges in facta constitui, quia futura in incerto sint. Sic a maioribus institutum, ut, si antissent delicta, poenae sequerentur. Ne verterent sapienter reperta et semper placita: satis onerum principibus, satis etiam potentiae. Minui iura, quotiens gliscat potestas, nec utendum imperio, ubi legibus agi possit. Quanto rarius apud Tiberium popularitas, tanto laetioribus animis accepta. Atque ille prudens moderandi, si propria ira non impelleretur, addidit insulam Gyarum inmitem et sine cultu hominum esse: darent Iuniae familiae et viro quondam ordinis eiusdem, ut Cythnum potius concederet. Id sororem quoque Silani Torquatam, priscae sanctimoniae virginem, expetere. In hanc sententiam facta discessio.

13. poteretur. Used by Tacitus with genitive, accusative, and ablative.

74. 2. globos. I. 25, N.

3. (P.) Cornelius (Lentulus) Scipio.

4. qua praedatio. This was a position near Lake Tritonis and the lesser Syrtes, by which he could check the attacks of Tacfarinas on Leptis Minor, and prevent him from returning to the Garamantes.

5. Cirtensium. Cirta in Numidia was 270 miles west of Leptis. On this long line Scipio controlled the east, Blaesus Jr. the west, Blaesus Sr. the middle.

13. veteris provinciae. The original Carthaginian domain (Zingitana). See Africa, in my index.

15. mapalia. The movable Numidian huts, of reeds covered with hides, shaped like an upset boat.

16. sociorum. The provincials.

18. imperator. I. 9, N. The emperor assumed the title as a praenomen; others as a cognomen.

75. 1. (C.) Asinius (Gallus) Saloninus (Jr.).

2. Caesarique progener. Betrothed to one of the daughters of Germanicus.

principem in civitate locum studiis civilibus adsecutus, sed avo verat Augustus, ut Labeonem Antistium isdem artibus prae-cellentem dignatione eius magistratus anteiret. Namque illa aetas duo pacis decora simul tulit: sed Labeo incorrupta libertate, et ob id fama celebratior, Capitonis obsequium dominan-tibus magis probabatur. Illi, quod praeturam intra stetit, 10 cum honore nominavisset, Caesarem omisit. Quod civiliter 5 acceptum, neque prohibuit quo minus laudatione pro rostris ceterisque sollemnibus funus cohonestaretur. Viginti clarissimarum familiarum imagines antelatae sunt, Manlii, Quinctii aliaque eiusdem nobilitatis nomina. Sed praefulgebant Cassius atque Brutus eo ipso, quod effigies eorum non visebantur. 10

4. studiis civilibus. Jurisprudence.

5. centurione Sullano. Centurions rose from the ranks. Sulla's veterans were distributed all over Italy, and these half-pay captains became the chief men of their villages.—Hor. Sat. I. 6, 73.

6. (M. Antistium) Labeonem. His father was an assassin of Julius Caesar, and committed suicide after Philippi. The son was an eminent jurist, and founded the Proculian or progressive party of Roman lawyers, while the followers of his conservative rival, Capito, were called Sabiniani. Pomponius, a Proculian, says that Labeo declined a suffect consulship, which seems to contradict Tacitus. He nominated Lepidus as a senator, and, when Augustus objected, said that "every man had a right to his own opinion." When the senators proposed to serve as a guard of honour around Augustus by night, Labeo said that he was unfit for such duty because he snored.

9. Capitonis obsequium. Tiberius asked his opinion of the Latinity of a word. Capito said that if the emperor used it, it was good Latin (as Louis XIV.'s mistake settled the gender of coche). Pomponius Marcellus said that the emperor could give citizenship to men, but not to words.

76. 1. Iunia (Tertia).

2. Catone avunculo. Abl. abs. Servilia, half-sister of Cato of Utica, was married first to M. Junius Brutus, and her son by him was Caesar's murderer. She afterwards married D. Junius Silanus, consul in B.C. 62, and bore him three daughters. The eldest married Lepidus the triumvir; the third (Junia Tertia or Tertulla), who is mentioned here, married C. Cassius. Roman women rarely bore cognomens. If there were more than one in a family (II. 37, N.) they were known as Prima, Secunda, etc.

4. in magnis opibus. Her mother, Servilia, was mistress of Julius Caesar, who made her presents of estates, jewels, etc. There was a report that the mother sacrificed Tertia to Caesar when her own beauty began to fail. If so, it would account for Cassius's hatred of Caesar. Cassius himself was rich. Remains of his superb villa are found near Tivoli.

6. pro rostris. § 5, N.

8. Manlii. Connected with the Junii Silani by adoption in the second century B.C.

10. quod effigies. II. 32 and N. It appears that images of traitors might be kept in the family atrium, but not exposed on public occasions.

1. C. Asinio C. Antistio consulibus nonus Tiberio annus erat compositae rei publicae, florentis domus (nam Germanici mortem inter prospera ducebat), cum repente turbare fortuna coepit, saevire ipse aut saevientibus vires praebere. Initium et

1. 1. C. Asinio (Pollione), C. Antistio (Vetere).

nonus—annus. It would expire on 19th August, the anniversary of Augustus's death.

3. turbare. "To darken." The metaphor is taken from a storm.

cuius de potentia supra memoravi: nunc originem, mores, et quo facinore dominationem raptum ierit, expediam. Genitus Vulsiniis patre Seio Strabone equite Romano, et prima iuventa Gaium Caesarem divi Augusti nepotem sectatus, non sine rumore Apicio diviti et prodigo stuprum venò dedisse, mox 10 Tiberium variis artibus devinxit, adeo ut obscurum adversum alios sibi unī incautum intectumque efficeret, non tam sollertia (quippe isdem artibus victus est) quam deum ira in rem Romanam, cuius pari exitio vixit ceciditque. Corpus illi laborum tolerans, animus audax; sui obtegens, in alios crimi- 15 nator; iuxta adulatio et superbia; palam compositus pudor, intus summa apiscendi libido, eiusque causa modo largitio et luxus, saepius industria ac vigilantia, haud minus noxiae, quotiens parando regno finguntur.

2. Vim praefecturae modicam antea intendit, dispersas per urbem cohortes una in castra conducendo, ut simul imperia acciperent, numeroque et robore et visu inter se fiducia ipsis, in ceteros metus oreretur. Praetendebat lascivire militem diductum; si quid subitum ingruat, maiore auxilio pariter 5 subveniri: et severius acturos, si vallum statuatur procul urbis inlecebris. Ut perfecta sunt castra, inrepere paulatim militares animos adeundo, appellando; simul centuriones ac tribunos ipse deligere. Neque senatorio ambitu abstinebat clientes suos

6. supra memoravi. I. 24, 69; III. 29, 35.

10. veno. Dative of end; the usual form is venum (Int. 26).

12. intectum. "Unguarded."

13. isdem artibus. Tiberius awoke to all his natural keenness and vigour when he found his life and throne in danger. Sejanus was then no match for his master.

14. pari exitio vixit ceciditque. While in power Sejanus was the worst enemy of the senate, and half of the noblest men in Rome were involved in his fall.

Corpus—tolerans. Sejanus was of gigantic size, and of handsome but evil face, to judge from his life and the passage in Juvenal (X. 58). On account of the destruction of his statues we have no representation of him.

16. juxta. "He mingled."

17. summa. Acc. plu. Compare the account of his flatterer, Velleius Paterculus: "Ipsum vero laboris et fidei capacissimum, sufficiente etiam vigori animi compage corporis, singularem principalium operum adiutorem in omnia habuit atque habet (Imperator), virum severitatis laetissimae, hilaritatis priscoe, actu otiosis simillimum, nihil sibi vindicantem eoque assequentem omnia, semperque infra aliorum aestimationes se metientem, vultu vitae tranquillum, animo exsomnia."

2. 1. dispersas per urbem cohortes. Augustus only kept three praetorian cohorts quartered through the city, while the other six (I. 7, N.) were stationed at neighbouring towns; but they were now collected in barracks.

2. una in castra. On the Quirinal outside the city wall, though afterwards included by the walls of Aurelian. Tiberius invited the senate to witness the drill, in order to make his power felt.

8. appellando. He knew each man by name.

9. ipse deligere. Instead of the emperor.

Neque senatorio, etc. "Nor did he

3. Ceterum plena Caesarum domus, iuvenis filius, nepotes adulti moram cupitis adferebant; et quia vi tot simul corripere intutum, dolus intervalla scelerum poscebat. Placuit tamen occultior via et a Druso incipere, in quem recenti ira ferebatur.
 5 Nam Drusus inpatiens aemuli et animo commotior orto forte iurgio intenderat Seiano manus et contra tendentis os verberaverat. Igitur cuncta temptanti promptissimum visum ad uxorem eius Liviam convertere, quae soror Germanici, formae initio aetatis indecorae, mox pulchritudine praecelebat. Hanc ut

Atque illa, cui avunculus Augustus, socer Tiberius, ex Druso liberi, seque ac maiores et posteros municipali adultero foedabat, ut

Pellit domo Seianus uxorem Apicatam, ex qua tres liberos genuerat, ne paelici suspectaretur. Sed magnitudo facinoris metum, prolationes, diversa interdum 20 consilia adferebat.

4. Interim anni principio Drusus ex Germanici liberis togam virilem sumpsit, quaeque fratri eius Neroni decreverat fail to influence the senate by rewarding his partizans there." Sejanus was so influential that consuls and consulars attended his morning levees, awaited his leisure in an anteroom, or fee'd the door-keeper for a speedy admission to the favourite's presence (§ 74, N.).

12. coll-effigies. Like the emperor, Sejanus was worshipped during his own lifetime. According to Xiphilinus he sacrificed to his own image, in acknowledgment of his divine fortune.

13. principia legionum. I. 61, N. His image was used as an ensign (I. 18, N.) throughout the world, except in Syria.

8. 1. plena Caesarum domus. I. 25, N. Besides Tiberius himself, there was Drusus, now thirty-five years old, with his three children (II. 84, N.), and the six children of Germanicus.

3. tamen. "At all events."

6. intenderat—manus. "Had shaken his fist."

10. flagitii. III. 73, N.

11. abnuerit. Potential subjunctive, which corresponds, in the third person, to the modest subjunctive of the first, and to the indefinite second person.

12. consortium. Enallage for consortii.

14. municipali adultero. An allusion to the obscure Vulsinian family of Sejanus.

17. frequens secretis. Abl. of specification. As her physician, Eudemus could always enjoy a private interview without arousing suspicion.

4. 2. decreverat senatus. III. 29; two years before. A priesthood and the right to become quaestor at the age of 19.

senatus repetita. Addidit orationem Caesar, multa cum laude filii sui, quod patria benevolentia in fratris liberos foret. Nam Drusus, quamquam arduum sit eodem loci potentiam et concordiam esse, aequus adolescentibus aut certe non adversus habebatur. Exim vetus et saepe simulatum proficiscendi in provincias consilium refertur. Multitudinem veteranorum praetexebat imperator et dilectibus supplendos exercitus: nam voluntarium militem deesse, ac si suppeditet, non eadem virtute ac modestia agere, quia plerumque inopes ac vagi sponte militiam sumant. Percensuitque cursim numerum legionum et quas provincias tutarentur. Quod mihi quoque exsequendum reor, quae tunc Romana copia in armis, qui socii reges, quanto sit angustius imperitatum. 15

Italiam utroque mari duae classes, Misenum apud et Ravennam, proximumque Galliae litus rostratae naves praesidebant, quas Actiaca victoria captas Augustus in oppidum Foriuliense miserat valido cum remige. Sed praecipuum robur Rhenum iuxta, commune in Germanos Gallosque subsidium, octo legiones erant. Hispaniae recens perdomitae tribus habebantur. Mauros Iuba rex acceperat donum populi Romani. Cetera Africae per duas legiones parique numero Aegyptus, dehinc initio ab Suriae usque ad flumen Euphraten, quantum ingenti terrarum sinu ambitur, quattuor legionibus coercita, accolis Hiberno Albanoque et aliis regibus, qui magnitudine nostra proteguntur adversum externa imperia. quia plerumque inopes. Since the time of Marius, who first admitted the capite censi or city lazzaroni to the army, volunteers were usually of the vagabond class, which was harder to discipline than the regular levies from the country population.—Vegetius, I, 3, and Pliny, XVIII. 5.

14. quanto sit angustius imperitatum. II. 61, N. Tacitus is writing at a time when Trajan had added Dacia and half of Persia to the empire.

5. I. utroque mari. At Misenum and Ravenna (I. 11, N.).

3. Actiaca victoria. B.C. 31. It is a singular proof of the strong construction of these brass-clad vessels, that they were in use forty-four years after.

legions, which faced the Northern barbarians, and were backed by Dalmatia.

17. tres urbanae—cohortes. Municipal police, under command of the prefect of the city. A fourth cohort was stationed at Lyons (III. 41, N.). These cohorts began their numbers where the praetorians left off (i.e. 10th, 11th, etc.). There were also in the city seven cohorts of vigiles, consisting of freedmen, who served as the fire department.

19. vetere Latio. The cities which had the jus Latii (XV. 32, N.) before the social war.

6. mandabatque honores. I. 15, N.
 9. species. "Dignity."

10. majestatis quaestio. Now becoming too frequent (I. 73, N.).

11. frumenta. Tithes of corn, paid by Sicily and other provinces.

pecuniae vectigales. Comprising the indirect taxes laid upon citizens, viz.—Import duties (XIII. 50, N.); one per cent on all sales; five per cent on legacies (I. 78, N.). These moneys were collected by companies of equites, who bought the taxes of the state at auction, and made what profit they could. The tributum or direct capitation and property (land) tax laid upon provincials was estimated and collected by state officials (I. 31, N.).

cetera publicorum fructuum. The revenue of public forests (§ 27, N.), mines, salt works, etc.

12. Res suas. The collection of imperial dues (I. 78, N.; § 15, N.).

13. ex fama. "According to their reputation."

mandabat, semelque adsumpti tenebantur prorsus sine modo, cum plerique isdem negotiis insenescerent. Plebes acri quidem 15 annona fatigabatur, sed nulla in eo culpa ex principe: quin infecunditati terrarum aut asperis maris obviam iit, quantum impendio diligentiaque poterat. Et ne provinciae novis oneribus turbarentur utque vetera sine avaritia aut crudelitate magistratuum tolerarent, providebat: corporum verbera, ademptiones 20 bonorum aberant. Quae cuncta non quidem comi via, sed horridus ac plerumque formidatus, retinebat tamen, donec morte Drusi verterentur: nam dum superfuit, mansere, quia Seianus incipiente adhuc potentia bonis consiliis notescere volebat, et ultor metuebatur non occultus odii, sed crebro querens incolumi filio 5 adiutorem imperii alium vocari. 15. acri—annona. I. 2, N.

21. modesta servitia. Without arrogance.

22. intra paucos libertos. "Limited to." The libertus was an important and peculiar factor in Roman society. Emerging from slavery, he was nullius filius, but owed all filial duties to his former master, who could claim support, secrecy, and fidelity from him during his life, and was his heir if he died intestate without children. This close relationship supplied great men with confidential agents, who were bound to them by gratitude, public sentiment, and law, affording a power which was too often abused. The influence of freedmen was deservedly suspected as inclining a powerful patron to arbitrary and dishonest measures. Claudius was greatly controlled by them, and the same evil prevailed with provincial governors and dependent kings.

7. 1. non—comi via. Tiberius always showed his contempt for popular opinion (I. 47; III. 47).

11. Modestiam. A virtue not deified by the state religion, but addressed as Juvenal apostrophises Glory and Prudence (Sat. X. 59 and 365).

8. 2. paulatim inrepente. Theophrastus describes poisons which would produce death after months or even years.

plerisque additis, ut ferme amat posterior adulatō. Funus imaginum pompa maxime inlustre fuit, cum origo Iuliae gentis Aeneas omnesque Albanorum reges et conditor urbis Romulus, post Sabina nobilitas, Attus Clausus ceteraeque 10 Claudiorum effigies longo ordine spectarentur.

10. In tradenda morte Drusi quae plurimis maximaeque fidei auctoribus memorata sunt rettuli: sed non omiserim eorundem temporum rumorem, validum adeo ut nondum exolescat. Corrupta ad scelus Livia Seianum Lygdi quoque spandonis animum stupro vinxisse, quod is aetate atque forma 5 carus domino interque primores ministros erat; deinde inter conscios ubi locus veneficii tempusque composita sint, eo audaciae proVectum, ut verteret et occulto indicio Drusum veneni in patrem arguens moneret Tiberium, vitandam potionem quae prima ei apud filium epulanti offerretur. Ea fraude 10 captum senem, postquam convivium inierat, exceptum poculum Druso tradidisse; atque illo ignaro et iuveniliter hauriente auctam suspicionem, tamquam metu et pudore sibimet inrogaret mortem quam patri struxerat.

11. Haec vulgo iactata, super id quod nullo auctore certo firmantur, prompte refutaveris. Quis enim mediocri prudentia, nedum Tiberius tantis rebus exercitus, inaudito filio exitium offerret, idque sua manu et nullo ad paenitendum regressu? quin potius ministrum veneni excrucia- 5 ret, auctorem exquireret, insita denique etiam in extraneos cunctatione et mora adversum unicum et nullius ante flagitii conpertum uteretur? sed quia Seianus facinorum omnium repertor habebatur, ex nimia caritate in eum Caesaris et ceterorum in utrumque odio quamvis fabulosa et immania credebantur, 10

7. plerisque. "Many things." Posterior adulatō has the meaning of more experienced flattery, administered on a second occasion of a similar kind.

8. imaginum pompa. II. 32, N.; II. 73.

origo Iuliae gentis. The ancestor, through Julius, of the Julian gens, to which Drusus belonged by adoption into the family of the Caesars.

10. Sabina nobilitas refers to Attus Clausus.

10. 4. Corrupta (adulterio) ad scelus (veneficii).

6. interque primores ministros. As cupbearer and praegustator (XII. 66, N.).

8. ut verteret. "That he changed the plan."

11. 4. nullo—regressu. Sc. sibi. Ryck quotes the instance of Philip V. of Macedon, who was induced by forged letters to order the death of his son Demetrius, and afterwards died of remorse.

atrociore semper fama erga dominantium exitus. Ordo alioqui sceleris per Apicatam Seiani proditus, tormentis Eudemi ac Lygdi patefactus est. Neque quisquam scriptor tam infensus extitit, ut Tiberio obiectaret, cum omnia alia conqui-causa fuit, ut claro sub exemplo falsas auditiones depellerem divulgata atque incredibilia avide accepta veris neque in miraculum corruptis antehabeant.

12. Ceterum laudante filium pro rostris Tiberio senatus populusque habitum ac voces dolentum simulatione magis quam libens induebat, domumque Germanici revirescere occulti laetabantur. Quod principium favoris et mater Agrippina 5 spem male tegens perniciem adceleravere. Nam Seianus ubi videt mortem Drusi inultam interfectoribus, sine maerore pub-lico esse, ferox scelerum, et quia prima provenerant, volutare secum, quonam modo Germanici liberos perverteret, quorum non dubia successio. Neque spargi venenum in tres poterat, 10 egregia custodum fide et pudicitia Agrippinae inpenetrabili.
 Igitur contumaciam eius insectari, vetus Augustae odium, re-centem Liviae conscientiam exagitare, ut superbam fecunditate, subnixam popularibus studiis inhiare dominationi apud Caesarem arguerent. Atque haec callidis criminatoribus, inter quos inter intimos aviae et consiliis suis peridoneum (quia Prisca in animo Augustae valida) anum suapte natura potentiae anxiam inliciebantur pravis sermonibus tumidos spiritus perstimulare.

9. non dubia successio. Being of the blood of Augustus, of man's estate, and of great popularity, Nero, Drusus, and Caius were preferred to the infant sons of Drusus.

spargi. Used of repeated crimes.

11. vetus—exagitare. He began to excite Augusta (Livia Senior) by means of her old grudge against Agrippina, and Livia Jr. by the power which their confederacy in crime gave him.

14. Atque haec—efficiebat. Livilla worked upon the mind of the old woman. Atque makes better sense than the usual reading, alique; nurul (for pronurus) refers to Agrippina.

criminatoribus. Abl. of agent (Int. 29).

17. anxiam. Uneasily clinging to power.

13. At Tiberius nihil intermissa rerum cura, negotia pro solaciis accipiens, ius civium, preces sociorum tractabat; factaque auctore eo senatus consulta, ut civitati Cibyrticae apud Asiam, Aegiensi apud Achaïam, motu terrae labefactis, subveniretur remissione tributi in triennium. Et Vibius Serenus pro consule ulterioris Hispaniae, de vi publica damnatus, ob atrocitatem morum in insulam Amorgum deportatur. Carsidius Sacerdos, reus tamquam frumento hostem Tacfarinatem iuvisset, absolvitur, eiusdemque criminis C. Gracchus. Hunc comitem exilii admodum infantem pater Sempronius in insulam Cercinam tulerat. Illic adultus inter extorres et liberalium artium nescios, mox per Africam ac Siciliam mutando sordidas merces sustentabatur; neque tamen effugit magnae fortunae pericula. Ac ni Aelius Lamia et L. Apronius, qui Africam obtinuerant, insontem protexissent, claritudine infausti generis et paternis adversis foret abstractus.

14. Is quoque annus legationes Graecarum civitatum habuit, Samiis Iunonis, Cois Aesculapii delubro vetustum asyli ius ut firmaretur petentibus. Samii decreto Amphictyonum, nitebantur, quis praecipuum fuit rerum omnium iudicium, qua tempestate Graeci conditis per Asiam urbibus ora maris potiebantur. Neque dispar apud Coos antiquitas, et accedebat meritum ex loco: nam cives Romanos templo Aesculapii induxerant, cum iussu regis Mithridatis apud cunctas Asiae insulas et urbes trucidarentur. Variis dehinc et saepius inritis praetorum questibus, postremo Caesar de inmodestia histrionum rettulit: multa ab iis in publicum seditiose, foeda per domos

13. 5. pro consule ulterioris Hispaniae. i.e. Baeticae. I. 74, N.

6. de vi publica. This expressed the guilt of a governor who beat, tortured, or slew a Roman citizen who appealed to Caesar. The punishment was death for lower officers, and deportatio (IV. 31, N.) for more important offenders. Atrocitatem morum shows aggravating circumstances in the case of Serenus.

8. tamquam—juvisset. Furnishing an enemy with supplies was treason (I. 72, N.).

12. sordidas merces. All private trade was disgraceful for a Roman senator.

14. 2. asyl. III. 60, N.

3. Amphictyonum. The sacred assembly of the peoples of Greece, which from time immemorial had met in the spring at Delphi, and in the autumn at Thermopylae. This council had charge of all questions of international law, and controlled the oracle at Delphi. The institution remained, though shorn of its power, in the second century A.D.

5. qua tempestate. The middle of the eleventh century B.C., when Ionian colonisation set back towards Asia.

6. potiebantur. III. 73, N.

8. cum—trucidarentur. In the winter of 88-87 B.C. The number of Romans slain is variously given at 80,000 and 150,000.

9. praetorum. Had charge of the public games (I. 15, N.), and cognisance of theatre riots (I. 54, N.).

11. per domos. The fashionable actors temptari; Oscum quondam ludicrum, levissimae apud vulgum oblectationis, eo flagitiorum et virium venisse, ut auctoritate patrum coercendum sit. Pulsi tum histriones Italia.

15. Idem annus alio quoque luctu Caesarem adficit, alterum ex geminis Drusi liberis extinguendo, neque minus morte amici. Is fuit Lucilius Longus, omnium illi tristium laetorumque socius unusque e senatoribus Rhodii secessus comes. Ita
5 quamquam novo homini censorium funus, effigiem apud forum Augusti publica pecunia patres decrevere, apud quos etiam tum cuncta tractabantur, adeo ut procurator Asiae Lucilius Capito accusante provincia causam dixerit, magna cum adseveratione principis, non se ius nisi in servitia et pecunias familiares de-
10 disse: quod si vim praetoris usurpasset manibusque militum usus foret, spreta in eo mandata sua: audirent socios. Ita reus cognito negotio damnatur. Ob quam ultionem, et quia priore anno in C. Silanum vindicatum erat, decrevere Asiae urbes templum Tiberio matrique eius ac senatui. Et permissum took part in plays at private houses, and debauched noble women.

12. Oscum quondam ludicrum. The Oscan plays, or Attellani, consisted of extemporaneous satirical dialogues in the Oscan tongue, connected, like the early Greek comedy, with the song and dance of the vintage festival. This primitive amusement had changed into the magnificent and licentious exhibitions of professional pantomimes. The riots begun by the theatre factions had issued in bloodshed, though soldiers were posted to check them.

14. Pulsi—Italia. Not only the actors, but the chiefs of the factions (I. 16, N.) were banished, nor could Tiberius ever be induced by the people (VI. 13, N.) to restore them.

15. 1. alterum ex—liberis. Germanicus (II. 84, N.).

5. novo homini. First of his family to be consul.

censorium funus. A public funeral, controlled during the republic by the censors, which gave it the name. Such a funeral was attended by the senate and by public troops.

effigiem apud forum Augusti. II. 64, N.

7. procurator. Procuratores were of two classes. First, officers of equestrian rank appointed by the emperor to govern portions of provinces (e.g. Judaea), or the whole of minor provinces (the two Mauretaniae, Rhaetia, Noricum, Thrace, Cappadocia). The procurators of Judaea acted under the advice of the governor of Syria, but the others governed independently, as legati Caesaris, though their rank was inferior to the praetorian legati of important provinces (I. 74, N.). Claudius even appointed his freedman Felix procurator of Judaea. The second class of procurators were the procuratores rationales here mentioned. They were sent by the emperor to all provinces, whether senatorial or imperial, in virtue of the imperium proconsulare (I. 14, N.), and were either equites or freedmen. Their business was to collect imperial dues from escheats, etc., and to control the emperor's monies and slaves. Otherwise they were mere private citizens, acting as the emperor's stewards. Claudius, who was controlled by his freedmen, gave these men judicial power (XII. 60.).

12. damnatur. To exile.

13. C. (Junium) Silanum.

14. permissum statuere = permissum est ut statuerent.

15. Nero. Son of Germanicus. He was probably the patron of the cities whose complaint against the oppressive laetas inter audientium adfectiones, qui recenti memoria Germanici illum aspici, illum audiri rebantur. Aderantque iuveni modestia ac forma principe viro digna, notis in eum Seiani odiis ob periculum gratiora.

16. Sub idem tempus de flamine Diali in locum Servi Maluginensis defuncti legendo, simul roganda nova lege diseruit Caesar. Nam patricos confarreatis parentibus genitos tres simul nominari, ex quis unus legeretur, vetusto more; neque adesse, ut olim, eam copiam, omissa confarreandi adsuetudine aut inter paucos retenta. Pluresque eius rei causas adferebat, potissimam penes incuriam virorum feminarumque; accedere ipsius caerimoniae difficultates, quae consulto vitarentur . . . et quod exiret e iure patrio qui id flaminium apisceretur quaeque in manum flaminis conveniret. Ita medendum senatus decreto aut lege, sicut Augustus quaedam ex horrida illa antiquitate ad praesentem usum flexisset. Igitur tractatis religionibus placitum instituto flaminum nihil demutari: sed lata lex, qua flaminica Dialis sacrorum causa in potestate viri, cetera promisco feminarum iure ageret. Et filius Maluginensis patri suffectus. Utque glisceret dignatio sacerdotum atque ipsis promptior animus foret ad capessendas caerimonias, decretum procurator had been received, and it was customary for princes to make their début by delivering an oration on a popular occasion. This Tiberius himself had done, and so did the emperor Nero (XII. 58.).

16. 1. flamine Diali. III. 58, N.

3. patricos. The flamens of Jupiter, Mars, and Quirinus, whose priesthood dated from the times of Numa, were required to be of patrician birth. The twelve lower flamens might be plebeians.

confarreatis parentibus. Confarreatio was the most ancient and sacred form of marriage, and was conducted by the pontifex maximus. The ceremonies were intricate and difficult. (It must have been a matter of high favour, as it required the emperor's presence.) The three flamines maiores were obliged to employ this form, and only children sprung from such a union were eligible to these priesthoods. Confarreatio was named from the cake of far which was carried before the bride. It could only be dissolved by another difficult form, diffarreatio, and was consequently avoided on account of the easy morals of the age (incuriam virorum feminarumque), which caused frequent divorces.

9. e iure patrio. The father's control of a child, as absolute as the master's right over a slave, continued over sons who had held the highest offices, and over married daughters who had families of their own, unless the father voluntarily terminated it by emancipation. But a father lost his right over a child who became a flamen, flaminica, or vestal (II. 86, N.), and was consequently unwilling to offer them. To remedy this discontent, it is decided that the flaminica shall be under her husband's control in religious matters, but subject to her father in all others.

11. lege. The Comitia Tributa were employed as an instrument for legislation as late as the time of Vespasian. The people had no independent action, but served as a machine to register what had been decided by emperor and senate.

17. Cornelio Cethego Visellio Varrone consulibus pontifices eorumque exemplo ceteri sacerdotes, cum pro incolumitate principis vota susciperent, Neronem quoque et Drusum isdem dis commendavere, non tam caritate iuvenum quam adulatione, 5 quae moribus corruptis perinde anceps, si nulla et ubi nimia est. Nam Tiberius haud umquam domui Germanici mitis, tum vero aequari adulescentes senectae suae impatienter indoluit; accitosque pontifices percontatus est, num id precibus Agrippinae aut minis tribuissent. Et illi quidem, quamquam ab-
10 nuerent, modice perstricti; etenim pars magna e propinquis ipsius aut primores civitatis erant: ceterum in senatu oratione monuit in posterum, ne quis mobiles adulescentium animos praematuris honoribus ad superbiam extolleret. Instabat quippe Seianus incusabatque diductam civitatem ut civili bello;
15 esse qui se partium Agrippinae vocent, ac ni resistatur, fore pluris; neque aliud gliscentis discordiae remedium quam si unus alterve maxime prompti subverterentur.

18. Qua causa C. Silius et Titius Sabinus adgreditur. Amicitia Germanici perniciosa utrique, Silio et quod ingentis exercitus septem per annos moderator, partisque apud Germaniam triumphalibus, Sacroviriani belli victor, quanto maiore pontifices. III. 19, 64, NN. The pontifices were sixteen in number, counting the emperor, who was pontifex maximus, and should have been consulted on this occasion. They were devoted to the service of no one god, but had general superintendence of public worship, and jurisdiction in all religious matters.

2. cum — vota susciperent. Vows were made and paid annually and decennially for the preservation of the Emperor on 3d January, and for the prosperity of the State on 1st January. This year was the decennial of Tiberius.

5. perinde anceps—est. "It is as dangerous to overdo flattery as to neglect it." The same use of si and ubi is found at the end of I. 44.

18. 2. ingentis exercitus. The four legions of the Upper Rhine.

4. triumphalibus. Sc. insignis (I. 72, N.).

quanto maiore mole. "Falling with a greater crash, he would inspire more terror in others." The simile is taken from the crash of a lofty tower. The indicative, dispergebatur, shows that the intention of Tiberius was realised.

7. suum militem—duravisse. I. 40.

tiones prolaberentur; neque mansurum Tiberio imperium, si iis quoque legionibus cupido novandi fuisset. Destruï per hæc fortunam suam Caesar inparemque tanto merito rebatur. Nam 10 beneficia eo usque laeta sunt, dum videntur exsolvi posse: ubi multum antevenere, pro gratia odium redditur.

19. Erat uxor Silio Sosia Galla, caritate Agrippinae in-visa principi. Hos corripï dilato ad tempus Sabino placitum, inmissusque Varro consul, qui paternas inimicitias obtendens odiis Seiani per dedecus suum gratificabatur. Precante reo 5 brevem moram, dum accusator consulatu abiret, adversatus est Caesar: solitum quippe magistratibus diem privatis dicere: nec infringendum consulis ius, cuius vigiliis niteretur ne quod res publica detrimentum caperet. 8. mansurum. Int. 18, c.

9. Destruï per hæc. "Tiberius considered this derogatory to his own position, because he had no power to reward such favours." Fortuna is often used to express the dignity, position, and state of a prince. Louis XI., a king who resembled Tiberius in many ways, observed to Philippe de Comines that it was not well to oblige a sovereign too much. "Me dit d'avantage, qu'à son advis pour avoir biens en cour c'est plus grand heur à un homme quand le prince qu'il sert luy a fait quelque grand bien à peu de deserte, parquoy il luy demeure fort obligé, que ce ne seroit s'il luy avoit fait un si grand service que le dit prince luy en fût très-fort obligé; et qu'il aime plus naturellement ceux qui luy sont tenus qu'il ne fait ceux à qui il est tenu." "Ainsi," concludes Comines, "en tous états a bien à faire à vivre en ce monde; et fait Dieu grande grace à qui il donne bon sens naturel." Montaigne quotes the passage in connection with these words of Tacitus, Essais, III. 8.

10. 2. ad tempus. For four years (§ 68).

3. inmissus. He was let loose against him, like a dog (§ 34, N.).

5. dum—consulatu abiret. It seemed unjust that the accuser should also be chairman of the senate when it entertained the charge.

6. diem privatis dicere. But this was before the praetor's tribunal, where the consul would have no special influence.

8. Proprium. "Characteristic."

9. priscis verbis. i.e. "Ne quod res publica detrimentum caperet."

multa adseveratione — coguntur patres. "The senate is assembled with the greatest solemnity," as if a new Catiline had been discovered. In allowing the consul to act as accuser Tiberius is evidently recalling the action of Cicero. Adseveratio applies to the proclamation which convoked the senate.

13. Conscientia belli. It makes better sense to put a comma after belli. "He was accused of conniving at the war, long concealing the guilt of Sacrovir," etc. Sacrovir first fought on the Roman side, and then turned traitor, which gave a colour to the accusation.

14. uxor Sosia. The husband was blamed for the bribes the wife received (III. 33).

15 darum criminibus haerebant, sed cuncta quaestione maiestatis exercita, et Silius imminentem damnationem voluntario fine praevertit.

20. Saevitum tamen in bona, non ut stipendiariis pecuniae redderentur, quorum nemo repetebat, sed liberalitas Augusti avulsa, computatis singillatim quae fisco petebantur. Ea prima Tiberio erga pecuniam alienam diligentia fuit. Sosia in exilium
5 pellitur Asinii Galli sententia, qui partem bonorum publicandam, pars ut liberis relinqueretur censuerat. Contra M'. Lepidus quartam accusatoribus secundum necessitudinem legis, cetera liberis concessit. Hunc ego Lepidum temporibus illis gravem et sapientem virum fuisse comperior : nam pleraque ab
10 saevis adulationibus aliorum in melius flexit. Neque tamen temperamenti egebat, cum aequabili auctoritate et gratia apud Tiberium viguerat. Unde dubitare cogor, fato et sorte nascendi, ut cetera, ita principum inclinatio in hos, offensio in illos, an sit aliquid in nostris consiliis liceatque inter abruptam con-
15 tumaciam et deforme obsequium pergere iter ambitione ac periculis vacuum. At Messalinus Cotta haud minus claris maioribus, sed animo diversus, censuit cavendum senatus consulto, ut quamquam insontes magistratus et culpa alienae nescii provincialibus uxorum criminibus perinde quam suis 20 plecterentur.

15. haerebant. "They were clearly guilty."

20. 1. tamen. Contrary to custom ; for those who anticipated condemnation by suicide saved their fortunes from confiscation, and their bodies from the Gemoniae. The accusers, however, did not lose their claim, which, according to the lex Julia de maiestate, passed under Julius Caesar, amounted to at least a quarter of the fortune of the accused. But the senate must vote that they had deserved this blood-money, and often increased the amount in a spirit of adulation.

stipendiariis. "The provincials." The word properly applies to those who did not live in free cities, colonies, etc., but is here used generally.

2. liberalitas Augusti. The grants of money and land which had been made to Silius at different times by the emperor.

5. partem. "A half."

6. relinqueretur. Int. 54, 5.

10. Neque—egebat. Consider his prudence in waiving the province of Africa in favour of Blaesus (III. 35).

12. Unde dubitare cogor. Tacitus here expresses his usual bent towards fatalism (III. 18, N.), which comes in conflict with another favourite idea, that men by careful action and good sense may avoid the anger of a tyrant, and do a good work in evil times. He praises this prudence in his father-in-law Agricola, and exemplified it in his own life, holding office under Domitian. He blames Thrasea Paetus (XIV. 12) for adopting a bolder course.

19. provincialibus—criminibus. "If their wives were accused by the provincials." Caecina had proposed (III. 33) that governors should not be allowed to take their wives to the provinces. Messalla's bill became a law, and is quoted in the Digest, where it is referred to the consulship of Valerius Messalla and Aurelius Cotta (A.D. 20). The mistake naturally arose from the name of the proposer.

21. Actum dehinc de Calpurnio Pisone, nobili ac feroci viro. Is namque, ut rettuli, cessurum se urbe ob factiones accusatorum in senatu clamitaverat et sprete potentia Augustae trahere in ius Urgulanium domoque principis excire ausus erat. Quae in praesens Tiberius civiliter habuit : sed in animo revolvente iras, etiam si impetus offensionis languerat, memoria valebat. Pisonem Q. Granius secreti sermonis incusavit adversum maiestatem habiti, adiecitque in domo eius venenum esse eumque gladio accinctum introire curiam. Quod ut atrocius vero tramissum : ceterorum, quae multa cumulabantur, receptus est reus, neque peractus ob mortem opportunam. Relatum et de Cassio Severo exule, qui sordidae originis, maleficae vitae, sed orandi validus, per immodicas inimicitias ut iudicio iurati senatus Cretam amoveretur effecerat ; atque illic eadem actitando recentia veteraque odia advertit, bonisque exutus, interdicto igni atque aqua, saxo Seripho consenuit.

22. Per idem tempus Plautius Silvanus praetor incertis causis Aproniam coniugem in praeceps iecit, tractusque ad Caesarem ab L. Apronio socero turbata mente respondit, tamquam ipse somno gravis atque eo ignarus, et uxor sponte mortem sumpsisset. Non cunctanter Tiberius pergit in domum, visit cubiculum, in quo reluctantis et impulsae vestigia cernebantur. Refert ad senatum, datisque iudicibus Urgulania Silvani avia pugionem nepoti misit. Quod perinde creditum quasi principis monitu ob amicitiam Augustae cum Urgulania. Reus frustra temptato ferro venas praebuit exsolvendas. Mox

21. 2. ut rettuli. II. 34.

8. venenum—gladio. Intended, of course, for the emperor. It was unlawful for any private person to carry weapons in the city, and it was a capital offence to wear them in an imperial audience (XI. 22).

11. ob mortem opportunam. This hints his suicide without stating it. "Pison mourut à propos."—Burnouf.

13. per immodicas inimicitias. His continual attacks upon prominent men aroused the disgust of all. He even ventured to accuse an intimate friend of Augustus of poisoning 130 guests with one dish. He had personally offended so many of the senate, that, when they banished him, they took an oath to give fair judgment.

22. 2. in praeceps. From the window of their chamber.

tractusque ad Caesarem. The emperor had a right to act as judge, but rarely exercised it (III. 10, N.).

6. vestigia. "Traces of a struggle and violent fall."

7. datisque iudicibus. As a senator Plautius would be tried by his peers ; but, except in cases of public interest (treason, embezzlement, etc.), the senate usually appointed a commission to take cognisance of a case.

10. venas praebuit exsolvendas. The Romans avoided any form of death which might disfigure the body, and it was believed by the Stoics that, when a body was suddenly crushed, the soul perished with it. Hence the favourite Numantina, prior uxor eius, accusata iniecissee carminibus et veneficiis vaecordiam marito, insons iudicatur.

27. 4. libellis. "Placards."

5. per longinquos saltus. Farming did not pay in the mountains, and their wooded slopes were employed as pasture grounds. The slaves who tended the herds were almost savages (III. 54), and filled the ranks of the brigands who have always infested the Apennines. To keep them in order, and to collect the revenues (scriptura) of the public woods and pastures (calles), a quaestor was regularly appointed.

Sed hi quidem statim exempti: in patrem ex servis 5 quaesitum, et quaestio adversa accusatori fuit. Qui scelere vaecors, simul vulgi rumore territus, robur et saxum aut parricidarum poenas minitanti, cessit urbe. Ac retractus Ravenna exsequi accusationem adigitur, non occultante Tiberio vetus odium adversum exulem Serenum. Nam post dam- 10 natum Libonem missis ad Caesarem literis exprobraverat suum tantum studium sine fructu fuisse, addideratque quaedam contumacius quam tutum apud aures superbas et offensioni proniores. 14. medium tempus. Accusing him of many evil actions during the intervening time.

2. intercessit. By right of tribunician power.

5. usus. "The necessities."

6. praemiis accusatorum. Their fourth (§ 20, N.).

8. Ibaturque in eam sententiam. "They were on the point of adopting it" by division (III. 23, N.).

31. His tam adsiduis tamque maestis modica laetitia intericitur, quod C. Cominium equitem Romanum, probrosi in se carminis convictum, Caesar precibus fratris, qui senator erat, concessit. Quo magis mirum habebatur gnarum meliorum, et without government patronage. Experience, however, proved that private interests and enmities were enough to incite them. Titus and Trajan punished informers by public whipping, banishment, or enslavement. Domitian, in his early and better days, said: "Princeps qui delatores non castigat irritat."

10. in praecipiti. "On the verge of destruction."

31. 2. equitem Romanum. Romanus seems to indicate a simple eques—modicus, not illustris (I. 73, N.). The term eques is rarely found without an adjective, when it is used in its political, not practical (cavalryman) sense.

3. fratris. T. Cominius Proculus, proconsul of Cyprus under Claudius, as shown by coins.

5. sequeretur. Int. 54. 6.

8. velut eluctantium verborum. Compare I. 11.

9. P. Suillius (Rufus).

11. amovendum in insulam. There were two kinds of banishment: Relegatio, by which a person was driven from Italy or confined to a particular province, but retained his citizenship and property; and Deportatio in insulam, which involved the loss of both, and was the representative of the more ancient aquae et ignis interdictio. The relegatus went into exile, the deportatus was carried, often in chains. In case of the relegatio of a provincial, he was banished from Rome and from his own province.

14. vertit. Quod is the subject.

18. ut rettuli. II. 27.

32. Pleraque eorum, quae rettuli quaeque referam, parva forsitan et levia memoratu videri non nescius sum : sed nemo annales nostros cum scriptura eorum contenderit, qui veteres populi Romani res composuere. Ingentia illi bella, expugnationes urbium, fusos captosque reges, aut si quando ad interna 5 praeverterent, discordias consulum adversum tribunos, agrarias frumentariasque leges, plebis et optimatum certamina libero egressu memorabant : nobis in arto et inglorius labor ; immota quippe aut modice laccessita pax, maestae urbis res et princeps proferendi imperi incuriosus erat. Non tamen sine usu fuerit 10 introspicere illa primo aspectu levia, ex quis magnarum saepe rerum motus oriuntur.

33. Nam cunctas nationes et urbes populus aut primores aut singuli regunt : delecta ex iis et consociata rei publicae forma laudari facilius quam evenire, vel si evenit, haud diuturna esse potest. Igitur ut olim plebe valida, vel cum patres pol- 5 lerent, noscenda vulgi natura et quibus modis temperanter haberetur, senatusque et optimatum ingenia qui maxime perdidicerant, callidi temporum et sapientes credebantur, sic converso statu neque alia re Romana quam si unus imperitet, haec 10 conquiri tradique in rem fuerit, quia pauci prudentia honesta ab deterioribus, utilia ab noxiis discernunt, plures aliorum eventis docentur. Ceterum ut profutura, ita minimum oblectationis adferunt. contenderit. Potential subjunctive.

6. agrarias—leges, etc. In the times of the Gracchi.

7. libero egressu. "Without constraint." They delayed upon home affairs only by preference, and could launch out into interesting foreign matters whenever they pleased.

8. nobis in arto. Muretus quotes Verg. Georg. IV. 6—"In tenui labor ; at tenuis non gloria."

33. 2. delecta ex iis et consociata rei publicae. Polybius (VI. 3-11) claims that these mixed governments are the best ; that such a constitution was secured to Sparta by the wisdom of Lycurgus ; and that the Romans had gradually framed a similar one by experience. Cicero also (de Republica) praises the mixed government. Blackstone quotes these words of Tacitus to disprove them by the constitution of England, which unites the three forms of government.

8. neque alia—imperitet. "The government of Rome being practically a monarchy," although it preserved republican names for magistrates.

9. prudentia. Few men are able to foresee what will be good or evil ; they must learn from experience.

11. ut profutura. "Though they are sure to be profitable."

obvia—satietate. Always encountering the same cruelty and cowardice, until we are tired of them.

22. diversa. "Their opposites."

34. 2. tunc primum audito. This persecution of authors was revived by Domitian against Arulenus Rusticus and Helvidius Priscus.

3. editis annalibus. Cordus published his work many years before, and had recited it in the presence of Augustus without giving offence.

Romanorum ultimum. Brutus first pronounced this eulogy upon Cassius; Cordus merely quoted the words.

5. Seiani clientes. The old relations of patron and client had long been extinct. These men were well-born but needy dependants of Sejanus. Seneca, in his Consolatio ad Marciam, the daughter of Cordus, says that Sejanus kept men like watch-dogs, to let loose on whom he would. On this occasion he gave them Cordus, who had offended him by a joke (III. 72, N.), to worry.

20. perviguere. “Prospered to the end of their lives.”

21. rescripta oratione. Two books called the Anticatones, written at the time of the battle of Munda; dictator expresses his absolute power at the time.

22. Antonii epistulae. In which he accused Augustus of low birth, cowardice, and indecency.

24. (M. Furi) Bibaculi.

28. adgnita videntur. “You seem to take notice of them.”

35. 2. etiam libido. “But even their wantonness.” Sed is omitted, as in III. 19.

6. An illi quidem, etc. “Or may I not rather say.” When num and an introduce consecutive questions, the first expects a negative, the latter an affirmative answer.

7. septuagesimum—annum. Round number for 67.

8. quas—abolevit. Augustus, on seeing a fine statue of Brutus at Mediolanum, commended the inhabitants for devotion to their old friends. But the images could not be displayed at funerals (III. 76, N.).

12. vitam—finivit. He pretended to take food, and his design was not discovered by his daughter Marcia for three days. The accusers, on learning it, endeavoured to hasten the trial; but death was too quick for them.

Libros—cremandos. “So he died,” says Dion, “and such of his books as could be found in the city were burned by the aediles, and the rest by the magistrates of different places. But afterwards (i.e. under Caligula) they were published again, for they had been preserved by various people, and particularly by his daughter Marcia; and they were esteemed much more highly on account of the fate of Cordus.”

36. 2. feriarum Latinarum diebus, Forty-seven tribes of Latium were united in a sacred confederation, which celebrated an annual festival with sacrifices to Jupiter Latiaris on the Alban Mount. Tarquinius Superbus gained for Rome the presidency of the confederacy and sacrifice. The festival was a movable one of six days, usually towards the end of April. The consuls fixed the time, and went out to the Alban Mount with the other magistrates. (Of course the Latin tribes had been long extinct.) Meanwhile the city was governed by a titular praefectus urbi (to be distinguished in every way from the regular praefectus urbi, VI. 11, N.), usually a noble youth who entered upon (auspicatus est) his public career by presiding on the tribunal (I. 75, N.). His jurisdiction was only nominal, and it was not customary to perplex him or occupy the holiday with serious cases.

5. causa exilii Salviano. Tiberius did not press his banishment, but the senate were always glad of an opportunity to attack an informer.

4. praesentem scripto adire. Julius Caesar had introduced the custom, on account of the pressure of business. Augustus aided his memory by notes in important conversations, even with Livia, lest he might say too much or too little.

5. iudicia. “Tokens of confidence.”

10. coniunctione Caesaris. By the betrothal of the daughter of Sejanus to the son of Claudius (§ 7, N.).

equite Romano senescat. Ego ut sinam, credisne passuros qui fratrem eius, qui patrem maioresque nostros in summis imperiis videre? Vis tu quidem istum intra locum sistere: sed illi magistratus et primores, qui te invitum perrumpunt omnibusque de rebus consulunt, excessisse iam pridem equestre fastigium 20 longeque antisse patris mei amicitias non occulti ferunt perque invidiam tui me quoque incusant. At enim Augustus filiam suam equiti Romano tradere meditatus est. Mirum hercule, si cum in omnis curas distraheretur immensumque attolli provideret quem coniunctione tali super alios extulisset, C. Pro- 25 culeium et quosdam in sermonibus habuit insigni tranquillitate vitae, nullis rei publicae negotiis permixtos. Sed si dubitatione Augusti movemur, quanto validius est quod Marco Agrippae, mox mihi conlocavit? Atque ego haec pro amicitia non occultavi: ceterum neque tuis neque Liviae destinatis adversabor. 30 Ipse quid intra animum volutaverim, quibus adhuc necessitudinibus inmiscere te mihi parem, omittam ad praesens referre: id tantum aperiā, nihil esse tam excelsum, quod non virtutes istae tuusque in me animus mereantur, datoque tempore vel in senatu vel in contione non reticebo.” 35

41. Rursum Seianus, non iam de matrimonio, sed altius metuens, tacita suspicionum, vulgi rumorem, ingruentem invidiam deprecatur. Ac ne adsiduos in domum coetus arcendo infringeret potentiam aut receptando facultatem criminantibus praeberet, huc flexit, ut Tiberium ad vitam procul Roma 5 amoenis locis degendam impelleret. Multa quippe providebat: sua in manu aditus literarumque magna ex parte se arbitrum fore, cum per milites commearent; mox Caesarem vergente iam senecta secretoque loci mollitum munia imperii facilius

17. fratrem (Germanicum); patrem (Drusum); maiores (Augustum et Julium per adoptionem).

19. qui te invitum perrumpunt. Tiberius affects to believe that Sejanus dislikes the officiousness of politicians (IV. 2, N.), but gives a quiet hint of what they say when they quit his levees.

21. amicitias = amici (Int. 2). He refers to the equestrian friends of Augustus—Maecenas, Sallustius, and Proculeius. They had never enjoyed such influence as Sejanus.

22. At enim. ἀλλὰ γάρ.

23. Mirum hercule. Ironical. It was not to be wondered that Augustus, under the stress of circumstances, should choose a son-in-law who could not dream of reigning himself.

27. si—movemur. If we remember that Augustus hesitated about the matter, we certainly should not forget that he came to an opposite decision.

31. quibus adhuc, etc. “By what further ties.” After the death of Nero (son of Germanicus) Tiberius is said to have intended Julia (daughter of Drusus) for Sejanus (V. 6, N.).

14. praecipua rerum—agitari. Sejanus intends to study philosophy.

42. 2. cunctantem iam. "Already inclined" to leave Rome.

7. obstrepentes. The senators cry out, as if they could not bear to hear such charges. Aemilius persists, with a soldier's bluntness.

9. in cognitione. "In the course of the trial." The case was not yet opened; the senate was taking preliminary evidence.

4. Macedonis Philippi. Philip II. He contracted the Lacedaemonian boundaries in B.C. 338, after the battle of Chaeronea.

7. inter Herculis posteros. At the time of the Dorian invasion of the Peloponnesus, 1104 B.C., the country was divided between the descendants of Hercules—Tecmenus receiving Argos, Cresphontes Messenia, and the sons of Aristodemus Lacedaemon.

9. sculpta saxis. Boundary stones have been found on the summit of Mount Taygetus, east of the ruins of the temple of Diana Limnatis, bearing the inscription: "Ὁρος Λακεδαιμονι πρὸς Μεσσηνίῃν."

10. Quod si—vocentur. "But if they were challenged to produce their evidence from poets and histories." The topographical statements of great poets were received in evidence of ancient affairs, the purity of the text being a matter of national interest.

11. locupletiores = "More reliable."

14. praetorem. I. 74, N.

secundum Messenios. "It was decided in favour of the Messenians," and remained so in the time of Pausanias, A.D. 174.

16. nota—de origine ejus. According to Verg. Aen. V. 759, Aeneas, the ancestor of the Julian line, built the temple at Eryx to his mother, Venus.

17. Suscepit curam. Tiberius, however, who was not fond of building, delayed the matter, and the restoration was completed by Claudius.

18. Massiliensium preces. Vulcatius Moschus, banished from Rome and settled at Massilia, bequeathed his fortune to his adopted city. His heirs tried to break the will, on the ground that an exile could not lawfully obtain citizenship in foreign cities; but the senate approved the precedent of the case of P. Rutilius, who had bequeathed his property to Smyrna, a century and a half before.

7. minor Antonia. A mistake. It was the elder Antonia who was betrothed to Domitius in B.C. 37. Her younger sister, the wife of Drusus Jr., was not then born. Tacitus repeats this error (XII. 64). Suetonius gives the correct statement, Ner. 5.

9. quam quisquam priorum. Attracted into the construction of transcendit; it should be the ablative of agent after penetrata.

13. sororis nepotem. Iulus Antonius married Marcella, daughter of Octavia.

15. tumulo Octavium. At Velitrae. To be distinguished from the tumulus Caesarum (I. 8, N.).

45. 2. praetorem provinciae. I. 74, N.

9. sermone patrio. The Iberian was parent of the modern Basque.

14. quippe pecunias—cogebat. He collected money which had been due to the city and withheld by the people.

46. 3. montium editis. The tribes of the Haemus (Balkans), north of the Roman province. Roby (1239) prefers incultu to sine cultu.

 turbati sunt receptique subsidio Sugambrae cohortis, quam 15 Romanus promptam ad pericula nec minus cantuum et armo-rum tumultu trucem haud procul instruxerat.

4. pati dilectus. The Romans exacted tribute from civilised countries; soldiers from barbarous districts. Thracian cohorts are often mentioned in inscriptions.

8. disiecti. As members of the regular army, these young Thracians would be liable to duty in different parts of the world, and would finally receive their land bounty in strange countries (I. 17, N.).

47. 1. exercitus. The legion, the auxiliary Thracians, and his own forces.

9. angustum. "With a narrow ridge."

12. tripudiis. "War dances."

13. crebra et inulta vulnera. The Roman bows carried much farther than any barbarian weapons.

48. 2. Thraecibus. Rhometalces and his men.

5 capessent. Id primo servatum: mox versi in luxum et raptis opulenti omittere stationes lascivia epularum, aut somno et vino procumberè. Igitur hostes incuria eorum conperta duo agmina parant, quorum altero populos invaderentur, alii castra Romana adpugnarent, non spe capiendi, sed ut clamore, 10 telis suo quisque periculo intentus sonorem alterius proëlii non acciperet. Tenebrae insuper delectae augendam ad formidinem. Sed qui vallum legionum temptabant, facile pelluntur; Thraecum auxilia repentino incursu territa, cum pars munitionibus adiacerent, plures extra palarentur, tanto infensius caesi, quanto 15 perfugae et proditores ferre arma ad suum patriaeque servitium incusabantur.

49. Postera die Sabinus exercitum aequo loco ostendit, si barbari successu noctis alacres proelium auderent. Et postquam castello aut coniunctis tumulis non degrediebantur, obsidium coepit per praesidia, quae opportune iam muniebat; dein fos- 5 sam loricamque contexens quattuor milia passuum ambitu amplexus est; tum paulatim, ut aquam pabulumque eriperet, contrahere claustra artaque circumdare; et struebatur agger, unde saxa hastae ignes propinquum iam in hostem iacerentur. Sed nihil aequè quam sitis fatigabat, cum ingens multitudo 10 bellatorum inbellium uno reliquo fonte uterentur; simul equi armenta, ut mos barbaris, iuxta clausa, egestate pabuli exanimari; adiacere corpora hominum, quos vulnera, quos sitis peremerat; pollui cuncta sanie, odore, contactu.

Neque ignobiles tantum his diversi sententiis, verum e 5 ducibus Dinis, provectus senecta et longo usu vim atque clementiam Romanam edoctus; ponenda arma, unum adflictis id remedium disserebat, primusque se cum coniuge et liberis victori

6. somno et vino. The Thracians were notorious drunkards.

14. quanto. Often used without a comparative in the second member of a comparison (Int. 46. b).

49. 4. quae — muniebat. "Which he had already begun to establish in suitable places." These he now connected with a ditch and breastworks. Lorica is any slight defence, often made of hurdles; contexo means "to string together," so as to make a completed whole of detached parts.

7. contrahere—circumdare. "He advanced his lines, and drew them close."

50. 4. Neque ignobiles tantum. The chiefs, as well as the people, advanced these opposing views, but, like barbarians, they could agree on no concerted plan.

Utrique destinatum cum libertate occidere, sed 10 Tarsa properum finem, abrumpendas pariter spes ac metus clamitans, dedit exemplum demisso in pectus ferro ; nec defuere qui eodem modo oppeterent. Turesis sua cum manu noctem opperitur, haud nescio duce nostro ; igitur firmatae stationes densioribus globis. Et ingruerat nox nimbo atrox, hostisque 15 clamore turbido, modo per vastum silentium, incertos obsessores effecerat, cum Sabinus circumire, hortari ne ad ambigua sonitus aut simulationem quietis casum insidiantibus aperirent, sed sua quisque munia servarent immoti telisque non in falsum iactis.

Interea barbari catervis decurrentes nunc in vallum manualia saxa, praeustas sudes, decisa robora iacere, nunc virgultis et cratibus et corporibus exanimis complere fossas, quidam pontis et scalas ante fabricati inferre propugnaculis 5 eaque prensare, detrahare et adversum resistentis comminus niti. Miles contra deturbare telis, pellere umbonibus, muralia pila, congestas lapidum moles provolvere. His partae victoriae spes et, si cedant, insignitius flagitium, illis extrema iam salus et adsistentes plerisque matres et coniuges earumque lamenta addunt animos. Nox aliis in audaciam, aliis ad formidinem 10 opportuna ; incerti ictus, vulnera improvisa ; suorum atque hostium ignoratio et montis anfractu repercussae velut a tergo voces adeo cuncta miscuerant, ut quaedam munimenta Romani quasi perrupta omiserint. Neque tamen pervasere hostes nisi admodum pauci : ceteros, deiecto promptissimo quoque aut 15 saucio, adpetente iam luce trusere in summa castelli, ubi tandem coacta deditio. Et proxima sponte incolarum recepta : reliquis, quo minus vi aut obsidio subigerentur, praematura montis Haemi et saeva hiems subvenit.

them with grappling hooks, and tried to haul them down.

6. muralia pila. Heavier than others. Supply jacere by zeugma from provolvere.

10. Nox—opportuna. The darkness aided the efforts of the bold, and concealed the backwardness of cowards.

Marcella Minor married Appius Claudius Pulcher, whose name was borne by their daughter, though he changed his own by adoption into the Valerian gens.

3. recens praetura. Sc. ab. He had just laid down the praetorship, and was hoping for a consulship.

5. veneficia—et devotiones. "Sorceries and enchantments." The devotiones were forms of imprecation, devoting the emperor's life to the gods of hell.

8. Quo initio invidiae. She took his

10. sed imaginem. "But that she herself, the living image of Augustus, sprung from his divine blood, saw her peril, and went in mourning" (for her cousin) (II. 29, N.).

12. praescribi. "Was used as a pretext."

15. correptamque. Suetonius describes the scene—"Agrippinam manu apprehendit, Graecoque versu, 'Si non dominaris,' inquit, 'filiola, injuriam te accipere existimas?' nec ullo mox sermone dignatus est."

18. suo jure disertum. "An orator in his own right," without needing the seal of imperial favour.

cent might fly to paramours ; an honest woman could only be consoled by a husband. By Roman law, and by pagan sentiment, an unmarried woman was in a most helpless and wretched condition, and her life could only be made complete by alliance with a man.

5. civitate—Germanici. There is a gap of fourteen letters in the MS. Haase supplies "qui divo Augusto ortam."

7. ex republica. "From a political standpoint." It affected the succession to the throne.

54. 4. non vultu aut sermone flecti. She maintained a stony silence, with fixed gaze, throughout the entertainment.

15. super numerum legaretur. A propraetor had one praetorian legatus, a proconsul had three consulars. On this occasion the proconsul is allowed to choose a fourth (praetorian) legatus. The governors of senatorial provinces chose their own legati, with the emperor's approval; but the emperor himself appointed the legati and assessores of his governors in imperial provinces, and such legati or assessores were of praetorian (sometimes quaestorian) rank.

Profectio arto comitatu fuit: unus senator consulatu functus, Cocceius Nerva, cui legum peritia, eques Romanus praeter Seianum ex inlustribus Curtius Atticus, ceteri liberalibus studiis praediti, ferme Graeci, quorum sermonibus levaretur. 5 Ferebant periti caelestium iis motibus siderum excessisse Roma Tiberium, ut reditus illi negaretur. Unde exitii causa multis fuit properum finem vitae coniectantibus vulgantibusque; neque enim tam incredibilem casum providebant, ut undecim per annos libens patria careret. 62. M. Licinio L. Calpurnio consulibus ingentium bellorum cladem aequavit malum inprovisum : eius initium simul et finis exstitit. Nam coepto apud Fidenam amphitheatro Atilius quidam libertini generis, quo spectaculum gladiatorum cele-5 braret, neque fundamenta per solidum subdidit, neque firmis nexibus ligneam compagem superstruxit, ut qui non abundantia pecuniae nec municipali ambitione, sed in sordidam mercedem id negotium quaesivisset. Adfluxere avidi talium, imperitante Tiberio procul voluptatibus habiti, virile ac muliebre secus,
10 omnis aetas, ob propinquitatem loci effusius ; unde gravior pestis fuit, conferta mole, dein convulsa, dum ruit intus aut in exteriora effunditur inmensamque vim mortalium, spectaculo intentos aut qui circum adstabant, praeceps trahit atque operit. Et illi quidem, quos principium stragis in mortem adflixerat, 15 ut tali sorte, cruciatum effugere : miserandi magis quos abrupta parte corporis nondum vita deseruerat ; qui per diem visu, per noctem ululatibus et gemitu coniuges aut liberos noscebant. Iam ceteri fama exciti, hic fratrem, propinquum ille, alius parentes lamentari. Etiam quorum diversa de causa amici aut 20 necessarii aberant, pavere tamen ; nequedum comperto quos illa vis perculisset, latior ex incerto metus.

63. Ut coepere dimoveri obruta, concursus ad exanimos complectentium, osculantium ; et saepe certamen, si confusior facies, sed par forma aut aetas errorem adgnoscentibus fecerat. Quinquaginta hominum milia eo casu debilitata vel obtrita indeed, but did not support the traditional account of his eloquence.

62. 1. M. Licinio (Crasso Frugi) L. Calpurnio (Plasone).

2. malum inprovisum. "An accident due to carelessness."

3. coepto — amphitheatro. Dative after subdidit.

Fidenam. Used in the singular by Vergil, and (rarely) in later Latin.

4. celebraret. "To gather many spectators for."

7. municipali ambitione. "To win popularity with his townsmen."

8. imperitante Tiberio. Tiberius changed the customs of Augustus, who entertained the people with shows, and enjoyed them himself.

9. secus. Adverbial accusative.

15. ut tali sorte. "Though involved in such ruin."

16. qui—noscebant. A different class from those mentioned before ; the men who escaped unharmed and then began the search for their friends ; noscebant = "sought for."

63. 2. si confusior facies, sed, etc. If the face were too much disfigured to be recognised, but enough of the body were preserved to bear a likeness and create a discussion.

4. Quinquaginta — milia. Suetonius sunt; cautumque in posterum senatus consulto, ne quis 5 gladiatorium munus ederet, cui minor quadringentorum milium res, neve amphitheatrum imponeretur nisi solo firmitatis spectatae. Atilius in exilium actus est. Ceterum sub recentem cladem patuere procerum domus, fomenta et medici passim praebiti, fuitque urbs per illos dies quamquam maesta facie 10 tione et cura sustentabant.

tiae ut mons Caelius in posterum Augustus appellaretur, quando cunctis circum flagrantibus sola Tiberii effigies, sita in domo 10 says that 20,000 were killed outright; debilitata = maimed.

6. gladiatorium munus ederet. Which in country towns implied building an amphitheatre.

quadringentorum milium. An equestrian fortune. No equus would disgrace himself by exhibiting shows for pay.

7. firmitatis spectatae. Implying a government supervision.

11. veterum institutis similis. Livy (II. 47) gives an account of such kindness shown by the nobles after a battle with the Veientes, B.C. 478. The public hospitals (I. 71, N.) could not accommodate the great number on the present occasion.

64. 3. consilium absentiae. Tiberius had visited the city for a short time after the disaster at Fidenae, and then returned to Caprae in the greatest privacy, no one being allowed to approach his litter on the journey.

5. tribuendo pecunias. From his own fortune, as Velleius Paterculus relates; Tiberius displayed his generosity also towards the cities of Asia overthrown by an earthquake (II. 47), and on the occasion of a financial panic (VI. 17). His munificence was always well considered. In the last instance the loans made were probably from the public treasury.

7. sine ambitione. "Uninfluenced by a desire for popularity, or by the intercession of courtiers."

9. Augustus appellaretur. This was carried out for some time.

12. eiusque statuam. This is a peculiar inversion. The meaning is, that the statue, which had been placed in the temple of Cybele, escaped two conflagrations of that shrine, in B.C. 111 and A.D. 3.

14. augendam caerimoniam. The sanctity was increased by commemorating the miracle in the name of the hill.

65. Haud fuerit absurdum tradere montem eum antiquitus Querquetulanum cognomento fuisse, quod talis silvae frequens fecundusque erat, mox Caelium appellitatum a Caele Vibenna, qui dux gentis Etruscae cum auxilium appetivisset, sedem eam

66. Sed ut studia procerum et largitio principis adversum casus solacium tulerant, ita accusatorum maior in dies et infestior vis sine levamento grassabatur; corripueratque Varum Quintilium, divitem et Caesari propinquum, Domitius Afer,
 5 Claudia Pulchrae matris eius condemnator, nullo mirante quod diu egens et parto nuper praemio male usus plura ad flagitia accingeretur. P. Dolabellam socium delationis extitisse miraculo erat, quia claris maioribus et Varo conexus suam ipse nobilitatem, suum sanguinem perditum ibat. Restitit tamen 10 senatus et opperiendum imperatorem censuit, quod unum urgumentum malorum suffugium in tempus erat.

67. At Caesar dedicatis per Campaniam templis, quamquam edicto monuisset ne quis quietem eius inrumperet, concursusque oppidanorum disposito milite prohiberentur, perosus tamen municipia et colonias omniaque in continenti sita, Capreas
 5 se in insulam abdidit, trium milium freto ab extremis Surrentini promunturii diiunctam. Solitudinem eius placuisse maxime crediderim, quoniam inportuosum circa mare et vix modicis navigiis pauca subsidia; neque adpulerit quisquam nisi gnaro

65. 2. talis silvae. i.e. live oaks. This is the only instance of a genitive with frequens.

4. auxilium appetivisset. The MS. gives appelatum lavisset. The copyist's mind had been full of the unusual form appellitatum, just above; the letters ap started him on this course, though he ended the word in visset without reflection.

6. scriptores—dissentiunt. Varro and Dionysius of Halicarnassus refer Vibenna to the time of Romulus; Cicero and Strabo to Ancus Martius; Livy to Tullus Hostilius; Claudius (the emperor) and Festus, with Tacitus, to Tarquinius Priscus.

8. Tuscum vicum. Extending southwest from the forum to the Velabrum. Livy says that it was first settled by the fugitives from Porsenna's army, after his defeat by the Cumaeans.

66. 2. casus. The MS. gives casum, which would produce a disagreeable sound. Besides, two disasters have been mentioned.

6. parto nuper praemio. A quarter of Claudia's fortune.

7. Publium (Cornellum) Dolabellam.

11. suffugium in tempus. "A temporary respite."

67. 1. dedicatis—templis. To Jove at Capua, and to Augustus at Nola (§ 57, N.).

8. subsidia. "Landing places." There are but two.

Graecos ea tenuisse Capreasque Telebois habitatas fama tradit. Sed tum Tiberius duodecim villarum nominibus et molibus insederat, quanto intentus olim publicas ad curas, 15 tanto occultiores in luxus et malum otium resolutus. Manebat quippe suspicionum et credendi temeritas, quam Seianus augere etiam in urbe suetus acrius turbabat non iam occultis adversum Agrippinam et Neronem insidiis. one could land unobserved by the watchmen from a look-out tower, whose fall, just before the death of Tiberius, was considered ominous.

9. objectu montis. The heights of Ana-Capri in the western part of the island have an elevation of 1600 feet, and from thence a ridge crosses it, leaving several ruined villas on the south.

10. aestas—obversa. "In summer it catches the west wind."

11. pulcherrimum sinum. "Before me lay several rich and prosperous islands; Naples, with all its hills and crowded suburbs, backed by the towering Apennine; Vesuvius pouring forth volumes of smoke; at its feet innumerable villages and verdant plains, contrasted with purple lavas; immediately beneath me Minerva's Promontory, advancing towards Capri, and dividing the Neapolitan bay from the semicircular basin of Salerno, at the bottom of which the sunbeams pointed out the white ruins of Paestum."—Swinburne's Travels in the Two Sicilies, III. 1.

12. Vesuvius—ardescens. The eruption of A.D. 79.

14. duodecim villarum. Wherever you went on the island you were overshadowed by one of these palaces, or found yourself in grounds of the same name. Apparently the villas were named after the twelve gods.

19. additus miles. Probably as a guard of honour.

20. velut in annales. See VI. 24. "Recitarique factorum dictorumque ejus (Drusi) descripta per dies jussit."

ultroque struebantur. "And informers were employed on his part."

Igitur Latiaris iacere fortuitos primum sermones, mox laudare constantiam, quod non, ut ceteri, florentis domus amicus afflictam deseruisset; simul honora de Germanico, Agrippinam miserans,

4. laquearia. A panelled ceiling, separated by some little space from the roof. From the words foraminibus and rimis, the panels were probably carved in open work designs.

9. instantia = praesentia.

10. diutius. "At greater length."

Non imprudentem Tiberium tantam invidiam adisse, sed quaesitum meditatūque, ne quid impedire credatur quo minus novi magistratus, quo modo delubra et altaria, sic carcerem recludent. Secutae insuper literae grates agentis, quod hominem infensum 15 rei publicae punivissent, adiecto trepidam sibi vitam suspectas inimicorum insidias, nullo nominatim conpellato ; neque tamen dubitabatur in Neronem et Agrippinam intendi.

71. Ni mihi destinatum foret suum quaeque in annum referre, avebat animus antire statimque memorare exitus, quos Latinius atque Opsius ceterique flagitii eius repertores habuere, non modo postquam Gaius Caesar rerum potitus est, sed incolumi Tiberio, qui scelerum ministros ut perverti ab aliis nolebat, ita 5 plerumque satius et oblati in eandem operam recentibus veteres et praegraves adflixit : verum has atque alias sontium poenas in tempore trademus. The letter was written before, but read in the senate on New Year's Day.

5. obducta veste, etc. His head was muffled with his toga, and the halter with which he was to be strangled in prison (III. 50, N.) was already cast about his neck.

6. has Seiano victimas cadere. To the new god, Sejanus (§ 2, N.).

9. Quem enim diem. The speech of the people.

10. verbis — profanis abstineri. Tibullus (II. 2), of a birthday, says :

"Dicamus bona verba, venit natalis, ad aras.
Quisquis ades lingua vir mulierque fave."

11. Non imprudentem. Tiberius had resolved to show his absolute power and contempt for popular opinion by a striking example. It was against all precedent to allow an execution on January 1st, and any unlucky occurrence on that day was ominous (III. 14, N.). When Marius had ordered executions on New Year's Day, it was considered and proved to be the forerunner of public trouble.

14. delubra et altaria. Regularly visited and honoured by the consuls on their first day of office.

71. 2. avebat. Madvig, 337, 1. "I was just beginning to desire, but must check myself."

4. incolumi Tiberio. This refers to Latiaris (VI. 4). The other informers fell under Caligula.

9. matertera. His wife Vipsania was half-sister of Agrippina.

6. urorum. A species of wild ox, now extinct. Caesar says that they were nearly as large as elephants, and very dangerous. The Germans caught them in pitfalls, and considered them great prizes.

9. modica domi armenta. The German cattle were abundant, but of small size, which is here the meaning of modica. The domestic animals of northern Europe have been much improved by breeding and selection; the increased size of breeds being proved by bones from excavations.

11. subveniebatur. By Olennius, to whom they applied for relief from the exactions of his agents.

1. 1. (L.) Rubellio (Gemino) et (C.) Fufio (Gemino).
2. aetate extrema. She was eighty-six years old. The text of Pliny makes it eighty-two, but her son, Tiberius, was already seventy.
3. nobilitatis—clarissimae. Livia was descended from Claudius Pulcher, a son of Appius Claudius Caecus, and her husband was descended from another son of the blind censor. Livia's father had been adopted by M. Livius Drusus, tribunus plebeius B.C. 91. By the will of Augustus she was received into the Julian gens.
10. sanguini Augusti—adnexa.
Livia. Augustus.

Drusus. Julia.

Germanicus = Agrippina.

12. comis ultra quam—probatum. Singing, dancing, easy conversation, graceful manners, were considered the accomplishments rather of a courtesan than a matron.
13. mater inpotens, uxor facilis. When asked how she had maintained her influence over Augustus, Livia replied—“By perfect chastity; by doing all his bidding cheerfully; by never meddling in any of his affairs. And as for his amours, I never even pretended to be aware of them.” With this perfect self-control, Tacitus contrasts her impotentia as a mother; the passionate eagerness with which she advanced Tiberius to the throne; and the domineering spirit with which she subsequently tried to control his actions.

filii bene composita. Funus eius modicum, testamentum diu

2. At Tiberius, quod supremis in matrem officiis defuisset, nihil mutata amoenitate vitae, magnitudinem negotiorum per literas excusavit, honoresque memoriae eius ab senatu large decretos quasi per modestiam imminuit, paucis admodum remuliebres, Fufium consulem oblique perstringens. Is gratia Augustae floruerat, aptus adliciendis feminarum animis, dicax idem et Tiberium acerbis facetiis inridere solitus, quarum apud 10 praepotentes in longum memoria est.

3. Ceterum ex eo praerupta iam et urguens dominatio; nam incolumi Augusta erat adhuc perfugium, quia Tiberio inveteratum erga matrem obsequium, neque Seianus audebat auctoritati parentis antire: tunc velut frenis exsoluti prorupe-adlatas et cohibitas ab Augusta credidit vulgus; haud enim multo post mortem eius recitatae sunt. Verba inerant quaesita asperitate: sed non arma, non rerum novarum studium, amores iuvenum et inpudicitiam nepoti obiectabat. In nurum ne id testamentum .diu inritum. The legacies were at length paid by Caligula, A.D. 38.

15. Laudata est pro rostris. III. 5, N.

2. 1. quod—defuisset. In four years previous to his mother's death, Tiberius had spent but one day with her. He would not visit her during her illness, and after her death deferred the funeral by false pretences of coming to Rome, until the body began to decay.

3. honoresque — imminuit. Only allowing a public funeral, statues, etc.

5. caelestis religio. Claudius, however, deified Livia, erected her image in the temple of Augustus, appointed sacrifices in her honour, and decreed that women should swear by her name.

3. 1. praerupta = precipitous; inaccessible. The gloomy phase of his character began to manifest itself.

urguens = oppressive.

4. antire = to oppose.

5. missae. They were now sent to the consuls, and presented to the senate; but it was generally believed that the despatches had arrived before Livia's death, and that she had obliged the consuls (especially Fufius, who was in her interest) to suppress them for a time.

7. quaesita = intentional; "studied."

10. adrogantiam oris. "Presumptuous language."

4. Fuit in senatu Iunius Rusticus, componendis patrum actis delectus a Caesare, eoque meditationes eius introspicere creditus. Is fatali quodam motu (neque enim ante specimen constantiae dederat) seu prava sollertia, dum imminentium oblitus incerta pavet, inserere se dubitantibus ac monere consules ne relationem inciperent; disserebatque brevibus momentis summa verti; posse quandoque domus Germanici exitium paenitentiae esse seni. Simul populus effigies Agrippinae ac Neronis gerens circumstetit curiam faustisque in Caesarem ominibus falsas literas et principe invito exitium domui eius 10 intendi clamat. Ita nihil triste illo die patratum. Ferebantur etiam sub nominibus consularium fictae in Seianum sententiae, exercentibus plerisque per occultum atque eo procacius libidinem ingeniorum. Unde illi ira violentior et materies criminandi: spretum dolorem principis ab senatu, descivisse populum; 15 audiri iam et legi novas contiones, nova patrum consulta; quid reliquum nisi ut caperent ferrum, et quorum imagines pro vexillis secuti forent, duces imperatoresque deligerent?

5. Igitur Caesar repetitis adversum nepotem et nurum

13. ut referretur postulavere. "Called for the question."

promptissimo—Messalino. He was evidently prepared with some villainous sentence, and was eager for his turn to vote.

4. 1. patrum actis. The Journal of the Senate. This had been kept since the time of Julius Caesar, who, in B.C. 59, ordered its publication. Augustus, to increase the influence of the senate, made its proceedings secret. The journal was kept by one of the younger senators, who was advanced to the position from the quaestorship. As nothing was to be recorded that might displease the emperor, this secretary was his nominee. Certain other-quaestors, called candidati Caesaris, were employed to read his epistles and addresses to the senate.

4. prava sollertia. "With mistaken ingenuity."

5. incerta pavet. He dreaded the vengeance of Nero, and forgot the immediate anger of Tiberius.

6. brevibus momentis summa verti. "Denn nach langer Berathung ist doch ein jeder Entschluss nur Werk des Moments."

8. paenitentiae esse seni. An emendation of Ruperti.

9. faustisque—ominibus. To show their loyalty, the people bless the emperor, while they curse his minister.

12. fictae in Sejanum sententiae. No one knew what happened in the senate, but there was an opportunity for Pasquin, and the people exercised their wit and ingenuity in devising whimsical sentences against Sejanus, which they put in the mouth of great nobles. To these Sejanus refers as "novas contiones, nova patrum consulta."

17. quorum imagines pro vexillis. I. 18, N.

5. 4. integra—postulavit. “Still, he ordered them to leave everything in his hands”; he showed his hatred for the house of Germanicus, but suspended action.

6. testarentur. A gap in the only MS. occurs here, covering the events of the rest of A.D. 29, 30, and the first ten months of 31. The events related were, the banishment of Agrippina, the death of Nero, the imprisonment of Drusus, the ambition and fall of Sejanus, and the persecution of his friends. The fifth book probably ended with the death of Sejanus (§ 51, N.), and the MS. begins in the middle of the sixth book; but the early editors made the division at the beginning of the next year, with the consulship of Domitius and Camillus, and later editions retain the numbering of chapters for convenience of reference.

V. 10. Per idem tempus Asia atque Achaia exterritae sunt acri magis quam diuturno rumore, Drusum Germanici filium apud Cycladas insulas, mox in continenti visum. Et erat iuvenis haud dispari aetate, quibusdam Caesaris libertis velut adgnitus; per dolumque comitantibus adliciebantur ignari fama nominis et promptis Graecorum animis ad nova et mira. Quippe elapsam custodiae pergere ad paternos exercitus, Aegyptum aut Suriam invasurum, fingeant simul credebantque. 7. triumvirali supplicio. The triumviri capitales were reckoned among the vigintiviri (III. 29, N.). They had charge of prisons and executions, and had cognisance of the crimes of slaves. The supplicium triumvirale was strangling in prison.

inauditum habebatur. Suetonius says, "Quia more tradito nefas esset."

8. a carnifice—conpressam. "She was violated by the executioner before being strangled." This seems to have removed all religious scruples. In the same way the second triumvirate compelled a young boy to assume the toga before they put him to death.

4. quibusdam Caesaris libertis. Procuratores fisci (IV. 15, N.). They pretended to recognise him for their own ends, but innocent persons were led after them. Libertis is dative of agent; comitantibus, ablative absolute.

7. paternos exercitus. Germanicus had commanded them during his Syrian expedition, thirteen years before.

VI. 1. Cn. Domitius et Camillus Scribonianus consulatum inierant, cum Caesar tramisso quod Capreas et Surrentum interluit freto Campaniam praelegebat, ambiguus an urbem intraret, seu, quia contra destinaverat, speciem venturi simulans. Et marique Ionio. Abl. of way.

17. M. (Junio) Silano.

19. neque—comperimus. Dio Cassius says that some one recognised the young man, stopped him, and sent him to Tiberius at the close of 34 A.D. Zonaras, Dio's abridger, says that he reached Antium early in 35, at the time of Caligula's wedding.

11. 1. consulum. L. Fulcinus Trio and P. Memmius Regulus. The former had been advanced to the consulate on the first of July, and the latter (who had really been the emperor's appointee for crushing Sejanus) on the first of October.

6. trahebat. Inceptive imperfect. He was on the point of bringing Trio to judgment.

[See V. 5, N.]

1. 1. Cn. Domitius (Ahenobarbus), (M. Furius) Camillus Scribonianus.

3. praelegebat. "Began to coast along."

5. degressus. "Having landed." He sailed up the Tiber in a trireme, sending guards ahead to prevent the people from gathering on the bank, moored his ship for a time near the naumachia and the gardens of Caesar (II. 41, N.), and then returned to the cliffs of Capreae. Juvenal (X. 93) gave a description of the "Principis angusta Caprearum in rupe sedentis."

7. more regio. The Roman idea of a king was a cross between a Herod and a Tarquin,—what they had heard from their fathers, and what they had seen in the east.

quirerent pertraherent, dona in promptos, minas adversum abnuentes, et si retinerent propinquus aut parens, vim raptus suaque ipsi libita velut in captos exercebant. 15

2. At Romae principio anni, quasi recens cognitis Liviae flagitiis ac non pridem etiam punitis, atroces sententiae dicebantur in effigies quoque ac memoriam eius, et bona Seiani ablata aerario ut in fiscum cogerentur, tamquam referret. Scipiones haec et Silani et Cassii isdem ferme aut paulum in- 5 mutatis verbis, adseveratione multa censebant, cum repente Togonius Gallus, dum ignobilitatem suam magnis nominibus inserit, per deridiculum auditur. Nam principem orabat deligere senatores, ex quis viginti sorte ducti et ferro accincti, quotiens curiam inisset, salutem eius defenderent. Crediderat nimirum 10 epistulae subsidio sibi alterum ex consulibus poscentis, ut tutus a Capreis urbem peteret. Tiberius tamen, ludibria seriis permiscere solitus, egit gratis benevolentiae patrum: sed quos omitti posse, quos deligi? Semperne eosdem an subinde alios? Et honoribus perfunctos an iuvenes, privatos an e magistratibus? 15 Quam deinde speciem fore sumentium in limine curiae gladios?

15. exercebant. Governs dona and minas by zeugma.

2. 2. non pridem etiam punitis. Immediately after the fall of Sejanus, which occurred on 18th October preceding.

3. in effigies quoque ac memoriam. A sentence of oblivion often passed against traitors (XI. 38, N.).

4. tamquam referret. "As though it made any difference!" The power of the emperor was so absolute that the aerarium or public treasury (XIII. 29, N.) was as much at his control as the fiscus, or privy purse. The fiscus was supplied by the revenues of the imperial provinces, and by the estates of the emperor throughout the world. It supplied pay for the whole military and naval establishment, for imperial officers, postal service, and the corn supply of Rome. In the third century it became the regular treasury of the empire—the aerarium melting into it.

5. Scipiones haec, etc. XIII. 18, N. There were three P. Cornelii Scipiones, father, son, and grandson (of whom the last two are mentioned by Tacitus as belonging to this period), several Junii Silani, and C. and L. Cassius Longinus. Togonius is not elsewhere mentioned.

8. principem orabat. The request was forwarded to Tiberius by vote of the senate. Its absurdity lay in the fact that, as none but senators could enter the senate house, the new law would have armed the only men who could possibly be the emperor's assassins. Tiberius brought the matter out in its true light, by desiring the attendance of soldiers in the sacred assembly (§ 15). Deligere is Tacitean for deligeret.

11. epistulae. This was the verbosa et longa epistola, which the emperor despatched from Capreae to order the destruction of Sejanus. In it he pictured his own defenceless condition, and begged that one of the consuls might come to escort him to Rome. But when his henchman Regulus, after the execution of Sejanus, made his appearance at Capreae, he was refused admission. Of course Togonius could not have believed the letter sincere. Nimirum is ironical.

15. honoribus perfunctos. Men who had held curule offices, distinguished from the new senators, who had only been quaestors (III. 29, N.). The magistratus are the officials of the current year.

Neque sibi vitam tanti, si armis tegenda foret. Haec adversus Togonium verbis moderans, neque ut ultra abolitionem sententiae suaderet.

3. At Iunium Gallionem, qui censuerat ut praetoriani actis stipendiis ius apiscerentur in quattuordecim ordinibus sedendi, violenter increpuit, velut coram rogicans, quid illi cum militibus, quos neque dicta neque praemia nisi ab imperatore accipere par

Repperisse prorsus quod divus Augustus non providerit : an potius discordiam et seditionem a satellite Seiani quaesitam, qua rudes animos nomine honoris ad corrumpendum militiae morem propelleret? Hoc pretium Gallio meditatae adulationis tulit, statim curia, deinde Italia exactus ; et quia incusabatur 10 facile toleraturus exilium delecta Lesbo, insula nobili et amoena, retrahitur in urbem custoditurque domibus magistratuum. Isdem literis Caesar Sextium Paconianum praetorium perculit magno patrum gaudio, audacem, maleficum, omnium secreta rimantem delectumque ab Seiano cuius ope dolus Gaio Caesari pararetur.
15 Quod postquam patefactum, prorupere concepta pridem odia, et summum supplicium decernebatur, ni professus indicium foret.

4. Ut vero Latinium Latiarem ingressus est, accusator ac reus iuxta invisi gratissimum spectaculum praebebant. Latiaris, ut rettuli, praecipuus olim circumveniendi Titii Sabini et tunc luendae poenae primus fuit. Inter quae Haterius Agrippa
5 consules anni prioris invasit, cur mutua accusatione intenta nunc silerent : metum prorsus et noxae conscientiam pro foedere haberi ; at non patribus reticenda quae audivissent. Regulus manere tempus ultionis, seque coram principe exsecuturum ;

18. neque ut ultra. Thus amended by Doederlein : "Nor (though offended with Togonius) did he advise anything further than a rescission of the vote."

8. 2. in quattuordecim ordinibus. Centuriones primipili (II. 11, N.) had retired with the rank of equites, and sat in the fourteen rows of the theatre reserved for equites by the Roscian law (XV. 32, N.). Gallio proposes that the praetorians should retire with the same honour.

5. prorsus. Ironical. Probably Gallio had invented something which had escaped the wisdom of Augustus.

6. a satellite. Refers to Gallio. Sejanus had intended to acquire the empire by means of the praetorians, and any attempt to gain their favour would be esteemed a high offence by the emperor.

9. Italia exactus. Relegatus (IV. 31, N.).

5. consules anni prioris. V. 11, N. intenta. A metaphor taken from aiming an arrow.

Trio aemulationem inter collegas et si qua discordes iecissent melius obliterari respondit. Urgente Agrippa Sanquinius 10
 Maximus e consularibus oravit senatum, ne curas imperatoris conquisitis insuper acerbitatibus augerent: sufficere ipsum statuendis remediis. Sic Regulo salus et Trioni dilatio exitii quaesita. Haterius invisior fuit, quia somno aut libidinis vigiliis marcidus et ob segnitiam quamvis crudelem principem 15

5. Exim Cotta Messalinus, saevissimae cuiusque sententiae auctor eoque inveterata invidia, ubi primum facultas data, arguitur pleraque in C. Caesarem quasi incertae virilitatis, et cum die natali Augustae inter sacerdotes epularetur, novendialem eam cenam dixisse; querensque de potentia M'. Lepidi ac L. Ar- 5

6. Insigne visum est earum Caesaris literarum initium; nam his verbis exorsus est: "quid scribam vobis, patres con- scripti, aut quo modo scribam aut quid omnino non scribam hoc tempore, di me deaque peius perdant quam perire me cotidie sentio, si scio." Adeo facinora atque flagitia sua ipsi 5

3. cum — epularetur. Tiberius had not yet permitted the deification of his mother (V. 2, N.); hence, when the priests celebrated her birthday after her death, Cotta sneeringly called it a "funeral feast," such as a family held at the tomb of the deceased nine days after the funeral.

8. Quae cuncta, etc. "He was convicted of all these charges on the testimony of the greatest nobles" (Int. 23, d).

them exactly in the same form, except that he ends quam cotidie perire sentio. Montaigne (III. 8) does not conceive that these words of the decrepit emperor necessarily refer to the torments of conscience.

So he sees the soul deformed and stained with license, and luxury, and insolence, and intemperance, and he sends it ignominiously to its prison."

15. Caesar. We find a constant custom in the senate of addressing the absent emperor as though present ; he was, of course, represented by his quaestors (V. 4. N.), and the speaker seems to have apostrophised the emperor's statue. In I. 11 and 43, the dead Augustus and Drusus are thus addressed.

10. L. (Calpurnius) Piso pontifex. The office is used as a distinctive title, where there are more than one of the same name, as in the case of the augur Lentulus (III. 59). Piso is mentioned in inscriptions with the same title.

13. memoravi. In the lost book.

15. quod—temperavit. "That he skilfully exercised an authority which had but newly been established as a regular magistracy, and which was the harder to administer because the people were unused to obey." The next chapter explains that the office had been but an occasional one before the times of Augustus, who revived it as a check upon the Roman populace, grown wanton during the long civil wars.

8. bellis civilibus. During the Sicilian war, B.C. 36, and the Actian war, B.C. 31, Maecenas was placed in control of the city as an officer extraordinary, to regulate affairs during the emperor's absence. In 25 B.C. Augustus revived the old office of praefectus urbi, which was offered to Corvinus, and then to Statilius Taurus. The praefectus urbi had control of the city and its environs within a radius of 94 miles (750 stadia). His jurisdiction, which originally was of a police character, for the management of the lowest classes, was enlarged by successive emperors, until the prefect's court quite overshadowed the praetor's. His proceedings were more summary, and his relief more efficient, than any provided by the cumbrous machinery of the ancient tribunals (XIV. 41, N.). He commanded the cohortes urbanae (IV. 5, N.).

but to his friends he declared that the office was incivilis ; it did not agree with his republican ideas.

15. quindecim per annos. Passages in Suetonius (Tib. 42) and Pliny Sr. (XIV. 145) assure us that Piso was appointed to office by Tiberius himself during a census. The first census of his reign was taken in 16 or 17 A.D., and, as Piso died in 32, it follows that viginti, the reading of the MS., is an error caused by a copyist's writing XX. for XV.

12. 1. Since the plebiscitum Atinium (B.C. 132) tribuni plebei had a seat in the senate ; in the succession of offices (XI. 22, N.), the tribuneship was considered an equivalent for the aedileship. They had reserved seats in the curia, and their office gave them a right to introduce motions which other senators did not enjoy (II. 33, N.).

8. magistros. Each collegium of priests, except the pontifices, elected a president or magister yearly. It appears from the address of Tiberius, himself pontifex maximus, or perpetual magister of the pontifices, that matters of religious importance came before a council composed of the magistri.

apud infrequentem senatum. Before a thin house.

10. sanxisse Augustum. Augustus, on assuming the pontificate (B.C. 13), collected all pretended Sibylline books, to the number of two thousand, and burned them publicly. He did this in order to check the unwholesome superstition and desire to pry into the future, which had become so common (I. 75 ; II. 27 ; III. 22, NN.).

12. sociali bello. A mistake. The social war proper ended in 88 B.C. ; the Capitol was burned during the civil war, B.C. 83.

14. Italicas colonias. i.e. Greek colonies in southern Italy, such as Cumae.

2. in theatro. When the immense mass of people was gathered in the theatres, their numbers made it possible for them to express with impunity their desires or resentments concerning public matters by shouts, or by placards displayed upon the walls of the orchestra. It was the impossibility of punishing a manifestation of this kind which made Caligula wish that "the Roman people had but one neck." On the present occasion the shouts for cheap bread were repeated on successive days of the games.

9. sed in superbiam. It was not unusual for the emperor to express his will by an edict posted in the forum (monere vel increpare populum per edictum). On this occasion the emperor, who felt that he had been wronged, as he had been anxiously careful of the corn supplies (III. 54 and N.), endeavours to throw the unpopular duty of reproving the people upon the magistrates. The people, however, declare that the emperor has grown too haughty to express his will to the city except through the mouth of others.

6. tamquam—fugeret. "Accused of flying."

8. apud fretum Siciliae. The straits of Messina. A constitution of Augustus forbade senators to travel outside of Italy and Sicily without a passport from the emperor (XII. 23, N.).

10. incolumis. Cf. Gibbon, chap. III. —"The empire of the Romans filled the world, and when that empire fell into the hands of a single person, the world became a safe and dreary prison for his enemies. The slave of imperial despotism, whether he was condemned to drag his gilded chain in Rome and the senate, or to wear out a life of exile on the barren rock of Seriphus or the frozen banks of the Danube, expected his fate in silent despair. To resist was fatal, and it was impossible to fly."

2. instabat virginum aetas. Drusilla was sixteen; Julia fifteen.

3. oppidanum genus. Opposed to urbanum with contemptuous force (cf. § 8, Sejanum Vulsiniensem). It was the policy of Tiberius to select respectable but insignificant men as his sons-in-law; not willing to introduce in his family young men of rank and influence, to become his rivals. Augustus had once thought of following this course with Julia (IV. 40 and N.).

4. cetera. Adverbial accusative. His great-grandfather was but an eques, and his mother's family of the same rank.

5. comptae. "Studied" or "cultivated," as opposed to natural genius.

6. antiqui. The Cassii had been an honoured Roman family from the first days of the republic. The distinction of patrician and plebeian was merely technical under the empire, except that a patrician could be a flamen major, and could not be a tribunus plebeius.

16. 2. legem dictatoris Caesaris. In B.C. 49 Julius Caesar found that the value of land had fallen so low, on account of the general insecurity of the times, that debtors and mortgagors were being ruined. Moreover, the ready-money had accumulated in the hands of a very few great families. To remedy the inconvenience, he appointed commissioners who should fix the value of land at its natural limits (such as it had held before the civil wars), and ordained that mortgages should be satisfied by foreclosure on this scale; furthermore, that no one should hold more than 60,000 sesterces (£500) in cash. This law compelled men to invest in Italian land, brought down the price of gold, and re-established public confidence. It is probable that he fixed a reasonable rate of interest for the future, though this is not mentioned by historians. The ordinance which wiped out the interest of all existing debts was only a temporary measure to meet the immediate emergency.

4. omissam olim. Experience shows that regulations of commerce can be maintained only by incessant vigilance. Usury laws are evaded in all nations and periods, because men will not encounter special risks without special compensation.

5. vetus—malum. Beginning with the first years of the republic, and occasioning the bitterest complaints of the plebeian debtors of early Rome.

8. unciarium faenore. Niebuhr maintained that unciarium faenus traditionally meant the annual payment of an uncia for the use of an as, i.e. 8½ per cent per annum; or, if we believe that money-lending was regulated by the civil year of ten months, 10 per cent for twelve months. This ingenious theory, though without historical foundation, is generally received on account of its inherent probability. Allowing, then, that the rate of 10 per cent was established by the Twelve Tables in B.C. 450, we find that the general distress consequent upon the Gallic invasion had practically abolished the law, which was re-enacted by Duilius and Maenius, tribunes of the people in B.C. 357. In 347 the tribunes reduced the rate to semunciae usurae, or 5 per cent. Finally, in 342, the tribune Genucius proposed a law which forbade taking compound interest (vetita versura). The restrictions produced many evasions, such as lending money in the names of foreigners, who were not bound by the law, or making contemporaneous sales of property at excessive valuations. In the time of Sulla, traders from the east introduced the rate of centesimae usurae (1 per cent per month, or 12 per annum). When the quieter period of the empire arrived, the rate steadily diminished through natural causes.

12. Sed tum. Returns to the thread of the narration.

16. legis. The law of Julius Caesar, mentioned above.

17. 1. Hinc inopia. "Thus gold rose in value, because every one's debts were called in at the same time," and because confiscations had accumulated all the specie in the treasury. The goods of the condemned properly belonged to the aerarium, but were often transferred to the fiscus (§ 2, N.).

3. Ad hoc. "To prevent this, the senate had ordained that every one should invest two-thirds of his principal (faenus is used in two senses) in Italian real estate." Suetonius informs us (and Nipperdey supposes that the sentence must have been lost from the text of Tacitus) that at the same time the debtors (who were generally noble landowners) were directed to pay two-thirds of their debt, which would thus have been liquidated by transferring their estates at a reasonable rate to the creditors (venditio et emptio); the creditors, however, called for their whole debt in cash, and the debtors, fearing to lose their credit if they appealed to the decree of the senate, complied as far as they could. Then the money-lenders accumulated the money which should have gone for buying lands, awaiting the end of the eighteen months. Meanwhile the price of land went down for want of specie, and the more deeply a man was indebted the more difficult it was for him to realise on his estate (aegrius distrahebantur) and satisfy his creditors.

4. sibimet Tiberius seposuit. § 17, N.

5. Inritatusque suppliciis. The taste of blood roused Tiberius to further cruelties. He seems to have been regarded at this time as almost insane. The spectator of the massacres in Juvenal (X. 83) calls him victus Ajax, implying that he had gone mad and was killing sheep at random.

qui carcere attinebantur. Among others, all the delatores who had served Sejanus were put to death. One of them was a centurion, who endeavoured to escape by giving State's evidence; but Tiberius refused him the privilege, though it had been granted to all civilians. Twenty persons suffered on one day, and the executions continued for some weeks. None of the victims escaped being cast down the Gemoniae (III. 14, N.).

qualem diem. Caligula assumed every day the mood of his grandfather, whether cheerful or sad. Tacitus often uses the metaphor of clothing one's self with sorrow, and here extends the expression to the word diem.

10. Graecis verbis. Suetonius erroneously ascribes the prophecy to Augustus. According to his story, the old emperor pinched the cheek of the boy Galba, saying—"Καὶ σὺ τέκνον τῆς ἀρχῆς ἡμῶν πατρῴξῃ."

11. seram implied by quandoque, and brevem by degustabilia. "Tiberius spared him," says Dio Cassius, "as it seems to me, because this also was fated; but, as he said, because Galba should come to the throne in old age, long after his own death."

12. Chaldaeorum. II. 27, N.

21. 2. literarum ignarus. His ignorance prevented him from understanding and revealing his master's occupations.

3. domus imminet. The tense shows that the castle still existed as a place of interest in the time of Tacitus, who had probably visited it.

8. commoverat. He startled Tiberius by reading the secret desires of his heart, and promising their fulfilment. The prince, feeling that his lack of composure has betrayed him, turns upon the astrologer with suspicion and anger.

9. genitalem horam. According to astrologers, some planets and constellations, as Venus, Jupiter, the Virgin, had a lucky influence; others, as Saturn, Mars, the Scorpion, were unlucky. Their position at the hour of a child's birth was his nativity, and foretold the events of his life; this position was calculated back by astronomical tables. Again, to one whose nativity had been decided, certain new configurations of the planets boded good or evil; hence Tiberius asks whether the present year and hour are favourable or unfavourable to Thrasullus, whose sagacity showed him the drift of the question.

14. praescium — gratatur = praescium esse periculorum exclamat atque ideo incolumem fore gratatur.

22. 4. diversos reperies. Tacitus makes three classes, which represent the common opinions of Romans. First, the Epicurean positivists, who professed pure materialism and utilitarianism, without any belief in providence; these men also denied any connection between the stars and human life, because such connection was considered an expression of divine will. Second, the Stoics of the later school, who professed a modified fatalism, believing in destiny as the will of God, but preserving a shadow of free-will by allowing men a choice of life between good and evil (which, with Stoics, meant virtue and vice, not pleasure and pain, as with the Epicureans). Tacitus usually inclines to this school, which also denied the truth of astrology, but he mentions with respect the opinions of the third class (plurimus mortalium), who firmly believed in the art, and urged notable instances of prophecies which had come to pass.

5. nostri. Int. 34

No one was permitted to see him, and he was allowed only food enough to support life, not to afford pleasure or give him strength. But when he tried to starve himself, it was forced down his throat. A story is told of another prisoner who begged Tiberius for death, and received the answer: "Nondum tecum in gratiam redii."

7. epistolae. Reports to the emperor.

ferebant, ut quis egredientem cubiculo Drusum pulsaverat, exterruerat. Etiam sua verba centurio saevitiae plena, tamquam egregium, vocesque deficientis adiecerat, quis primo [alienationem mentis simulans] quasi per dementiam funesta Tiberio, mox, ubi exspes vitae fuit, meditatae compositaeque diras inprecabatur, ut quem ad modum nurum filiumque fratris et nepotes domumque omnem caedibus complevisset, ita poenas nomini generique maiorum et posteris exsolveret. Obturbabant quidem patres specie detestandi: sed penetrabat pavor et admiratio, callidum olim et tegendis sceleribus obscurum huc confidentiae venisse, ut tamquam dimotis parietibus ostenderet nepotem sub verberibus centurionis, inter servorum ictus, extrema vitae alimenta frustra orantem.

25. Nondum is dolor exoleverat, cum de Agrippina auditum, quam interfecto Seiano spe sustentatam provixisse reor, et postquam nihil de saevitia remittebatur, voluntate extinctam, nisi si negatis alimentis adsimulatus est finis, qui videretur sponte sumptus. Enimvero Tiberius foedissimis criminationibus exarsit, impudicitiam arguens et Asinium Gallum adulterum, eiusque morte ad taedium vitae compulsam. Sed Agrippina aequi inpatiens, dominandi avida virilibus curis feminarum vitia exuerat. Eodem die defunctam, quo biennio ante Seianus poenas lisset, memoriaeque id prodendum addidit Caesar, iactavitque quod non laqueo strangulata neque in Gemonias proiecta foret. Actae ob id grates decretumque ut quintum

8. ut quis—exterruerat. These men had been set on the watch to catch some word from him while angry or frightened which might be interpreted as treasonable.

10. alienationem mentis simulans. At first Drusus had some hope of escape, but his passionate temper compelled him to curse the emperor; so he relieved himself by feigning madness. The bracketed words are probably a gloss, added by a transcriber to explain quasi per dementiam.

14. nepotes. Necavisset must be understood by zeugma from caedibus complevisset. He uses the past tense, because he regards himself as a dead man, and is assured of his mother's fate (nurus) though she survived him.

15. Obturbabant. The senators groaned, as if they could not bear such blasphemy against their emperor.

17. tegendis sceleribus. Dative of end.

19. extrema—alimenta. "The barest sustenance."

25. 2. provixisse. "Had lived on." ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

4. nisi si. "Unless, perchance."

8. aequi inpatiens. "Scorning her own position." Agrippina regarded herself as the rightful empress of Rome, and would have disdained an amour with any ordinary noble.

11. Gemonias. III. 14, N.

12. grates. The vote of thanks was offered to the emperor for his mercy and magnanimity.

quintum decimum. An abbreviated form of ante diem quintum decimum, which appears to be used absolutely as a neuter pronoun, as we say the eighteenth of October.

decumum kal. Novembris, utriusque necis die, per omnis annos donum Iovi sacraretur.

26. Haud multo post Cocceius Nerva, continuus principi, omnis divini humanique iuris sciens, integro statu, corpore inlaeso, moriendi consilium cepit. Quod ut Tiberio cognitum, adsidere, causas requirere, addere preces, fateri postremo grave conscientiae, grave famae suae, si proximus amicorum nullis moriendi rationibus vitam fugeret. Aversatus sermonem Nerva abstinentiam cibi coniunxit. Ferebant gnari cogitationum eius, quanto propius mala rei publicae viseret, ira et metu, dum integer, dum intemptatus, honestum finem voluisse.

10 Ceterum Agrippinae perniciēs, quod vix credibile, Plancinam traxit. Nupta olim Cn. Pisoni et palam laeta morte Germanici, cum Piso caderet, precibus Augustae nec minus inimiciis Agrippinae defensa erat. 14. donum Iovi. It is marked on a calendar of the 4th century as sacred to Jupiter Liberator. An offering of gold was made at the same time to Jupiter Capitolinus.

26. 1. continuus principi. "An inseparable friend."

2. integro statu. No attack had been made upon his honour or his estate. Dio Cassius relates that his mind had been troubled by the commercial panic (§§ 16-17), and the measures by which the emperor controlled it; but it does not appear that Nerva was pecuniarily affected by it.

corpore inlaeso. The Stoics considered a man afflicted by the cancer or other incurable disease justified in committing suicide.

7. abstinentiam cibi coniunxit. Sc. priori abstinentiae. "He persisted in abstaining."

8. quanto propius—viseret. Having a more intimate knowledge of them than any other.

11. palam laeta. II. 75, N.

27. 2. denupsit. Forcellini says that this word denotes a marriage beneath one's station. On Tiberius's choice of sons-in-law, see § 15, N.

4. funere censorio. IV. 15, N.

5. administrandae Suriae imagine. Tiberius, whose jealousy would not suffer men of ability to become provincial governors (I. 80, N.), complimented Lamia by fearing him.

6. Genus illi decorum. His father was a praetor; his ancestors, Roman equites. They boasted their descent from King Lamus of Formiae.

"Aeli vetusto nobilis a Lamo."

Flacco Pomponio Suriae pro praetore defuncto recitantur Caesaris literae, quis incusabat egregium quemque et regendis exercitibus idoneum abnuere id munus, seque ea necessitudine 10 ad preces cogi, per quas consularium aliqui capessere provincias adigerentur, oblitus Arruntium, ne in Hispaniam pergeret, decumum iam annum attineri. 15. conlocavi = posui or scripsi.

16. Aemilium genus. It embraced the Lepidi and the Scauri.

17. corruptis moribus. M. Aemilius Lepidus (III. 27) and his son, the triumvir.

28. 6. ore, etc. Pliny describes the phoenix as of the size of an eagle, purple, with golden neck, red and blue tail, a ruff of feathers around its throat, and a crest like a crown upon its head. Herodotus saw a picture of one in Egypt, with red and yellow feathers. Lactantius says that its eyes sparkled like sapphires.

9. mille quadringentos sexaginta unum. The Egyptians knew the true length of the year, but, instead of intercalating a day, let their civil year fall back a day once in four years. So that it only agreed with the solar year once in $365 \times 4 = 1460$ years. The period of 1461 years was called a fanah or secular period, and from this arose the allegory of the phoenix—the sacred sun-bird.

11. Ptolemaeo. Ptolemaeus Euergetes, who died 222 B.C., 235 years before the accession of Tiberius. Sesosis lived in the 14th, Amasis in the 6th century B.C.

18. suis in terris. In Arabia.

adherents.

9. omisso cultu Romano. The Parthians lived on horseback like their Scythian ancestors (II. 2, N.); their life combined semi-civilisation with oriental luxury; their dress was borrowed from the Medes, sweeping robes, mitres, long beards, etc.

33. At ex regulis prior Mithridates Pharasmanem perpulit dolo et vi conatus suos iuvare, repertique corruptores ministros Arsacis multo auro ad scelus cogunt; simul Hiberi magnis copiis Armeniam inrumpunt et urbe Artaxata potiuntur. Quae postquam Artabano cognita, filium Oroden ultorem parat; dat 5 Parthorum copias, mittit qui auxilia mercede facerent: contra Pharasmanes adiungere Albanos, accire Sarmatas, quorum sceptuchi utrimque donis acceptis more gentico diversa induere. Sed Hiberi locorum potentes Caspia via Sarmatam in Armenios raptim effundunt. At qui Parthis adventabant, facile arce- 10 bantur, cum alios incessus hostis clausisset, unum reliquum mare inter et extremos Albanorum montes aestas impediret, quia flatibus etesiarum implentur vada: hibernus auster revolvit fluctus pulsoque introrsus freto brevia litorum nudantur.

18. in servitium mutatus. In his rôle as courtier, Vitellius accepted the divinity of his master Caligula as an undisputed fact, and avoided looking upon his radiant face, or overhearing his conversations with other gods; when Claudius celebrated secular games, he wished him "many happy returns;" he wore Messalina's slipper next his heart, and set up golden images of the emperor's freedmen among his household gods.

33. 6. Parthorum copias. Beside the regular Parthian cavalry (§ 34, N.), the king collected a varied militia from Assyria, the two Medias, Persia, Hyrcania, Bactria, Chorasmia, etc., armed and marshalled by nations; the experience of centuries having taught the Orientals no better organisation than that of Xerxes and Darius. The hired troops were Scyths (Tartars) from the steppes of Turkestan. On this occasion Sarmatians from the north of the Caspian were also employed. Josephus applies the loose name of Scythian to them also.

7. sceptuchi. "The wand-bearers," a name applied by the Greeks to the chamberlains of the Persian court. In later times the title was given to the subordinate chieftains of the Bosporani and Sarmatae.

9. Caspia via. There are but three practicable roads across the Caucasus; one at its eastern extremity, by the shore of the Caspian; one south of Kuba; and one in the centre near Mount Kazbek, guarded by the fortress of Dariel. The latter was called by the ancients Portae Caucasiae, and is here referred to, but is confused in name with the Portae Caspiae, which were in the country of the Mardi, south-east of the Caspian Sea. Pliny Sr. (VI. 11) mentions this error, and describes the true Portae Caucasiae, which were actually narrow enough to be defended by gates of iron, and which reappear in Sassanian history. The Hiberi, locorum potentes, controlled the pass.

11. alios incessus. The Kuba pass.

13. etesiarum. The north-east winds, which blow steadily across the Caspian during July and August.

castris, infensare pabula; ac saepe in modum obsidii stationibus cingebat, donec Parthi contumeliarum insolentes circumsisterent regem, poscerent proelium. Atque illis sola in equite vis: Pharasmanes et pedite valebat. Nam Hiberi Albanique sal-

Ceterum directam utrimque acie Parthus imperium orientis, claritudinem Arsacidarum contraque ignobilem Hiberum, mer-15 cenario milite disserebat; Pharasmanes integros semet a Parthico dominatu, quanto maiora peterent, plus decoris victores aut, si terga darent, flagitii atque periculi laturos; simul horridam suorum aciem, picta auro Medorum agmina, hinc viros, inde praedam ostendere.

35. Enimvero apud Sarmatas non una vox ducis: se quisque stimulant ne pugnam per sagittas sinerent: impetu et comminus praevenendum. Varias hinc bellantium species, cum Parthus sequi vel fugere pari arte suetus distraheret turmas,

84. 3. infensare pabula. The Parthian cavalry required a large district for foraging.

5. illis sola in equite vis. Justin (XLI. 2) says that the Parthian forces consisted of public slaves, owned and officered by nobles, some of whom could bring 5000 of these vassals to the field. Their children were educated to the same occupation, and treated with the greatest kindness. They fought on horseback, with steel bows, their scale armour protecting horse as well as rider. Their only use of gold and silver was in adorning their arms. They were marshalled by kettle-drums, and their charge was terrible, though easily repulsed by firmness. They could not fight hand to hand, nor besiege cities. Their favourite tactics consisted in the "Parthian flight," from which they turned upon the enemy, disordered by pursuit.

8. Thessalis ortos. The Albanians claimed to be a colony from Alba Longa, with about as much reason. Both Hiberians and Albanians were Turanian peoples.

35. 1. Sarmatas. Like the Parthians they fought on horseback. Their bows did not carry as far (quo brevius valent), but each man carried a stout pike and a sword, and it was their policy to come to close quarters (ne pugnam per sagittas sinerent), while the Parthians sought room for their evolutions (distraherent turmas), and for taking aim. Plutarch says of the Parthians: "Their bows were large and strong, yet capable of bending till the arrows were drawn to the head; the force they went with was consequently very great, and the wounds they gave mortal."

7. frontis et tergi vices. Sc. essent. Where the Parthians succeeded in their tactics, there were turns of fighting and pulsu armorum pellerent pellerentur. Iamque et Albani Hiberique prensare, detrudere, ancipitem pugnam hostibus facere, quos super eques et propioribus vulneribus pedites adflctabant. 10 Inter quae Pharasmanes Orodesque, dum strenuis adsunt aut dubitantibus subveniunt, conspicui eoque gnari, clamore telis equis concurrunt, instantius Pharasmanes; nam vulnus per galeam adegit. Nec iterare valuit, praelatus equo et fortissimis satellitum protegentibus saucium: fama tamen occisi falso 15 credita exterruit Parthos victoriamque concessere.

36. Mox Artabanus tota mole regni ultum iit. Peritia locorum ab Hiberis melius pugnatum; nec ideo abscedebat, ni contractis legionibus Vitellius et subdito rumore, tamquam Mesopotamiam invasurus, metum Romani belli fecisset. Tum omissa Armenia versaeque Artabani res, inlicente Vitellio 5 desererent regem saevum in pace et adversis proeliorum exitiosum. Igitur Sinnaces, quem antea infensum memoravi, patrem Abdagaesen aliosque occultos consilii et tunc continuis cladibus promptiores ad defectionem trahit, adfluentibus paulatim qui metu magis quam benevolentia subiecti repertis auctoribus 10 sustulerant animum. Nec iam aliud Artabano reliquum quam si qui externorum corpori custodes aderant, suis quisque sedibus extorres, quis neque boni intellectus neque mali cura, sed mercede aluntur ministri sceleribus. His adsumptis in longinqua et contermina Scythiae fugam maturavit, spe auxilii, quia 15 Hyrcanis Carmaniisque per adfinitatem innexus erat: atque interim posse Parthos absentium aequos, praesentibus mobiles, ad paenitentiam mutari.

37. At Vitellius profugo Artabano et flexis ad novum regem popularium animis, hortatus Tiridaten parata capessere, robur legionum sociorumque ripam ad Euphratis ducit. Sacrififlying; where the Sarmatians managed to come up with them, the line of combatants seemed, as it were, chained together.

8. Albani Hiberique. They fought on foot, and now contrived, for the first time, to take part in the battle, thus making a double assault (ancipitem pugnam) upon the Parthians, by attacking them with closer blows from the ground, while the mounted Sarmatians used the pikes and scimitars from above. Super is used for desuper. A poetical license.

12. conspicui. By their royal dress.

In an opposite way, weak men, when condemned to death, filled their wills with flattery or lamentations (XV. 68). In the present case, the heirs (children) concealed the will, which was valid on account of their father's suicide (§ 29, N.), fearing that the emperor might confiscate the goods; but he insisted that the whole will should be recited before the senate.

juxta libertatem. "Tends to keep the State free," i.e. from foreign influence. This was shown by the policy of Rome in strengthening the aristocracy of conquered cities, and thus creating a governing class with Roman interests. The Thebans in Thucydides, explaining why their government had favoured the Persian invasion, state that at that time they were governed by a cabal of a few men, a thing : "νόμοις μὲν καὶ τῷ σωφρονεστάτῳ ἐναντιώτατον, ἐγγυτάτῳ δὲ τυράννου" (regiae libidini propior est).

43. 1. ceterasque nationes. It was a weakness of the Parthian empire that its capital, Ctesiphon, was in the extreme west ; while the eastern provinces, Gedrosia and Bactria, extended to the Indus and Hindoo Koosh, 1500 miles away.

not unnaturally had suspected the loyal protestations of Phraates and Hiero as a trap to bring him into his enemy's hands; but when they began to show their jealousy of Abdagaeses, the old sultan believed them. Gibbon, chapter LVIII., applies these words to Raymond of Toulouse, translating: "That aged statesman might clearly discern that, however false in friendship, (Alexius) was sincere in his enmity."

6. propinqua Seleuciae. Tacitus uses a direct accusative after compounds of ad. Cf. I. 13, N.

8. Artabano = Artabani adventu.

11. coaluisse. They were not yet agreed upon a course of action, or upon their loyalty to Artabanus.

13. amne obiecto. The Tigris.

18. a gente Arabum. The Arabs of Edessa, the capital of what was afterwards called Osrhoene, in north-western Mesopotamia (XII. 12).

45. 2. circi. The circus maximus lay between the Palatine and Aventine. It was at this time about half a mile long, and accommodated 260,000 spectators. The vast space under the seats was let out for various uses: brothels in the basement; eating shops on the ground floor; sail-lofts and storehouses above. The circular end, where the Porta Triumphalis of the circus stood, was turned toward the Coelian Hill.

3. exsolutis—pretiis. The want of insurance companies, and all means of distributing losses by fire, was made up, to a certain extent, by an established custom of contribution from the friends of the sufferers. Tiberius had displayed his munificence in this way before (IV. 64, N.).

4. Milies sestertium. £833,000.

6. templum Augusto. Between the Capitoline and Palatine. From the evidence of coins, it seems to have been finished A.D. 34, but it was not dedicated until the time of Caligula, who probably added finishing touches.

7. Pompeiani theatri. Built of marble by Pompeius in B.C. 55; the stage and accessories were destroyed by fire in A.D. 22 (III. 72). The building held 40,000 spectators, and was twice afterwards burned, under Titus and Philip, who restored it, though on a smaller scale. When first erected the prejudice was strong against the construction of permanent theatres. Pompeius conciliated it by building a temple to Venus above the highest tier of seats, and asserting that the benches were but steps to the shrine.

9. Domitius, Cassius, and Vinicius married respectively Agrippina, Drusilla, and Julia, the daughters of Germanicus. Rubellius Blandus married Julia, the daughter of Drusus Jr.

11. P. Petronius (Turpillianus).

20. dominationis. A genitivus partis affectae, after the Greek fashion, and the analogy of potior (III. 73, N.; Int. 35).

46. 2. Druso genitus. Tiberius Gemellus, sixteen years old.

3. Germanici filio. Caligula, twenty-four years old. Tiberius hated him for his father's sake. Dion says that Tiberius chose him in order to be sure of a successor worse than himself.

8. in ludibria et contumelias. The attachment of the people to the house of the Caesars was so great that a pretender who called himself Nero (the last of the family) was eagerly received, and nearly excited a revolution, many years after the real Nero was in his dishonoured grave.

12. non abdita ambage. "In a parable that was clear enough."

17. truci alterius vultu. "Catching Caligula's angry look." Dion says that he found them quarrelling. Caligula undoubtedly calmed down as soon as his grandfather appeared, but his evil eye betrayed him to the keen old man. Cf. XV. 72, N.

"occides hunc tu." Caligula murdered young Tiberius in the course of the same year. He was himself slain by Chaerea four years later.

18. in patientia. "In his sufferings."

20. post tricesimum—annum. According to Plutarch's story, Tiberius called any one a fool who let another feel his pulse after he was sixty years old. Suetonius agrees with Tacitus.

47. 5. intercessit. The tribunes of the people still had the right of veto, and continued to hold it as late as the reign of Nero (XVI. 26) ; but the power was nominal, and when used, as here, without imperial approval, it might be regarded as an infringement of the tribunicia potestas (I. 9. N.).

9. post tantam rerum experientiam.

He was fifty-six at his accession, and had been well tried in war and in peace.

10. convulsus. "Wrenched ;" his character had been distorted from a normal development.

6. luctum communem. "The grief of all parents, and the heart of a woman, less able to endure such a shock." She implies that her sorrow is punishment enough.

8. in eundem dolorem. "To the same pitiful effect."

9. lubricum iuventae. "The dangers of youth;" its slippery paths (Int. 23, c). This younger son was scourged, racked, and beheaded by Caligula, out of pure wantonness, in A.D. 40.

50. 2. sermone. "Guarding his words and looks, and sometimes affecting merriment."

5. in villa. C. Marius built it; Lucullus bought it for £25,000, and adorned it with the grottoes, ponds, and moles which made Tubero call him a "Xerxes togatus." In it Romulus Augustulus, the last of the emperors, was imprisoned A.D. 476. The ruins are found on the summit of Monte Miseno, commanding a superb view of the bay of Caieta on the north, and that of Naples on the south.

7. regere valetudines. § 46, N.

9. per speciem officii. To kiss the hand in homage.

10. Neque fefellit. "But he was detected." Tiberius forced Charicles to remain through the rest of the feast, and at its conclusion insisted upon taking leave of the guests singly, standing with a lictor at his side.

16. Septimum decimum kal(endas) Aprilis. March 16th, A.D. 37. The text of Dio Cassius puts it on March 26th, but a calendar records the accession of Caligula by vote of the senate on the 18th, and the length of reign given by Dion agrees with Tacitus.

Interclusa anima. His respiration ceased.

18. Caesar. "The prince."

24. finivit. One story said that Caligula gave him a slow poison ; another that food was refused him when recovering from a fever ; another that a pillow was thrown upon him, because Caligula had drawn the signet from his finger during an attack of unconsciousness, and Tiberius demanded it on awaking. Seneca said that when the emperor felt himself dying he drew the ring from his hand, as if to give it to some one, but changed his mind and replaced it on his finger, guarding it with his left hand. Then he called for his servants, and, as no one answered, he started from his couch, but fell dead a few paces away. The uncertainty of accounts shows how well the tyrant's castle kept his secrets. When the news of his death reached Rome, people cried : "Tiberius to the Tiber," and talked of the flesh-hook and the Gemoniae (III. 14, N.) ; they prayed Mother Earth and the gods of hell to give him no place among the virtuous. His will left Caligula and Tiberius his equal heirs. Legacies were given to the vestals, and to others.

51. 1. (Ti. Claudius) Nero.

utrimque origo. V. 1, N.

5. multis aemulis. Claudius Marcellus, Augustus's nephew, and the husband of his daughter Julia, died B.C. 23 ; Julia's second husband, Agrippa, in B.C. 12 ; Drusus Sr. in B.C. 9 ; Lucius and Caius Caesars, sons of Agrippa and Julia, in A.D. 2 and 4.

8. tolerans aut declinans. He could not bear the shame of his wife's conduct, which was known to every one in the city except her father ; and when he retired to Rhodes to avoid the disgrace, Augustus deprived him of all political power on account of his apparent stubbornness and sullenness (B.C. 6—A.D. 2).

10. duodecim annis. A.D. 2—14. Caius Caesar survived until A.D. 4, but was away in the east.

A.U.C. 800.
A.D. 47.

Books VII., VIII., IX., X., and part of XI. are wanting. They contained the history of Caligula, and the first six years of Claudius (A.D. 37-47).

At the beginning of the eleventh book we lose the first and best Medicean MS. From this point the text comes through the hands of less careful transcribers. "You would think," says Lipsius (§ 7), "that it had been through the wars"—"velut e pugna aliqua Cannensi." The lost books related the history of Caligula and Claudius to A.D. 47—Claudius being consul for the fourth, and L. Vitellius for the third, time. The fragment begins with an account of the cruelty and rapacity of the Empress Mes-salina. "For she believed that Valerius Asiaticus, twice consul, had formerly been the paramour of (Poppaea Sabina)."

1. 2. hortis. The Romans occupied valuable city property with lawns, groves, and ponds, interspersed with fountains and colonnades. The gardens of Lucullus were on the Pincian Hill (collis hortulorum). Messalina, who won them by the murder of their owner, became very fond of them, and retired to them in the despair of her last hours. When Plutarch visited Rome, towards the end of the first century, they belonged to the imperial family, and were the finest in the city.

8. ultro petere. "Expressed a wish."

clarum ex eo in urbe, didita per provincias fama parare iter ad lidis propinquitatibus subnixus turbare gentiles nationes promp-tamquam opprimendo bello Crispinum praetorii praefectum misit, a quo repertus est apud Baias vinclisque inditis in urbem raptus.

2. Neque data senatus copia: intra cubiculum auditur, Messalina coram, et Suillio corruptionem militum, quos pecunia et stupro in omne flagitium obstrictos arguebat, exim adul-terium Poppaeae, postremum mollitiam corporis obiectante.
 5 Ad quod victo silentio prorupit reus et "interroga" inquit, "Suilli, filios tuos: virum esse me fatebuntur." Ingressusque defensionem, commoto maiorem in modum Claudio, Messalinae

9. didita per provincias fama. Verg. Aen. VIII. 132 — "Tua terris didita fama" (I. 47, N.).

11. promptum haberet. "He had it in his power."

2. 1. senatus. Which judged its peers (I. 73, N.).

3. obstrictos. Suillius urged that, by indulging their excesses, Asiaticus had gained control of the soldiers.

7. Messalinae — lacrimas. Tacitus draws his characters by touches. He here contrasts Messalina's tears with her settled cruelty.

10. carceris. III. 50, N.

12. cur sine uxore discubisset. A change in manners. Under the early republic it had been a shame for women to recline at table with men, as was now the fashion. The strange stolidity of Claudius was shown in the case of his own wife Messalina. The day after her execution for adultery and treason, he asked the slaves why their mistress did not come to dinner.

8. 1. consultanti. Sc. Claudio. A species of ethical dative, depending upon the general sense of reply in the following sentence.

flens Vitellius. The eloquence of Asiaticus had driven Messalina from the room in tears; the emperor intended to acquit him, when Vitellius affected to be the champion of the accused. With crocodile tears he relates the merits of Asiaticus, and suggests, in misericordiam, to let him choose the manner of his death. Claudius, believing in the reality of their friendship, took this as a confession on the part of Asiaticus.

4. adversus Britanniam. A.D. 43.

5. conciliandae misericordiae. Genitive of quality.

trium ei permisit ; et secuta sunt Claudii verba in eandem clementiam. Hortantibus dehinc quibusdam inedia et lenem exitum, remittere beneficium Asiaticus ait : et usurpatis quibus insueverat exercitationibus, lauto corpore, hilare epulatus, cum se honestius calliditate Tiberii vel impetu Gai Caesaris perit- 10 urum dixisset, quam quod fraude muliebri et inpudico Vitellii ore caderet, venas exsolvit, viso tamen ante rogo iussoque transferri partem in aliam, ne opacitas arborum vapore ignis minueretur : tantum illi securitatis novissimae fuit.

4. Vocantur post haec patres, pergitque Suillius addere reos equites Romanos inlustres, quibus Petra cognomentum. At causa necis ex eo, quod domum suam Mnesteris et Poppaeae congressibus praebuissent. Verum nocturnae quietis species alteri obiecta, tamquam vidisset Claudium spicea co- 5 in eandem clementiam. "To the same merciful effect." Cf. VI. 49, N.

7. lenem exitum. A curious name for starvation (IV. 22, N.).

8. remittere beneficium. He declined the emperor's merciful concession.

13. opacitas arborum. It seems that he died in the gardens of Lucullus, which were the cause of his ruin, and remembered his favourite trees to the last :

" — neque harum quas colis arborum
Te praeter invisas cupressos Ulla brevem dominum sequetur."
HOR. Carm. II. 14.

14. securitatis novissimae. "Such coolness to the last."

4. 2. equites—inlustres. I. 73, N.

3. At causa. "Now, the true reason," was their assistance to Mnester in his intrigues with Poppaea ; a mortal offence to Messalina, who had a passion for the actor. But, as this reason could not be alleged, the Petrae were accused of making treasonable disturbance by their dreams, or the dream of one of them.

5. spicea corona. Worn by Ceres and the arval priests ; the bad luck consisted in the reversal of the wreath, an incident which had predicted the death of Cassius at Philippi.

7. praedixisset. The blame is not cast upon the dream, but upon its interpretation and publication.

10. Sestertium quindecies. £12,500.

11. insignia praeturae. I. 14, N.

15. eleganti temperamento. "Carefully balancing his reply." Poppaea's guilt was evident.

5. Continuus inde et saevus accusandis reis Suillius multique audaciae eius aemuli; nam cuncta legum et magistratum munia in se trahens princeps materiam praedandi patefecerat. Nec quicquam publicae mercis tam venale fuit quam
 5 advocatorum perfidia, adeo ut Samius, insignis eques Romanus, quadringentis nummorum milibus Suillio datis et cognita praevaricatione ferro in domo eius incubuerit. Igitur incipiente C. Silio consule designato, cuius de potentia et exitio in tempore memorabo, consurgunt patres legemque Cinciam flagitant, 10 qua cavetur antiquitus, ne quis ob causam orandam pecuniam donumve accipiat.

6. Deinde obstrepentibus iis, quibus ea contumelia parabatur, discors Suillio Silius acriter incubuit, veterum oratorum exempla referens, qui famam et posteros praemia eloquentiae cogitavissent. Pulcherrimam alioquin et bonarum artium principem sordidis ministeriis foedari; ne fidem quidem integram manere, ubi magnitudo quaestuum spectetur. Quodsi

Meminissent C. Asinii, M. Messallae ac recentiorum Arruntii et Aesernini: ad summa provectos incorrupta

5. 2. legum et magistratum munia. This was, in a general way, the policy of Augustus (I. 2, N.). Claudius, in his weak fashion, tried to do everything himself. He sat for hours a day on the praetor's tribunal, giving judgment on matters of which he was totally ignorant, and thus, with the best intentions, perverted justice and opened a field for dishonest lawyers.

4. publicae mercis. No ware was more publicly exposed for sale than an advocate's honour.

6. cognita praevaricatione. Suillius had promised to suppress dangerous information at this price; but the bargain became known, the culprit's ruin was inevitable, and he killed himself in his lawyer's house.

8. consule designato. His "approaching consulship" is mentioned at the time of his death in October of the next year (48). Perhaps he was to have been consul suffectus for November and December.

9. legemque Cinciam. Carried as a plebiscitum by M. Cincius Alimentus, tribunus plebeius in B.C. 104, and enforced by a senatus consultum of the time of Augustus. It forbade the advocate (whose services were purely honorary in the age when the real relation of patron and client had existed) to receive any fee for pleading. This law had fallen into disuse. It was now re-enacted (§ 7), with the provision that, after a case was concluded, a lawyer might accept an honorarium of 10,000 sesterces. Falling into disuse, this statute was again renewed in A.D. 54 (XIII. 5), and remained in force until the reign of Trajan.

6. 2. discors Suillio. "A personal enemy of Suillius."

5. sordidis ministeriis. "By a venal traffic."

6. Quodsi, etc. There would be fewer cases if there were no profit to lawyers.

10. C. Asinii (Pollionis), M. (Valerii), Messallae, ac recentiorum (L.) Arruntii et (M. Claudii Marcelli) Aesernini.

vita et facundia. Talia dicente consule designato, consentientibus aliis, parabatur sententia, qua lege repetundarum tenerentur, cum Suillius et Cossutianus et ceteri, qui non iudicium quippe in manifestos, sed poenam statui videbant, circumstant 15 Caesarem, ante acta deprecantes.

7. Et postquam adnuit, agere incipiunt: quem illum tanta superbia esse, ut aeternitatem famae spe praesumat? Usui et rebus subsidium praeparari, ne quis inopia advocatorum potentibus obnoxius sit. Neque tamen eloquentiam gratuito contingere: omitti curas familiares, ut quis se alienis negotiis 5 intendat. Multos militia, quosdam exercendo agros tolerare vitam; nihil a quoquam expeti, nisi cuius fructus ante providerit. Facile Asinium et Messallam, inter Antonium et Augustum bellorum praemiis refertos, aut ditium familiarum heredes Aeserninos et Arruntios magnum animum induisse. 10 Prompta sibi exempla, quantis mercedibus P. Clodius aut C. Curio contionari soliti sint. Se modicos senatores, qui quietare publica nulla nisi pacis emolumenta peterent. Cogitaret plebem, quae toga enitesceret: sublatis studiorum pretiis etiam studia peritura. Ut minus decora haec, ita haud frustra 15 dicta princeps ratus, capiendis pecuniis statuit modum usque ad dena sestertia, quem egressi repetundarum tenerentur.

16. ante acta deprecantes. "Praying forgiveness for the past." Senatus consulta operated ex post facto.

7. 1. postquam adnuit. Claudius promised them immunity for the past. Thus encouraged they begin.

2. Usui et rebus. Advocates protect our interests and our estates.

4. Neque tamen. "Nor after all." In spite of what Silius might say, a plain man could not gain good legal assistance without paying for it. The old days of patron and client had passed away. The counsellors had ceased to be a caste, and had become a profession.

5. omitti—ut quis. "A man gives up his own business, in proportion as," etc. Cf. ut quis reperieratur, XI. 32. Intendat subj. because subordinate to oratio obliqua.

11. P. Clodius (Pulcher) aut C. (Scribonius) Curio.

12. Se modicos senatores. Sc. esse.

13. Cogitaret plebem. Let the emperor consider the poorer classes, who could only rise to distinction at the bar, and would be cut off from the profession if it were not paid.

15. frustra. "Without reason."

16. princeps ratus. This expresses the digested opinion of the emperor and his counsellors; statuit (omitted in the MS.) to his action through a vote of the senate.

17. dena sestertia. 10,000 sesterces, £83. repetundarum. I. 2, N.

8. 2. jussuque Gai. Supplied by Ulrichs to fill a lacuna. The imprisonment of Mithridates was related in the lost books.

3. remeavit. This probably occurred in 42-3, the date of the contemporary Parthian revolution being fixed by coins.

 5 Parthos summaque imperii ambigua, minora sine cura haberi.
 Nam Gotarzes inter pleraque saeva, necem fratri Artabano

5. summa imperii = the Parthian throne; minora, the satrapies.

6. Nam Gotarzes. A passage wholly uncertain in the MS. Emendations of Doederlein and others are adopted in the text. Translate: "For Gotarzes, among the many cruelties of his reign, had hastily murdered his brother Artabanus, with his wife and son; hence the other nobles dreaded their king, and summoned Vardanes."

9. tria milia stadiorum. 344·7 English miles. Hannibal made the same time from Zama to Hadrumetum after his defeat. Tiberius, hastening to the death-bed of his brother Drusus in Germany, made 200 Roman (183·5 English) miles in a night and a day.

11. praefecturas. The term applied to a non-elective Government, and hence to Eastern satrapies; Greek, στρατηγία.

12. patris suiue defectores. Seleucia revolted against Artabanus III. in A. D. 40. It was reduced in 46.

14. objecti amnis. The Tigris.

9. 1. quonam—incertis. "Ready to fall in either direction."

3. Hiberno exercitu. Consisting chiefly in cavalry.

6. versis illuc. "Looking to him as their leader."

9. imperatores. Vardanes and Gotarzes, in Bactria.

12. complexi dextras. Perhaps with the Oriental form described in XII. 47.

10. Exim validissimas praefecturas invasit ; et recipere Armeniam avebat, ni a Vibio Marso, Suriae legato, bellum minitante cohibitus foret. Atque interim Gotarzes paenitentia concessi regni et vocante nobilitate, cui in pace durius servitium est, contrahit copias. Ibi modus rebus secundis positus : nam Parthi quamquam victores longinquam militiam aspernabantur. Igitur exstructis monumentis, quibus opes suas 10 testabatur nec cuiquam ante Arsacidarum tributa illis de gentibus parta, regreditur ingens gloria atque eo ferocior et subiectis intolerantior ; qui dolo ante composito incautum venationique intentum interfecere, primam intra iuventam, sed claritudine paucos inter senum regum, si perinde amorem inter 15 populares quam metum apud hostes quaesivisset. Nece Vardanis turbatae Parthorum res inter ambiguos, quis in regnum acciperetur. Multi ad Gotarzen inclinabant, quidam ad Meherdaten prolem Phraatis, obsidio nobis datum : dein praevaluit Gotarzes. Potitusque regiam per saevitiam ac 20 luxum adegit Parthos mittere ad principem Romanum occultas preces, quis permitti Meherdaten patrium ad fastigium orabant.

10. 1. praefecturas invasit. He declared war against Izates, the Jewish king of Adiabene, because of his Roman sympathies (Josephus, Ant. Jud. 20. 3, 4). Invasit is therefore preferable to invisit.

7. medias nationes. The Hyrcanians, Parthians, Margians, and Arians. Prof. Rawlinson (Fifth Oriental Monarchy, chap. xv.) says :—"The country between the Caspian and Herat ;" adding, "I cannot follow this campaign in detail, as the rivers are unknown to the geographers."

9. longinquam militiam aspernabantur. The troops raised and marshalled by independent noblemen (VI. 34, N.) formed an unmanageable army.

10. exstructis monumentis. The only existing monument of the Parthian kings is the sculptured rock at Baghistan, prepared by the command of Gotarzes a few years after this.

ludi saeculares. In honour of Apollo and Diana, the preservers of public health. chronology which placed the foundation of the city B.C. 750). Augustus, whose policy revived ancient festivals, declared that the Sibylline books ordered the games once in 110 years; and that the annals of the quindecimviri fixed B.C. 17 (A.U.C. 737) as the right date. In defence of this, a precession of games was invented as having occurred in B.C. 126, 236, 346, etc., the difference of one year being due to the reformed Julian calendar. Claudius returned to the centennial doctrine, and celebrated in A.U.C. 800, A.D. 47. Domitian reverted to that of Augustus, which would have brought the games to A.U.C. 847, A.D. 94; but forced them into 88 A.D. for his own enjoyment. Septimius Severus kept the same account, celebrating in A.U.C. 957, A.D. 204. Finally, Philip the Arabian adopted the calculation by centuries, and celebrated the millennial of the city A.D. 247.

4. libris. The lost books of the histories.

6. sacerdotio quindecimvirali. I. 76, N.

7. non iactantia. Montaigne (III. 8) disapproves of this apology, saying that a firm and wholesome mind thinks and speaks as freely of itself as of an indifferent person.

8. et magistratus. As praetor he superintended the games, and as quindecimvir he consulted the sacred books and studied the precedents.

10. ludicrum Trojae. A tournament or sham-fight among the young nobles, divided into two parties, the younger and the older. Apparently on this occasion Nero led the latter and Britannicus the former. As they were born respectively in 37 and 41 A.D., they must have been mere children in 47, and one is inclined to refer these circensian games to a later period, perhaps those of 51, mentioned in XII. 41, when Nero had become an aspirant to the throne.

15. detractor. Int. 4.

16. unam omnino anguem. A faint resemblance to the infant Hercules. Genii were said to appear in the forms of snakes. Suetonius (Nero, § 6) says that this story arose from finding some snake-skins in his swaddling-bands. His mother had them enclosed in a golden bracelet which he wore as a charm. When weary of her memory he cast it away, and sought it in vain in the terror of his last hours. Xiphilinus says that astrologers promised him a great inheritance from an old man (typified by the snake that cast his skin), and that this was fulfilled when he succeeded Claudius on the throne.

12. 1. supererat. It remained like an inheritance.

Nam in C. Silius, iuventutis Romanae pulcherrimum, ita exarserat, ut Iuniam Silanam, nobilem feminam, matrimonio eius exturbaret vacuoque adultero poteretur. Neque Silius flagitii aut periculi nescius erat : sed certo, si abnueret, exitio et non nulla fallendi spe, simul magnis praemiis, opperiri futura et praesentibus frui pro solacio habebat. munia censoria. Since B.C. 23 the emperors had held the censoria potestas in their own hands, but Claudius revived the republican censorship, dividing the powers with Vitellius. The lustrum (for they did not resign office at the end of eighteen months, as had formerly been customary) lasted A.D. 47-52, and the profligacy of Messalina was made more glaring by her husband's imitation of the ancient censors.

4. lege lata. IV. 16, N. By the lex Plaetoria (third century B.C.), defrauders of minors (under 25 years) were subject to peculiar penalties, and disadvantageous contracts of a minor might be set aside by the praetor. Claudius reinforces this by a law totally prohibiting post obit transactions.

6. Fontes. These aqueducts were the Claudia and the Anio Novus, respectively 42½ and 59 English miles in length, bringing to the city the waters of the upper Anio. They passed into the city through ducts, still preserved over the Porta Maggiore. The Anio Novus was built between 38 and 52 A.D. ; its arches were in some places 109 feet high. Pliny considered it one of the most wonderful works of man. The nine aqueducts of Rome in the first century furnished the city with an estimated daily supply of 38,880,000 cubic feet of water. Allowing a population of 1,200,000, this supply is about three times as large as is considered necessary in modern cities, the surplus being employed for baths and ornamental fountains.

8. literaturam. "Alphabet."

14. 1. per figuras animalium. The original hieroglyphs were mere thought-signs; the hieratic (B.C. 2000) and demotic (B.C. 700) characters gradually introduced the phonetic principle. All the phonetic alphabets of Europe and Western Asia (perhaps even the Sanscrit) were derived from the Semitic alphabet, spread through the world by Phoenician traders.

9. Palamedem. The general belief was that Palamedes added the letters θ , ξ , ϕ , and χ , to the original 16; and that Simonides added ζ , η , ψ , ω . Most of these, however, are clearly of the primitive Phoenician stock.

11. in Italia. The Etruscans and other Italian peoples probably learned their alphabets from the Greek colonies of southern Italy, with which there must have been easy communication in the 8th and 9th centuries B.C. The early Greek and Roman alphabets, as preserved by coins and inscriptions, diverged much less than they did in later times.

14. deinde additae sunt. G was distinguished from C in the 3d century B.C. X was introduced in the time of Augustus.

15. tres literas. These were, 1st, the digamma, F, representing V as distinguished from U; 2d, the antisigma, \mathfrak{z} , equivalent to the Greek ψ ; 3d, \mathfrak{t} , equivalent to the Greek upsilon, or German \ddot{u} , intermediate between u and i.

16. [dis plebiscitis]. The text is mutilated. Grotius suggested publicandis plebiscitis.

15. 1. haruspicum. They predicted the future by examining the liver and entrails of victims, or by consulting omens (Cic. N. D., 2, 4). The art came from Etruria, and in B.C. 154 noble youths had been sent to Tuscan cities to learn the mystery. Claudius first organised the haruspices, whose learning he had studied, in a collegium of sixty members, giving them a regular standing in the state (III. 64, N.).

18. exploratoris Flavi. A body of exploratores or trained scouts were added to every army. The word is here used with contempt : "a Roman spy."

19. Frustra Arminium praescribi. In vain, say they, do we recall the memory of his uncle Arminius, the deliverer of Germany. Even his own son, if he had grown up on Roman soil, would have been corrupted; but this boy's father was an acknowledged traitor. Thumelicus, the son of Arminius by Thusnelda (I. 58), was born during his mother's captivity, educated at Ravenna, and encountered a tragic fate, described in one of the lost books of the Annals.

17. 5. quod fidem—numquam omisisset. Both Flavus and Arminius had originally engaged in Roman service by the will of their tribe, and as loyal allies (II. 10, N.). Nor could Flavus be blamed for not participating in his brother's treacherous infraction of the league.

7. privatim degeneres. In private life these men disgraced their ancestors, and had no right (said their enemies) to blame Italicus for his parentage.

9. magno inter barbaros. Sc. ut. By a Roman disciplinarian the wild encounter of barbarous tribes could hardly be called a battle.

18. 4. levibus navigiis. Pliny Sr., who had observed the Germans personally, says that their pirates put to sea in dug-out canoes, made each of a single log, and capable of holding thirty men. New Zealand dug-outs hold eighty to a hundred men, and are used on the open Pacific.

8. aestuaria et fossas. The canal of Drusus (II. 8, N.) and the lakes subsequently merged in the Zuyder Zee allowed Corbulo to produce his vessels on the North Sea, and to overwhelm the pirate craft.

incerta Oceani vitarentur. By this inland navigation he avoided the sand-flats of the Dutch coast west of the Rhine-mouth, as Drusus by his canal had avoided them on the east. One of the greatest engineering works of modern times, the North Holland Canal, has been cut along the coast for the same reason. Dio Cassius supposed that Corbulo made this canal to divert the floods of the Rhine occasioned by the influx of the tide.

5. species muliebris. Pliny Jr. relates the same story. According to him, the apparition, gigantic (a regular feature with Roman spirits) and beautiful, met Rufus towards evening. She declared herself the genius of Africa, prophesied that he should be governor, and should die in his province.

6. qui quaesturam adipiscerentur. On the qualifications of a candidate, see III. 29, N.

9. ne aetas quidem. Under the empire, a man might be quaestor at 25, aedile or tribune (VI. 12, N.), at 27, praetor at 30, consul at 42.

11. lex curiata. A law passed by the curiae of patrician burgesses was required to confer the imperium upon kings, and afterwards upon consuls. This law enumerated the various powers conferred, among others that of appointing quaestors. L. Junius Brutus, at the beginning of the republic, was careful that the consuls should be duly invested with all authority.

14. Creatique primum. Tacitus appears to confuse quaestores parricidii, or criminal judges, with quaestores classici (treasurers and paymasters). The former were appointed by the kings and early consuls, as he asserts. The latter were first instituted by popular election, B.C. 447. They were two in number, and had charge of the military chest, as well as the aerarium; but in 421 B.C. two others were added, and the functions were divided. After this plebeians were eligible to the quaestorship, and hence admitted to the senate—a very great constitutional change. In 267 the number was increased to eight (duplicatus numerus), and quaestors established in the different Italian provinces. When Sicily was added as a province, after the Second Punic War, more quaestors were of course required; and finally, in 81 B.C., when the senate had been thinned by the proscriptions of the civil war, Sulla appointed that twenty quaestors should annually be elected, to supply candidates for the senate. In 45 B.C. (but only for one year) Julius Caesar had forty quaestors appointed for the same reason.

20. quamquam equites iudicia recipravissent. Originally, judices were appointed exclusively from the senate. They filled a place midway between our jurymen and judges. Their position was considered enviable (under the republic), ex dignitate candidatorum aut facilitate tribuentium gratuito concedebatur, donec sententia Dolabellae velut venundaretur.

but they acted in large panels (usually thirty-two), and were judges of fact only, the law being decided by the presiding magistrate at the trial. In 123 B.C. C. Gracchus carried a law that judices should be equites. After some intermediate legislation (XII, 60, N.), Sulla, when restoring power to the senate, gave it the judicia again. After his death, the lex Aurelia in B.C. 70 constituted the courts of senators, equites, and tribuni aerarii (ward-masters), in equal proportions. A property qualification was always considered necessary to sustain the dignity and integrity of a judex. Under the empire jury-duty became burdensome (III. 25, N.).

2. ita exorsus est. A portion of the emperor's speech has been preserved on bronze tables at Lyons. As we might expect, the oratory is rambling, affected, and pedantic. Tacitus has given a brief synopsis of it in dignified language, and with changes of the order and sense. This was considered by the ancients (who regarded a history as a work of art, not a compilation of materials) as the duty of a historian.

Fearing blame, he declared that Appius Caecus, the ancestor of his house (V. 1, N.), when censor (B.C. 312), had brought the sons of libertini into the senate; not knowing that in the time of Appius, and somewhat later, the term libertinus was applied not to a freedman, but to a freedman's son."

27. brevioris spatio. The oration calls it ten years. It was properly less than nine (B.C. 58-49), during which Julius Caesar subdued Gallia Comata.

28. fida pax. The rebellion of Julius Florus in A.D. 21 (III. 40) was too unimportant to be mentioned. The oration at Lyons especially refers to the aid afforded by the Gauls to Drusus Sr. in his German expeditions. Claudius himself was born on the hill of Fourvières at Lyons while his father was engaged in these wars.

29. aurum et opes. This desire to attract wealth from the provinces was the real and best reason. It appears to be an addition by Tacitus.

33. exemplis. "Precedents."

25. 1. primi Aedui. The right of citizenship and eligibility was conferred upon all the upper classes of Gallia Comata. But Claudius, as censor, preferred the Aedui in making the first selection of senators.

2. foederi antiquo. It was in existence B.C. 121.

3. fraternitatis nomen. Mentioned by Julius Caesar.

aut quibus clari parentes. Among these was probably Silius, son of a consul, and himself consul elect. This explains Juvenal's words (X. 331):

"Optimus hic et formosissimus idem
Gentis patriciae rapitur miser extinguendus Messalinae oculis."

7. Romulus, etc. Romulus and T.
 Tatius arranged the Rhamnes and Titus as the patrician or original tribes of Rome, and chose the senate from among them; Tarquinius Priscus added the Luceres, and those who were chosen from this body into the senate were called minorum gentium. Brutus made no new patricians, but admitted some of the chief plebeians to the senate. The statement of Tacitus agrees with that of Dionysius of Halicarnassus, but is probably wrong; Roman antiquarians confounded the senators and patricians—patres and patricii— of the early ages.

9. lege Cassia. B.C. 45. Probably promulgated by C. Cassius at the desire of Julius Caesar, who found it necessary to supply the numbers of patricians thinned by war and intermarriage, in lege Saenia. Promulgated by L. Saenius, ex-consul in B.C. 29.

12. recens repertam. By Augustus, who allowed persons who were unworthy of the position of senator or lacked the senatorial fortune (I. 75, N.), but had the modesty to resign, to retain the insignia of the rank, and the seat in the theatre.

16. permixti. Takes its gender from the last word, pudor. It should regularly be neuter.

22. quinquagies, etc. 5,984,072. In the MS. ~~LVIII LXXXIII LXXII~~. This included the males between the ages of 17 and 60, making a probable Roman population (scattered over the world) of 24,000,000.

25. in nuptias incestas. With his niece Agrippina.

26. 5. non eo ventum. They were not so powerless that they must await the prince's natural end.

Insontibus innoxia consilia. The innocent can take their time, and deliberate without malice.

7. caelibem, orbem. "Without wife or children," since he had divorced his wife.

15. novissima voluptas. "Ils veulent faire parler d'eux, et leur vanité ne serait pas satisfaite s'il n'y avait quelque chose de superlatif et d'éminent dans leur mauvaise réputation."—Bayle.

16. sacrificii gratia. Dio Cassius says that it was on account of the corn supplies. The sacrifice may have been offered for the safe arrival of the corn fleet. Castor and Pollux were especially worshipped at Ostia as protectors of seamen, and a festival was celebrated in their honour in May. Claudius had built the harbour and lighthouse of Ostia, and was peculiarly interested in the place.

27. 4. qui obsignarent. The nuptial contract, which fixed the dowry; a million sesterces in this case. Auspices were regularly present, for form's sake.

"Dudum sedet illa parato

6. subisse. Entering the house. The bridegroom met the bride at the door, and was saluted with the words, "Ubi tu Caius ibi ego Caia." The bride was presented with fire and water, and lifted over the threshold.

discubitu. At the marriage supper the bride reclined on the bridegroom's breast.

8. audita scriptaque senioribus tradam. Tacitus was born about five years after these occurrences, which must have been matter of common conversation in his youth. Suetonius mentions with discredit a story that Claudius countenanced this marriage, having been persuaded that the omens foretold mischief to Messalina's husband; that fate might be duped in this way; and that the wedding should be a mere formality. Theodore Ryckius revived this account, claiming that it was more credible than the one given by the ancient historians, and his view has been supported by eminent modern scholars. It appears probable, however, that Tacitus, who was undoubtedly acquainted with both stories, was better able to decide than we.

28. 1. quos penes potentia. Callistus, Narcissus, Pallas.

3. histrio. Mnester.

6. adcingi. "Armed herself"; "made ready for."

2. Appianae caedis. Appius Junius Silanus.

6. prioris — regiae. The court of Caligula.

7. haberi. Sc. ratus.

8. sed solum id immutans. The sense of the passage seems to be, that the freedmen first thought of warning Claudius (§ 28), but, considering the power of Messalina, preferred to make an attempt upon her, and to break her connection with Silius by threatening to disclose it;

finally, when they remembered her desperate character and unbridled passion, they dreaded this course as well, and two of them resolved to trust to luck. Narcissus, who was bolder, returned to the former plan, and warned Claudius without allowing Messalina to know that he did so.

30. 5. Titios, Vettios, Plautios. Rhetorical plurals (I. 10, N.). See Titius Proculus, Vettius Valens, Plautius Lateranus. The MS. is here confused.

7. domum. Messalina gave Silius a palace besides the regular dower, and transferred to it all the heirlooms of the Claudian gens.

9. tabulas nuptiales. The nuptial contract (§ 27, N.).

alias solutior luxu, adulto autumnno simulacrum vindemiae per

81. 4. in castra. IV. 2, N.

8. adulto autumnno. In October (II. 23, N.), when the vintage festival was regularly held. It was a rustic celebration, distinguished from the Dionysia, which occurred in March ; but Messalina had resolved to play the bacchante in her imperial gardens on the Palatine. Silius assumes the character of Bacchus, crowned with ivy, and wearing the tragic cothurnus. Mark Antony had appeared in the same dress in Alexandria, at Cleopatra's side, when they were planning the invasion of Rome.

9. Urgueri prela. The empress carries out the masque of the vintage. Grapes are brought to be crushed in the presses ; the pitched vats stream with must ; her maids wear the fox-skins of bacchanals, and she herself bears the thyrsus, which was the symbol of war abandoned for wantonness—the spear wound with ivy.

15. tempestatem ab Ostia. Ostia was but sixteen miles away, and almost in view from the Palatine.

16. vertit. "Became."

82. 1. incedunt. The verb expresses the deliberate motion of soldiers advancing to deliver their tidings (XV. 37, N.).

ius militum. The command of the praetorians.

7. in eodem gestamine. A chariot or rheda, capable of holding four persons.

34. 4. “o facinus! o scelus!” The exclamations might be referred to Messalina’s debaucheries, or to the accusation brought by Narcissus against the emperor’s wife. Vitellius was waiting to see the winning side before he committed himself.

14. indicium. "State's evidence."

15. tradi ad supplicium. Traitors to the emperor were beheaded.

16. vigilum praefectus. IV. 5, N.

5. tempestivis. Lasting until late at night.

8. languescere. Historical infinitive, curiously co-ordinate with the historical perfect auditum.

10. centurionibus et tribuno. One of the praetorian cohorts was always on guard at the palace (XII. 69, N.).

12. exactor. Superintendent of the execution.

13. praegressus. In his eagerness the freedman takes precedence of the officer, and is at his side when they break into the garden; suadebat and the other imperfects show the condition of things which continued until that time.

Lepida. Domitia Lepida.

14. haud concors. Messalina had procured the death of her mother's second husband, Appius Junius Silanus.

9. filios. For liberos; including his son Britannicus, and his daughters Octavia and Antonia. (Antonina was not Messalina's daughter.)

censendo nomen—demovendas. It was customary to vote perpetual oblivion of traitors. This included destruction of all representations by sculpture or painting, recalling coin which bore their name or face, and erasure of their name in all public places. Juvenal describes the mob tearing down the statues of Sejanus. (To make treason cases popular, the rabble were allowed to take the materials of the statues.) The name of Messalina has been purposely erased from an extant brass tablet.

11. levissimum fastidio ejus. "An insignificant honour in his own estimation." Narcissus, who surpassed all the consulars in power, could afford to disdain an honour which a Roman mind considered extravagant for a Greek freedman. "No wonder," says Tacitus ironically, "for he considered himself the superior of even Pallas and Callistus."

12. honesta quidem. The death of Messalina was righteous enough, but it brought about the exaltation of Agrippina and the empire of Nero. The text is hopelessly confused.

53. 806. D. JUNIUS SILANUS TORQUATUS; Q. HATERIUS ANTONINUS.

54. 807. M. ASINIUS MARCELLUS; M'. ACILIUS AVIOLA.

I. Caede Messalinae convulsa principis domus, orto apud libertos certamine, quis deligeret uxorem Claudio, caelibis vitae intoleranti et coniugum imperiis obnoxio. Nec minore ambitu feminae exarserant: suam quaeque nobilitatem formam opes contendere ac digna tanto matrimonio ostentare. Sed maxime 5 ambigebatur inter Lolliam Paulinam M. Lollii consularis et Iuliam Agrippinam Germanico genitam: huic Pallas, illi Callistus fautores aderant; at Aelia Paetina e familia Tuberorum

1. 5. contendere. "Each compared with the others."

6. M. Lollii consularis. Sc. filiam. A Greek ellipsis—rare, but not unclassical in Latin.

Narcisso fovebatur. Ipse huc modo, modo illuc, ut quemque 10 suadentium audierat, promptus, discordantes in consilium vocat ac promere sententiam et adicere rationes iubet.

2. Narcissus vetus matrimonium, familiam communem (nam Antonia ex Paetina erat), nihil in penatibus eius novum disserebat, si sueta coniunx rediret, haudquaquam novercalibus odiis visura Britannicum et Octaviam, proxima suis pignora.
 5 Callistus improbatam longo discidio, ac si rursum adsumeretur, eo ipso superbam; longeque rectius Lolliam induci, quando nullos liberos genuisset, vacuum aemulatione et privignis parentis loco futuram. At Pallas id maxime in Agrippina laudare, quod Germanici nepotem secum traheret, dignum prorsus 10 imperatoria fortuna: stirpem nobilem et familiae Iuliae Claudiaequae posteros coniungeret, ne femina expertae fecunditatis, integra iuventa, claritudinem Caesarum aliam in domum ferret.

3. Praevaluere haec adiuta Agrippinae inlecebris: ad eum per speciem necessitudinis crebro ventitando pellicit patrum, ut praelata ceteris et nondum uxor potentia uxoria iam uteretur.
 Nam ubi sui matrimonii certa fuit, struere maiora nuptiasque
 5 Domitii, quem ex Cn. Ahenobarbo genuerat, et Octaviae Caesaris filiae moliri; quod sine scelere perpetrari non poterat, quia L. Silano desponderat Octaviam Caesar iuvenemque et alia clarum insigni triumphalium et gladiatorii muneris magnificentia protulerat ad studia vulgi. Sed nihil arduum vide-10 batur in animo principis, cui non iudicium, non odium erat nisi indita et iussa.

4. Igitur Vitellius, nomine censoris serviles fallacias ob-tegens ingruentiumque dominationum provisor, quo gratiam Agrippinae pararet, consiliis eius implicari, ferre crimina in Silanum, cuius sane decora et procax soror, Iunia Calvina,

2. 1. familiam. Including Antonia, her husband, and possibly her children. Narcissus would intentionally use the word; and we must always remember that these speeches are composed, not by the speakers, but by Tacitus (XI. 24, N.), and with a view to oratorical effect.

9. Germanici nepotem. Young Nero (at this time Domitius Ahenobarbus).

10. imperatoria fortuna. Imperial dignity, in connection with the reigning family.

stirpem nobilem. "He should unite the noble stock—the race of the Julii and Claudii—nor suffer this woman," etc.

3. 1. Agrippinae inlecebris. Her caresses as a niece. Messalina died in October, and the new marriage had been settled before the first of January.

7. L. (Junio) Silano (Torquato).

8. alia clarum. The descendant of Augustus. The adverbial accusative alia is a Greek construction.

4. 1. (L.) Vitellius.

nomine censoris. XI. 13, N.

haud multo ante Vitellii nurus fuerat. Hinc initium accusa- 5 tionis ; fratrumque non incestum, sed incustoditum amorem ad infamiam traxit. Et praebebat Caesar aures, accipiendis adversus generum suspicionibus caritate filiae promptior. At Silanus insidiarum nescius ac forte eo anno praetor, repente 10 per edictum Vitellii ordine senatorio movetur, quamquam lecto pridem senatu lustroque condito. Simul adfinitatem Claudius diremit, adactusque Silanus eiurare magistratum, et reliquus praeturae dies in Eprium Marcellum conlatus est.

5. C. Pompeio Q. Veranio consulibus pactum inter Claudium 5 et Agrippinam matrimonium iam fama, iam amore inlicito firmabatur ; necdum celebrare sollemnia nuptiarum audebant, nullo exemplo deductae in domum patruī fratris filiae : quin et artibus id perpetrandum sumpsit. Percontatusque Caesarem an iussis populi, an auctoritati senatus cederet, ubi ille unum se civium et consensui imparem respondit, opperiri intra palatium iubet. Ipse curiam ingreditur, summamque rem publicam agi 10 obtestans veniam dicendi ante alios exposcit orditurque : gravissimos principis labores, quis orbem terrae capessat, egere

A.U.C. 802.

A.D. 49.

5. Vitellii nurus. She married his son Lucius, brother of the future emperor, who had been consul suffectus this year.

Hinc initium. The intimacy of Vitellius in the family gave him a knowledge of its private affairs.

6. incustoditum. An unguarded but natural love between the brother and sister. Fratres is common gender, as filios in XI. 38.

10. edictum. A censor had a right to issue edicts, but in this case it was untimely, as the work of revising the senate and purifying the people had been completed (lustrum conditum) by himself and the emperor.

12. eiurare. XIII. 14, N.

reliquis praeturae dies. Silanus abdicated on 29th December ; Marcellus was appointed to his place on 30th December, and laid down the office (of praetor peregrinus) on 31st December ; but it advanced him one step in the official scale (XI. 22, N.).

5. 4. nullo exemplo. Abl. abs.

deductae. Alluding to the bringing-home of the bride (XI. 27, N.).

quin et incestum. Sc. esse. Claudius, who was of a religious turn, really feared that the connection was incestuous, and might cause some public calamity (as the incest of Oedipus brought the plague upon Thebes).

8. unum se civium. He was but one of the citizens, he said, and could not resist the unanimous desire of the rest.

10. summamque rem publicam. "The highest interests of the country were at stake."

14. censoriae mentis. Vitellius, the emperor's colleague, describes him as a second Cato. In reality Claudius seldom left the table sober, and was controlled by his concubines.

intimas, cui parvos liberos tradat, non luxui aut voluptatibus adsuefactus, sed qui prima ab iuventa legibus obtemperavisset.

6. Postquam haec favorabili oratione praemisit multaque patrum adsentatio sequebatur, capto rursus initio, quando maritandum principem cuncti suaderent, deligi oportere feminam nobilitate puerperiis sanctimonia insignem. Nec diu anquirendum quin Agrippina claritudine generis anteiret; datum ab ea fecunditatis experimentum et congruere artes honestas. Id vero egregium, quod provisu deum vidua iungeretur principi sua tantum matrimonia experto. Audivisse a parentibus, vidisse ipsos abripi coniuges ad libita Caesarum: procul id
10 a praesenti modestia. Statueretur immo documentum, quo uxorem imperator a patribus acciperet. At enim nova nobis in fratrum filias coniugia: sed aliis gentibus sollemnia, neque lege ulla prohibita; et sobrinarum diu ignorata tempore addito percrebuisse. Morem accommodari prout conducat, et fore 15 hoc quoque in iis quae mox usurpentur.

7. Haud defuere qui certatim, si cunctaretur Caesar, vi acturos testificantes erumperent curia. Conglobatur promisca multitudo populumque Romanum eadem orare clamitat. Nec Claudius ultra expectato obviis apud forum praebet se gratantibus, senatumque ingressus decretum postulat, quo iustae inter

16. parvos liberos. Britannicus was seven, Octavia nine years old.

6. 1. favorabilis. "Insinuating."

4. Nec diu anquirendum quin. "There could be no question but that."

6. Id vero egregium. The most admirable part of the whole matter, according to Vitellius, was that Agrippina was a widow. Her former husbands, Domitianus and Passienus, had died, by the kindness of the gods, and Claudius could marry a wife without taking her from a husband, as previous emperors had done.

8. Audivisse a parentibus refers to Augustus, who took Livia from Ti. Claudius Nero in B.C. 38; vidisse ipsos to Caligula, who had taken his sister Drusilla from Cassius Longinus; Livia Orestilla (on her wedding-day) from C. Piso; Lollia Paulina from Memmius Regulus.

10. Statueretur immo. It would be well to have a precedent established, in accordance with which future emperors should receive their wives from the senate, instead of taking them from their husbands.

12. aliis gentibus sollemnia. As in the case of Anaxandrides, king of Sparta, B.C. 560-520. The Ptolemies, following the oriental custom, married half-sisters from their father's harem.

13. sobrinarum. Properly signifies second cousins, consobrinae first cousins (on the mother's side). Tacitus used the word indefinitely. Livy mentions without surprise the marriage of a Roman citizen to his first cousin as early as 171 B.C.

15. quae mox usurpentur. Cf. XI. 24—"Inveterascet hoc quoque, et quod hodie exemplis tuemur, inter exempla erit."

7. 5. decretum postulat. This statute did not legalise marriages with a sister's child. As Tacitus says, it remained practically inoperative in the time of Claudius; but under Domitian, who married Julia, the daughter of his brother Titus, such marriages became common. Vertranus says that Nerva repealed the law.

patruos fratrumque filias nuptiae etiam in posterum statuerentur. Nec tamen repertus est nisi unus talis matrimonii cupitor, Alledius Severus eques Romanus, quem plerique Agrippinae gratia impulsum ferebant. Versa ex eo civitas et cuncta feminae oboediebant, non per lasciviam, ut Messalina, rebus 10 Romanis inludenti. Adductum et quasi virile servitium : palam severitas ac saepius superbia ; nihil domi impudicum, nisi dominationi expediret. Cupido auri immensa obtentum habebat, quasi subsidium regno pararetur.

8. Die nuptiarum Silanus mortem sibi conscivit, sive eo usque spem vitae produxerat, seu delecto die augendam ad invidiam. Calvina soror eius Italia pulsa est. Addidit Claudius sacra ex legibus Tulli regis piaculaque apud lucum Dianae per pontifices danda, inridentibus cunctis, quod poenae procuration- 5 esque incesti id temporis exquirerentur. At Agrippina, ne malis tantum facinoribus notesceret, veniam exilii pro Annaeo Seneca, simul praeturam impetrat, laetum in publicum rata ob claritudinem studiorum eius, utque Domitii pueritia tali magistro adolesceret et consiliis eiusdem ad spem dominationis uterentur, 10 quia Seneca fidus in Agrippinam memoria beneficii et infensus Claudio dolore iniuriae credebatur.

9. Placitum dehinc non ultra cunctari, sed designatum consulem Memmium Pollionem ingentibus promissis inducunt sententiam expromere, qua oraretur Claudius despondere Octaviam Domitio ; quod aetati utriusque non absurdum et maiora

7. Nec tamen repertus est. Suetonius mentions two : a freedman, whom Tacitus does not deign to count, and a primipilaris (consequently an eques, II. 11, N.), here mentioned. Claudius and Agrippina honoured the wedding by their presence.

10. ut Messalina. Messalina's whims and caprices did not affect State policy, but Agrippina's ambition was deeper and farther reaching.

11. Adductum. A metaphor taken from the management of a horse. The despotism was maintained with a discipline worthy of a man. Compare the account of the elder Agrippina (VI. 25), "Dominandi avida, virilibus curis feminarum vitia exuerat."

12. nisi dominationi expediret. As in the case of Pallas (§ 25).

13. Cupido auri. Her boundless avarice was excused by her love of power.

8. 1. Die nuptiarum. Suetonius says that the wedding occurred at the beginning of the year, and that scarcely a day was allowed to elapse between the passage of the Act and the marriage.

4. apud lucum Dianae. The patroness of chastity. The grove was probably the one at Nemi.

6. id temporis. When the emperor was celebrating his own incestuous marriage.

10. uterentur. Includes Agrippina, her son, and their partisans.

9. 1. designatum consulem. III. 22, N. L. Memmius Pollio and Q. Alilius Maximus were consules suffecti during a part of this year.

2. inducunt. Agrippina's faction.

4. aetati utriusque non absurdum.

5 patefacturum erat. Pollio haud disparibus verbis ac nuper Vitellius censet; despondeturque Octavia, ac super priorem necessitudinem sponsus iam et gener Domitius aequari Britan- nico studiis matris, arte eorum quis ob accusatam Messalinam ultio ex filio timebatur.

10. Per idem tempus legati Parthorum ad expetendum, ut rettuli, Meherdaten missi senatum ingrediuntur mandataque in hunc modum incipiunt: non se foederis ignaros nec defec-
 5 tione a familia Arsacidarum venire, sed et filium Vononis, nepotem Phraatis accersere adversus dominationem Gotarzis nobilitati plebique iuxta intolerandam. Iam fratres, iam pro- pinquos, iam longius sitos caedibus exhaustos; adici coniuges gravidas, liberos parvos, dum socors domi, bellis infaustus ignaviam saevitia tegat. Veterem sibi ac publice coeptam 10 nobiscum amicitiam, et subveniendum sociis virium aemulis cedentibusque per reverentiam. Ideo regum liberos obsides dari, ut, si domestici imperii taedeat, sit regressus ad principem patresque, quorum moribus adsuefactus rex melior adscisceretur.

11. Ubi haec atque talia dissertavere, incipit orationem Caesar de fastigio Romano Parthorumque obsequiis, seque divo Augusto adaequabat, petitum ab eo regem referens, omissa Tiberii memoria, quamquam is quoque miserat. Addidit prae-
 5 cepta (etenim aderat Meherdates), ut non dominationem et servos, sed rectorem et cives cogitaret, clementiamque ac iusti- tiam, quanto ignota barbaris, tanto laetiora capesseret. Hinc versus ad legatos extollit laudibus alumnum urbis, spectatae

Octavia was nine and Nero twelve. It was customary to betroth children. Octavia had been engaged since babyhood to Silanus, who was twenty years her senior, and this new arrangement could excite no surprise.

majora patefacturum. It would open the way for Nero to the empire.

6. super priorem necessitudinem. The stepson and grandnephew of Claudius.

10. 1. ut rettuli. XI. 10.

3. foederis. Made by Augustus in B.C. 20; renewed by Tiberius A.D. 18, and again confirmed by Caligula. They claim that this treaty confirms by Roman guarantees not the actual king Gotarzes, but the family of the Arsacidae and the interests of Parthia.

4. sed et—accersere. So far were they from disloyalty, that they were actually coming to offer their allegiance to Meherdates.

7. longius sitos. More distant relations.

11. regum liberos obsides dari. The custom was instituted by Phraates IV. (II. 1, N.).

11. 2. Parthorumque obsequiis. Such as the restoration of the standards of Crassus by Phraates in B.C. 20.

3. petitum ab eo regem. Vonones.

4. is quoque miserat. Phraates in A.D. 35, and, upon his death in the same year, Tiridates (VI. 31 and 32).

7. quanto ignota. Sc. magis (Int. 46, b). The Parthians would appreciate mercy the more because they were less accustomed to it.

ad id modestiae : ac tamen ferenda regum ingenia, neque usui crebras mutationes. Rem Romanam huc satietate gloriae 10 provectam, ut externis quoque gentibus quietem velit. Datum posthac C. Cassio, qui Suriae praeerat, deducere iuvenem ripam ad Euphratis.

12. Ea tempestate Cassius ceteros praeminebat peritia legum : nam militares artes per otium ignotae, industriosque aut ignavos pax in aequo tenet. Ac tamen quantum sine bello dabatur, revocare priscum morem, exercitare legiones, cura provisu perinde agere ac si hostis ingrueret : ita dignum 5 maioribus suis et familia Cassia ratus per illas quoque gentes celebrata. Igitur excitis quorum de sententia petitus rex, positisque castris apud Zeugma, unde maxime pervius amnis, postquam inlustres Parthi rexque Arabum Acbarus advenerat, monet Meherdaten, barbarorum impetus acres cunctatione 10 languescere aut in perfidiam mutari : ita urgueret coepta. Quod spretum fraude Acbari, qui iuvenem ignarum et summam fortunam in luxu ratum multos per dies attinuit apud oppidum Edessam. Et vocante Carene promptasque res ostentante, si citi advenissent, non comminus Mesopotamiam, sed flexu 15 Armeniam petunt, id temporis inportunam, quia hiems occipiebat.

13. Exim nivibus et montibus fessi, postquam campos propinquabant, copiis Carenis adiunguntur, tramissoque amne Tigri permeant Adiabenos, quorum rex Izates societatem Meherdatis palam induerat, in Gotarzen per occulta et magis fida inclinabat. Sed capta in transitu urbs Ninos, vetustissima 5

12. C. (Cassio) Longino.

12. 1. peritia legum. He was a follower of Ateius Capito, and head of the conservative school of lawyers.

3. in aequo tenet. Makes them equal in popular estimation.

6. per illas—gentes celebrata. C. Cassius, afterwards the murderer of Caesar, rallied the remains of the legions after the defeat of Crassus, and drove back a Parthian army from Antioch in B.C. 51.

10. monet. Sc. Cassius. The allies had come to the Roman camp on the west bank of the Euphrates, and the proconsul warns Meherdates that he must make use of the first outburst of loyalty on the part of the fickle orientals.

12. summam fortunam. He believed that being king meant personal gratification.

14. Edessam. Eighty miles from Zeugma.

15. comminus. "Forthwith." Meherdates reversed the mistake of Crassus, who was induced to advance across Mesopotamia in midsummer by the treachery of another Acbarus, ancestor of this man.

16. hiems. Tacitus continues his narration of Eastern affairs into 50 A.D.

18. 1. montibus. Mt. Masius, the northern boundary of Mesopotamia. Skirting the Armenian highlands, he descends to the Assyrian plain by the valley of the Tigris.

6. castellum insigne fama. The decisive battle between Alexander and Darius was fought in October B.C. 331, at Gaugamela, a few miles S.E. of the ruins of Nineveh. He pursued the fugitives thirty miles further to the town of Arbela, which gave its name to the battle. The castle of Gaugamela was probably built by one of the Antiochi.

9. praecipua religione shows that the mountain was especially consecrated to the god.

Herculi. Perhaps Sandan, an Assyrian god, though the Macedonians had left the trace of their religion and manners throughout the East. Nin was the god of the chase among the early Assyrians. Tacitus relates these marvels with the same air of impartial acceptance which he assumes for artistic effect when referring to the gods of the Germans or other barbarians.

14. 2. insectationes. "Insults."

3. locos mutare. Rawlinson cannot identify the river Corma, but believes that Gortazes' manœuvres were in defence of Ctesiphon, and that the campaign undoubtedly took place in the Assyrian plain, between the Zagros and the Tigris.

12. profligatis obversis. Carenes defeated the ranks which were opposed to him, but allowed himself to be separated from his companions.

14. paterni clientis. A vassal of the Arsacidae.

16. auribus decisis. Mutilation of any kind makes a man unfit for the throne, in oriental acceptance. The kings of decisis vivere iubet, ostentui clementiae suae et in nos dehonestamento. Dein Gotarzes morbo obiit, accitusque in regnum Vonones Medos tum praesidens. Nulla huic prospera aut adversa quis memoraretur: brevi et inglorio imperio perfunctus 20 est, resque Parthorum in filium.eius Vologesen translatae.

At Mithridates Bosporanus amissis opibus vagus, postquam Didium ducem Romanum roburque exercitus abisse cognoverat, relictos in novo regno Cotym iuventa rudem et paucas cohortium cum Iulio Aquila equite Romano, spretis utrisque concire nationes, inlicere perfugas; postremo exercitu 5 coacto regem Dandaridarum exturbat imperioque eius potitur. Quae ubi cognita et iam iamque Bosporum invasurus habebatur, diffisi propriis viribus Aquila et Cotys, quia Zorsines Siracorum rex hostilia resumpserat, externas et ipsi gratias quaesivere missis legatis ad Eunonen, qui Aorsorum genti praesidens 10 opibus praecellebat. Nec fuit in arduo societas potentiam Romanam adversus rebellem Mithridaten ostendantibus. Igitur pepigere, equestribus proeliis Eunones certaret, obsidia urbium Romani capessarent.

Persia, until lately, were accustomed to blind their brothers upon succeeding to the throne.

19. Medos. The heir-apparent governed Media Atropatene.

15. 1. Mithridates Bosporanus. The surname is added to distinguish him from Mithridates of Hiberia.

2. (A.) Didium (Gallum). This passage evidently resumes a narration which has been lost. Didius had probably been legatus of Moesia, and expelled Mithridates from his kingdom in 46 A.D., a period which would have fallen in the tenth book.

13. certaret. Int. 42.

16. 1. incedunt. Along the east shores of the Sea of Azov.

4. popularium. "The natives." Mithridates, who had usurped the government, was not their countryman.

8. non saxo. The nouns are in the ablative of material. The walls were made of hurdles within and without, with earth packed between them.

diremisset, coepta patrataque expugnatio eundem intra diem foret.

17. Postero misere legatos, veniam liberis corporibus orantes: servitii decem milia offerebant. Quod aspernati sunt victores, quia trucidare deditos saevum, tantam multitudinem custodia cingere arduum; ut belli potius iure caderent; datumque militibus, qui scalis evaserant, signum caedis. Excidio Uspensium metus ceteris iniectus, nihil tutum ratis, cum arma, munimenta, impediti vel eminentes loci amnesque et urbes iuxta perrumperentur. Igitur Zorsines, diu pensitato Mithridatisne rebus extremis an patrio regno consuleret, postquam praevaluit gentilis utilitas, datis obsidibus apud effigiem Caesaris procubuit, magna gloria exercitus Romani, quem incruentum et victorem tridui itinere afuisse ab amne Tanai constitit. Sed in regressu dispar fortuna fuit, quia navium quasdam (quippe mari remeabant) in litora Taurorum delatas circumvenere barbari, praefecto cohortis et plerisque auxiliarium interfectis.

18. Interea Mithridates nullo in armis subsidio consultat, cuius misericordiam experiretur. Frater Cotys, proditor olim, deinde hostis, metuebatur: Romanorum nemo id auctoritatis aderat, ut promissa eius magni penderentur. Ad Eunonen convertit, propriis odiis non infensum et recens coniuncta nobiscum amicitia validum. Igitur cultu vultuque quam maxime ad praesentem fortunam comparato regiam ingreditur genibusque eius provolutus "Mithridates" inquit "terra marique Romanis per tot annos quaesitus sponte adsum: utere, ut voles, prole magni Achaemenis, quod mihi solum hostes non abstulerunt."

19. At Eunones claritudine viri, mutatione rerum et prece

17. 4. ut—caderent. "Let them perish." Ut is concessive.

10. effigiem Caesaris. The standard of the troops (I. 18, N.) Adoring the image was the symbol of homage to the emperor.

12. in regressu. The army had marched northwards, through the Cossack country, to the land of the Aorsi, who now took leave of their allies. The Romans and Bosporani took ship for the Bosphorus, but were driven westward and wrecked on the Crimea.

15. interfectis. The aorist use of the perfect participle, expressing result instead of antecedence.

18. 5. propriis odiis non infensum. Eunones had undertaken the war, not to injure Mithridates, but to please the Romans, with whom he had thus gained influence (validum).

10. prole magni Achaemenis. Mithridates the Great of Pontus (from whom this Mithridates was descended) boasted his origin on his father's side from Cyrus and Darius, and on his mother's from Alexander the Great and Seleucus Nicator.

19. 1. prece haud degeneri. The dignity of his entreaty.

haud degeneri permotus, adlevat supplicem laudatque quod gentem Aorsorum, quod suam dextram petendae veniae delegerit. Simul legatos literasque ad Caesarem in hunc modum mittit: populi Romani imperatoribus, magnarum nationum regibus primam ex similitudine fortunae amicitiam, sibi et Claudio etiam communionem victoriae esse. Bellorum egregios fines, quoties ignoscendo transigatur: sic Zorsini victo nihil ereptum. Pro Mithridate, quando gravius mereretur, non potentiam neque regnum precari, sed ne triumpharetur neve poenas capite expenderet. 5 10

20. At Claudius, quamquam nobilitatibus externis mitis, dubitavit tamen, accipere captivum pacto salutis an repetere armis rectius foret. Hinc dolor iniuriarum et libido vindictae adigebat: sed disserebatur contra suscipi bellum avio itinere, inportuoso mari; ad hoc reges feroces, vagos populos, solum frugum egenum, taedium ex mora, pericula ex properantia, modicam victoribus laudem ac multum infamiae, si pellerentur. Quin arriperet oblata et servaret exulem, cui inopi quanto longiorem vitam, tanto plus supplicii fore. His permotus scripsit Eunoni, meritum quidem novissima exempla Mithridatem, nec sibi vim ad exsequendum deesse: verum ita maioribus placitum, quanta pervicacia in hostem, tanta beneficentia adversus supplices utendum; nam triumphos de populis regnisque integris acquiri. 5 10

23. 1. Galliae Narbonensi. Augustus established a rule that no senator might leave Italy without imperial consent. This kept a strong body at home to manage business, and prevented insurrections, by depriving the provinces of leaders. Augustus excepted Sicily from this rule, because it was near Rome, and uniformly tranquil; Claudius now extends the same privilege to such senators as had their estates in southern Gaul. The rule as thus amended remained in force in the third century.

5. Salutis augurium. Under the republic it had been customary to inquire of the gods whether it were their will that supplications be offered for the salus of the State. The solemnity could only occur during a time of perfect tranquillity at home and abroad.

quinque et septuaginta annis. The last recorded instance of the augurium was under Augustus in 29 B.C., i.e. seventy-seven years before this; but to the Romans, who counted out both ends, it would be seventy-six, and apparently Tacitus makes a slip in regard to one year. The MS. gives quinque et XX. instead of LXX., but twenty-five years would carry it back to 14 A.D., when no augurium is recorded, and when there were disturbances in Germany and Pannonia, following the death of Augustus. The dating of years A.U.C. was seldom used practically, and the careless fashion of computing periods by adding together the reigns which they covered is shown by Tacitus's computation of years in the Dialogus de Oratoribus, § 17.

7. pomerium urbis auxit. By including the Aventine within the pomerium, which was a religious rather than a practical enclosure, and did not pretend to define the real limits of the city. This extension by Claudius is commemorated in an extant inscription. He had won the right by conquering southern Britain. The Aventine had not been enclosed before, because Remus had taken his ill-omened auguries from its summit.

10. nisi L. Sulla et divus Augustus. It was also done by Julius Caesar in B.C. 44.

24. 1. Regum—ambitio. Especially Servius Tullius, who enclosed the Esquiline and Quirinal.

2. pomerium was a space within or without the walls of a city, marked by stone pillars, and set apart as sacred from any common uses. The real purpose was to preserve a space, at least an arrow-shot broad, outside of the fortifications free from cover for the enemy, and with room enough inside to march forces about. The early Latins marked the pomerium of a new city by drawing a furrow with a plough.

3. foro boario. A cattle-market in early times, adorned with a brazen bull from Aegina. The Ara Maxima stood near it, built, according to a story told by Livy, where the Arcadian Evander had offered sacrifice to Hercules returning from the west with the oxen of Geryon (the sun-god and the clouds). The temple of Hercules (sometimes called the temple of Vesta from its circular shape) is still in good preservation. The Ara Maxima was nearer the Palatine, between the modern churches of Sta. Anastasia and Sta. Maria in Cosmedin. It was unearthed in the sixteenth century.

Tacitus here describes, in accordance with the landmarks preserved in his day, the original Rome (Roma Quadrata) of Romulus, as it existed before the Sabine citadel on the Quirinal, or the intermediate forum had been added to the city. The pomerium ran in the plain at some distance from the walls, portions of which have been excavated in five places, and which covered the scarped rocks of the hill-side. The portion most recently discovered, in the Gardens of the Villa Mills (d), is opposed to the theory that the original city covered only the north-west half of the Palatine, since occupied by the Farnese Gardens. In the annexed plan the extant portions of the wall are marked at a, b, c, d, and e, the dotted line between indicating the probable line of the fortifications. The broken line, representing the pomerium, starts from the Ara Maxima (1), runs to the Ara Consi, a subterranean altar near the meta of the Circus Maximus (2), and then proceeds to the Curiae Veteres, placed by mediæval tradition at the eastern corner of the hill (3). The ridge of the Velia made the north-eastern side less defen-

The MS gives quingenta LXX, but twenty is the correct number, it being recorded in the annals of the republic.

 antehac adoptionem inter patricios Claudios reperiri, eosque ab Atto Claudio continuos duravisse.

sible than the others. The fortifications therefore receded to the Porta Mugonia (x), near the temple of Jupiter Stator, while the pomerium advanced to the Sacellum Larum, near the modern church of Sta. Francesca (4). It then proceeded to the corner of the forum (5), leaving the temple of Vesta (6) outside of the original enclosure, and thence returned to the Ara Maxima.

25. 1. C. Antistius (Vetere) M. Sullio (Nerullino).

adoptio in Domitium. Nero's adoption is recorded by an inscription as occurring on 25th February A.D. 50.

7. accingeret. By the adoption he arms himself against misfortune as a man girds on a sword.

8. biennio maiorem. Nero was born 15th December A.D. 37, and Britannicus 13th February A.D. 41. The same mistake (the use of biennio for triennio) is found at III. 31.

11. patricios Claudios. The Claudii Pulchri, as opposed to the Claudii Marcelli, who were a plebeian family, though ancient and highly distinguished. The adoption of Germanicus by Tiberius did not contradict this rule, for Tiberius had passed by adoption into the Julian gens.

26. 1. quaesitiore. The flattery bestowed upon Domitius was more elaborate than that given to the emperor himself; the courtiers had learned that it was more necessary to please Agrippina than Claudius.

2. rogataque lex. A minor could be transferred by his father to another person by adoptio in the presence of a magistrate. But one who was sui juris, as was Domitius, could only be transferred from one family to another by arrogatio, i.e. a law was passed by the comitia curiata in the presence of priests, whose consent was required. Under the empire the comitia curiata had become so obsolete that the curiae were represented in this ceremony by thirty lictors, who passed the required vote. Legally, no one with living issue could adopt a son by arrogatio, but the restriction is set aside in this case.

5. Desolatus. Agrippina deprived Britannicus even of his personal servants. Affecting motherly tenderness, she pretended to nurse him herself. The boy laughed at this unseasonable officiousness (he was nine years old), and, with the cleverness of a precocious child, understood his stepmother's treachery. Agrippina put to death or banished his attendants, took pains to injure his character, and spread reports that he was imbecile and paralytic. He was not allowed to speak to his father, or to appear in public, but was kept in a sort of nursery prison.

7. Neque—segnem—indolem. He seems to have inherited his mother's brilliancy and boldness. Compare the description in XIII. 15.

27. 2. veteranos coloniamque. Hendiads for a colony of veterans. By these colonies the Romans provided bounties for their veterans, and established strong posts on the frontiers. Cologne enjoyed the jus Italicum, i.e. full individual liberty, exemption from taxes, and self-government. Lugdunum in Gaul enjoyed the same privileges.

3. e vocabulo ipsius. "Colonia Claudia Agrippinensis or Agrippina."

5. avus Agrippa. In B.C. 38. Agrippa, as founder of the city, was sometimes confused with his grand-daughter, who established the colony.

7. Dein legit P. Pomponius. Part of legit is wanting in the MSS., from confusion with the following legatus. Pomponius's praenomen was also omitted. He is represented as calling out the militia.

8. equite alario. IV. 73, N.

an servitii. Perhaps revolutions are the inevitable accompaniment of despotism. Doederlein quotes from Thucydides, I. 77: τὸ παρὸν γὰρ δὲ βαρὺ τοῖς ὑπηκόοις.

31. To give a connected view of British affairs, Tacitus has brought together (§§ 31-40) the events from 47 A.D., when Ostorius was appointed governor, to 58.

1. pro praetore. Legati imperatoris were called pro praetore even when of consular rank (I. 74, N.).

8. Antonam inter et Sabrinam. In opposition to the MSS., editors generally read Avonam. But a line of fortifications between the Avon and Severn would only protect Worcestershire and Warwickshire, and would not at all affect the Icenii in Cambridgeshire and Norfolk. By Antonam must be intended the river Nen, which rises in Northamptonshire and flows eastward to the Wash. With the Severn is probably included its confluent, the Avon, which rises in Warwickshire but a few miles from the Nen, and flows with the Severn into the Bristol Channel. By a line of forts along these streams, South Britain was as effectually protected as North Britain afterwards was by the fortifications of Agricola and Hadrian.

12. agresti aggere. One of the dykes which have existed from time immemorial in the eastern counties, such as the Devil's Dyke in Suffolk.

Unde fama eius evecta insulas et proximas provincias pervagata

84. 5. qui—pepulissent. The invasions of Britain by Julius Caesar (in B.C. 56-54) had been fruitless to Roman interests.

6. securibus. The lictors of the governor.

8. gentili quisque religione. "Each by the gods of his own tribe."

85. 2. nihil nisi atrox. The fact that everything appeared defiant. "Ces lieux où l'œil ne découvrait que du fer et des soldats."—Burnouf.

4. praefecti. Commanders of the auxilia (I. 36, N.), corresponding to the tribunes of the legionaries.

7. amnem. Int. 23, c.

9. facta testudine. This represents the pent-house used in sieges ; not the interlaced shields. The troops retired until the fortifications were demolished by picks and hooks.

12. ferentarius. An antiquated word. Slingers and bow-men without defensive armour.

13. conferto gradu. "Marching in line."

16. spathis et hastis. The British auxiliaries were armed and disciplined in national fashion. The spatha was a straight, heavy sword, reaching from the hip to the ground, while the gladius had a blade of twenty inches. The hasta was longer and lighter than the pilum.

86. 3. nono post anno. 43-51 A.D. In this sketch of British affairs Tacitus abandons his ordinary annual chronology.

4. insulas. England and Ireland. Supply ultra.

5 per Italiam quoque celebrabatur avebantque visere, quis ille tot per annos opes nostras sprevisset. Ne Romae quidem ignobile Carataci nomen erat; et Caesar dum suum decus extollit, addidit gloriam victo. Vocatus quippe ut ad insigne spectaculum populus: stetero in armis praetoriae cohortes campo qui 10 castra praeiacet. Tunc incedentibus regiis clientelis phalerae torques quaeque bellis externis quaesiverat traducta, mox fratres et coniunx et filia, postremo ipse ostentatus. Ceterorum preces degeneres fuere ex metu: at non Caratacus aut vultu demisso aut verbis misericordiam requirens, ubi tribunali adstitit, in hunc 15 modum locutus est.

37. "Si quanta nobilitas et fortuna mihi fuit, tanta rerum prosperarum moderatio fuisset, amicus potius in hanc urbem quam captus venissem, neque dedignatus esses, claris maioribus ortum, pluribus gentibus imperitantem foedere in pacem accipere.
5 Praesens sors mea ut mihi informis, sic tibi magnifica est.
Habui equos viros, arma opes: quid mirum, si haec invitus amisi? Num si vos omnibus imperitare vultis, sequitur ut omnes servitutem accipiant? Si statim deditus traherer, neque mea fortuna neque tua gloria inclaruisset; et supplicium mei oblivio 10 sequeretur: at si incolumem servaveris, aeternum exemplar clementiae ero." Ad ea Caesar veniam ipsique et coniugi et fratribus tribuit. Atque illi vinclis absoluti Agrippinam quoque, haud procul alio suggestu conspicuam, isdem quibus principem laudibus gratibusque venerati sunt. Novum sane et moribus 15 veterum insolitum, feminam signis Romanis praesidere: ipsa semet parti a maioribus suis imperii sociam ferebat.

8. insigne spectaculum. Tacitus, with a loose expression, calls it a triumph in the Histories.

9. in armis. In the city the praetorians usually wore the toga instead of the sagulum, and bore swords and spears without wearing armour. But at this review they appear in full panoply.

10. castra. The praetorian camp on the Quirinal (IV. 2, N.).

regis clientelis. His vassals.

11. bellis externis. The trophies he had won from other tribes.

14. in hunc modum. When he looked at the magnificent buildings of the city, he exclaimed: "And yet you envied our poor huts."

37. 4. pluribus gentibus. We hear of him as the king both of the Trinobantes and Silures, and his last campaign involved the Ordovices.

6. viros. A Russian prince driven from his city by the Tartars declared that he was still "monarch of a nation of men."

8. traherer. "If I were dragged to your presence after a surrender without resistance."

9. mei. Used for meum with supplicium (Int. 34).

15. signis Romanis praesidere. The standards were grouped upon the tribunal where Agrippina sat. Compare the behaviour of Plancia (II. 55). The Britons were accustomed to pay reverence to queens (§ 40, N.).

38. Vocati posthac patres multa et magnifica super captivitate Carataci disseruere, neque minus id clarum quam quod Syphacem P. Scipio, Persen L. Paulus, et si qui alii vinctos reges populo Romano ostendere. Censentur Ostorio triumphi insignia, prosperis ad id rebus eius, mox ambiguis, sive amoto 5 Carataco, quasi debellatum foret, minus intenta apud nos militia fuit, sive hostes miseratione tanti regis acrius ad ultionem exarsere. Praefectum castrorum et legionarias cohortes extruendis apud Siluras praesidiis relictas circumfundunt. Ac nito cito nuntiis ex castellis proximis subventum foret copiarum 10 obsidio, occidione obscubuissent : praefectus tamen et octo centuriones ac promptissimus quisque e manipulis cecidere. Nec multo post pabulantis nostros missasque ad subsidium turmas profligant.

39. Tum Ostorius cohortes expeditas opposuit ; nec ideo fugam sistebat, ni legiones proelium excepissent : earum robore aequata pugna, dein nobis pro meliore fuit. Effugere hostes tenui damno, quia inclinabat dies. Crebra hinc proelia, et saepius in modum latrocinii per saltus per paludes, ut cuique 5 sors aut virtus, temere proviso, ob iram ob praedam, iussu et aliquando ignaris ducibus, ac praecipua Silurum pervicacia. Quos accendebat vulgata imperatoris Romani vox, ut quondam Sugambri excisi aut in Gallias traiectione forent, ita Silurum nomen penitus extinguendum. Igitur duas auxiliares cohortes avaritia 10 praefectorum incautius populantes intercepte ; spoliaque et captivos largiendo ceteras quoque nationes ad defectionem trahebant, cum taedio curarum fessus Ostorius concessit vita, laetis hostibus, tamquam ducem haud spernendum etsi non proelium, at certe bellum absumpsisset. 15

38. 3. P. (Cornelius) Scipio (Africanus Minor).

L. (Aemilius) Paulus (Macedonicus).

4. Censentur Ostorio. A triumphal arch was erected in honour of Claudius, under whose auspices the war had been waged (II. 18, N.). The inscription, preserved in fragments, records the surrender of eleven British chiefs.

8. Praefectum castrorum. I. 20, N.

10. nuntiis ex castellis proximis. It appears that the marches of Wales were guarded by a chain of towers. Those in the mountains were surrounded by the enemy, and the nearest post, seeing the difficulty, but not strong enough to take the field themselves, sent messengers to the next garrisoned town, whence forces were despatched.

39. 3. pro meliore. "We had the best of it."

6. temere proviso. "By chance or by design ;" proviso as an abl. abs. in this sense is unique.

8. imperatoris Romani. Ostorius.

11. praefectorum. I. 36, N.

40. At Caesar cognita morte legati, ne provincia sine rectore foret, A. Didium suffecit. Is propere vectus non tamen integras res invenit, adversa interim legionis pugna, cui Manlius Valens praeerat, auctaque est apud hostes eius rei fama, quo
 5 venientem ducem exterrerent, aequae illo augente audita, ut maior laus compositis vel, si duravissent, venia iustior tribueretur. Silures id quoque damnum intulerant lateque persultabant, donec ad cursu Didii pellerentur. Sed post captum Caratacum praecipuus scientia rei militaris Venutius, e Brigantum civitate, 10 ut supra memoravi, fidusque diu et Romanis armis defensus, cum Cartimanduum reginam matrimonio teneret; mox orto discidio et statim bello etiam adversus nos hostilia induerat. Sed primo tantum inter ipsos certabatur, callidisque Cartimandua artibus fratrem ac propinquos Venutii interceptit. Inde accensi 15 hostes, stimulante ignominia, ne feminae imperio subderentur, valida et lecta armis iuventus regnum eius invadunt. Quod nobis praevisum, et missae auxilio cohortes acre proelium fecere, cuius initio ambiguo finis laetior fuit. Neque dispari eventu pugnatum a legione, cui Caesius Nasica praeerat; nam Didius, 20 senectute gravis et multa copia honorum, per ministros agere et arcere hostem satis habebat. Haec, quamquam a duobus pro praetoribus plures per annos gesta, coniunxi, ne divisa haud perinde ad memoriam sui valerent: ad temporum ordinem redeo.

A.U.C. 804.
 A.D. 51.

41. Ti. Claudio quintum Servio Cornelio Orfito consulibus virilis toga Neroni maturata, quo capessendae rei publicae habilis videretur. Et Caesar adulationibus senatus libens cessit, ut vicesimo aetatis anno consulatum Nero iniret atque interim

40. 4. praeerat. As legatus legionis (I. 44, N.).

5. aeque illo augente, etc. "He was as forward as the Britons to exaggerate reports, in order to win greater reputation by outdoing the enemy, or to obtain more indulgence if they persisted."

6. compositis. A reading of Lipsius for compositi. It may be dative after tribueretur, or abl. abs. The whole passage is probably corrupt.

10. ut supra memoravi. In the lost books.

15. ne feminae imperio. Tacitus is thinking from a Roman standpoint. He himself states in another place that the Britons made no distinction of sex in their rulers.

16. lecta armis. Choicely equipped.

41. 2. virilis toga—maturata. Nero was born 15th December, A.D. 37, and was now thirteen years old. The customary time for assuming the toga virilis was the Liberalia (March 16th), after attaining the fifteenth birthday. The toga virilis was the symbol of civil majority (acquiring public rights); the control of property was reserved until a young man was twenty-five years old (XI. 13, N.).

4. vicesimo—anno. The legal age was forty-two (XI. 22, N.). The vote in this case is a repetition of the one passed in praetoriarum cohortium cura exsolverentur Lusius Geta et Rufrius Crispinus, quos Messalinae memores et liberis eius devinctos credebat. Igitur distrahi cohortes ambitu duorum et,

11. centurionum, etc. Praetorians.

14. tali occasione. "On the following pretext."

15. Domitium. Britannicus called him Domitius (Suetonius says Ahenobarbus) instead of Claudius Nero, now his name by adoption.

17. iusserit populus. § 26, N.

20. quasi criminibus. Claudius treated the woman's jealous hints as though they had been lawful accusations.

42. 4. ambitu duorum. Each sought to gain the goodwill of the troops by indulgence.

On account of the narrow streets, vehicles were rarely employed in Rome, sedan chairs taking their place; and carpenta were forbidden within the walls by sumptuary laws, except in the case of vestals, who drove up to 11. imperatore. In the ancient sense (I. 9, N.), an honour conferred upon Germanicus (I. 58).

18. aqua atque igni. IV. 31, N.

Hactenus Vitellius. Vitellius was content with this, and spared his enemy's life.

43. 1. prodigia. Pliny Sr. says that three suns appeared at once.

diris avibus. Ravens, owls, etc.

3. latius metuitur. While they feared a more general destruction.

4. frugum quoque egestas. This was one of several famines during the reign of Claudius. The general dearth of those years had been prophesied ten years before by Agabus (Acts of the Apostles, xi. 28).

5. iura reddentem Claudium. His love for holding court (XI. 5, N.), and his want of common sense, exposed him to frequent insults from litigants and lawyers (Suet. Claud. 15). This makes the riot more intelligible.

8. Quindecim dierum. As the corn trade was controlled by the Government, without private competition (I. 2, N.), it was a serious matter to run short.

9. modestia hiemis. The mildness of the season allowed corn to be brought from Africa in winter, contrary to usual custom (II. 75, N.).

11. nec nunc infecunditate. III. 54, N.

44. Eodem anno bellum inter Armenios Hiberosque exortum Parthis quoque ac Romanis gravissimorum inter se motuum causa fuit. Genti Parthorum Vologeses imperitabat, materna origine ex paelice Graeca, concessu fratrum regnum adeptus; Hiberos Pharasmanes vetusta possessione, Armenios frater eius Mithridates optinebat opibus nostris. Erat Pharasmani filius nomine Radamistus, decora proceritate, vi corporis insignis et patrias artes edoctus, claraque inter accolae fama. Is modicum Hiberiae regnum senecta patris detineri ferocius crebriusque iactabat, quam ut cupidinem occultaret. Igitur Pharasmanes iuvenem potentiae promptae et studio popularium accinctum, vergentibus iam annis suis metuens, aliam ad spem trahere et Armeniam ostentare, pulsus Parthis datam Mithridati a semet memorando: sed vim differendam et potiore dolum, quo incautum opprimerent. Ita Radamistus simulata adversus patrem discordia tamquam novercae odiis impar pergit ad patrum, multaque ab eo comitate in speciem liberum cultus primores Armeniorum ad res novas inlicit, ignaro et ornante insuper Mithridate.

45. Reconciliationis specie adsumpta regressusque ad patrem, quae fraude confici potuerint, prompta nuntiat, cetera armis exsequenda. Interim Pharasmanes belli causas confingit: proelianti sibi adversus regem Albanorum et Romanos auxilio vocanti fratrem adversatum, eamque iniuriam excidio ipsius ultum iturum: simul magnas copias filio tradidit. Ille inruptione subita territum exutumque campis Mithridaten compulit in castellum Gorneas, tutum loco ac praesidio militum, quis Caelius Pollio praefectus, centurio Casperius praeerant. Nihil tam ignarum barbaris quam machinamenta et astus oppugnationum: at nobis ea pars militiae maxime gnara est. Ita Radamistus frustra vel cum damno temptatis munitionibus modicum Hiberiae regnum. The kingdom was too small to be divided, and his father's long life prevented his own accession. This he declared so frequently that Pharasmanes could not help hearing about it.

"Treated as a son." He gave him his daughter in marriage.

18. et ornante insuper. So far was Mithridates from suspecting his ambition that he assisted him in every way."

obsidium incipit ; et cum vis neglegeretur, avaritiam praefecti emergatur, obtestante Casperio ne socius rex, ne Armenia donum 15 populi Romani scelere et pecunia verterentur. Postremo quia multitudinem hostium Pollio, iussa patris Radamistus obtende-bant, pactus indutias abscedit, ut, nisi Pharasmanem bello absterruisset, Ummidium Quadratum praesidem Suriae doceret quo in statu Armenia foret.

46. Digressu centurionis velut custode exsolutus praefectus hortari Mithridaten ad sanciendum foedus, coniunctionem fratrum ac priorem aetate Pharasmanen et cetera necessitudinum nomina referens, quod filiam eius in matrimonio haberet, quod ipse Rada-5 misto socer esset : non abnuere pacem Hiberos quamquam in tempore validiores ; et satis cognitam Armeniorum perfidiam, nec aliud subsidii quam castellum commeatu egenum : ne dubia tentare armis quam incruentas condiciones mallet. Cunctante ad ea Mithridate et suspectis praefecti consiliis, quod paelicem 10 regiam polluerat inque omnem libidinem venalis habebatur, Casperius interim ad Pharasmanen pervadit, utque Hiberi obsidio decedant expostulat. Ille propalam incerta et saepius molliora respondens, secretis nuntiis monet Radamistum obpugnationem quoquo modo celerare. Augetur flagitii merces, et 15 Pollio occulta corruptione inpellit milites, ut pacem flagitarent seque praesidium omissuros minitarentur. Qua necessitate Mithridates diem locumque foederi accepit castelloque egreditur.

47. Ac primo Radamistus in amplexus eius effusus si-mulare obsequium, socerum ac parentem appellare ; adicit ius iurandum, non ferro, non veneno vim adlaturum. Simul in lucum propinquum trahit, provisum illic sacrificii paratum
 5 dictitans, ut dis testibus pax firmaretur. Mos est regibus,

13. neglegeretur. His assaults were despised. Nothing could be done without catapults and rams.

15. verterentur = everterentur. "Should be lost."

17. pactus indutias. The subject is Casperius. He felt confident in the strength of the fortress, but Pollio professed alarm at the multitude of the enemy, and Radamistus pretended that he could not relax the blockade without orders from his father. So Casperius proceeds to Pharasmanes, and leaves time for Pollio's treachery to work.

46. 4. filiam ejus. Marriages with near relatives were customary in Eastern life (§ 6, N.).

5. in tempore. "For the present."

6. Armeniorum perfidiam. The besieged king could hope for no help from his fickle people.

10. omnem libidinem. "Every kind of tyranny."

47. 5. Mos est regibus. An Armenian and Scythian custom, still prevalent in the interior of Africa.

quoties in societatem coeant, implicare dextras pollicesque inter se vincire nodoque praestringere: mox ubi sanguis in artus se extremos suffuderit, levi ictu cruorem eliciunt atque invicem lambunt. Id foedus arcanum habetur quasi mutuo cruore sacratum. Sed tunc qui ea vincla admovebat, decidisse simulans genua Mithridatis invadit ipsumque prosternit; simulque concursu plurium iniciuntur catenae. Ac compede, quod dedecorum barbaris, trahebatur; mox quia vulgus duro imperio habitum, probra ac verbera intentabat. Et erant contra qui tantam fortunae commutationem miserarentur; secutaque cum parvis liberis coniunx cuncta lamentatione complebat. Diversis et contectis vehiculis abduntur, dum Pharasmanis iussa exquirerentur. Illi cupido regni fratre et filia potior animusque sceleribus paratus; visui tamen consuluit, ne coram interficeret. Et Radamistus, quasi iuris iurandi memor, non ferrum, non venenum in sororem et patruum expromit, sed proiectos in humum et veste multa gravique opertos necat. Filii quoque Mithridatis, quod caedibus parentum inlacraverant, trucidati sunt.

48. At Quadratus cognoscens proditum Mithridaten et regnum ab interfectoribus optineri, vocat consilium, docet acta et an ulcisceretur consultat. Paucis decus publicum curae, plures tuta disserunt: omne scelus externum cum laetitia habendum; semina etiam odiorum iacienda, ut saepe principes Romani eandem Armeniam specie largitionis turbandis barbarorum animis praebuerint: poteretur Radamistus male partis, dum invisus infamis, quando id magis ex usu quam si cum gloria adeptus foret. In hanc sententiam itum. Ne tamen adnuisse facinori viderentur et diversa Caesar iuberet, missi

9. arcanum. "Mystic."

13. quod dedecorum. It was customary for Persian kings to expose traitors and enemies at their palace gates before executing them. Prisoners of rank were sometimes honoured with golden fetters.

14. habitum. Sc. regem.

19. visui—consuluit. He had enough sense of shame to spare his eyes the sight of his brother's death—"Voci tamen et aspectui pepercit" (XV. 61).

48. 5. ut saepe—praebuerint. Tacitus deserts the sequence of tenses to employ an aorist perfect. "As Roman princes have always employed Armenia to sow dissensions among barbarians, while pretending to confer it as a gift." It was Roman policy to keep a straw king on the Armenian throne, who could not rely upon his people for support, but must depend upon the influence of Rome. This was easier than to garrison the mountains with legions. The crimes and unpopularity of Radamistus subserved the purposes of the empire.

9. Ne tamen—viderentur. While following the crooked path of Eastern diplomacy, Quadratus and his advisers try to save appearances by making feigned remonstrances to Radamistus.

ad Pharasmanen nuntii, ut abscederet a finibus Armeniis filiumque abstraheret.

49. Erat Cappadociae procurator Iulius Paelignus, ignavia animi et deridiculo corporis iuxta despiciendus, sed Claudio perquam familiaris, cum privatus olim conversatione scurrarum iners otium oblectaret. Is [Paelignus] auxiliis provincialium
 5 contractis tamquam reciperaturus Armeniam, dum socios magis quam hostes praedatur, abscessu suorum et incursantibus barbaris praesidii egens ad Radamistum venit; donisque eius evictus ultro regium insigne sumere cohortatur sumentique adest auctor et satelles. Quod ubi turpi fama divulgatum, 10 ne ceteri quoque ex Paeligno coniectarentur, Helvidius Priscus legatus cum legione mittitur, rebus turbidis pro tempore ut consuleret. Igitur propere montem Taurum transgressus moderatione plura quam vi composuerat, cum rediret in Suriam iubetur, ne initium belli adversus Parthos existeret.

50. Nam Vologeses casum invadendae Armeniae obvenisse ratus, quam a maioribus suis possessam externus rex flagitio optineret, contrahit copias fratremque Tiridaten deducere in regnum parat, ne qua pars domus sine imperio ageret. Incessu
 5 Parthorum sine acie pulsi Hiberi, urbesque Armeniorum Artaxata et Tigranocerta iugum acceperere. Deinde atrox hiems seu parum provisi commeatus et orta ex utroque tabes perpellunt Vologesen omittere praesentia. Vacuamque rursus Armeniam Radamistus invasit, truculentior quam antea, tamquam adversus
 10 defectores et in tempore rebellaturos. Atque illi, quamvis servitio sueti, patientiam abrumpunt armisque regiam circumveniunt.

49. During the reigns of Tiberius and Caligula, Claudius, despised and neglected, had associated with companions of the lowest class. Deformity of person was considered an advantage in a buffoon.

4. auxiliis provincialium. The militia, called socii in I. 36, see N.

8. regium insigne. II. 56, N.

9. auctor et satelles. An ironical juxtaposition. Paelignus appeared as Roman plenipotentiary and Sultan's henchman.

10. coniectarentur. "Should be judged."

Helvidius Priscus. He was quaestor of Achaëa under Nero, and at present was not lawfully qualified to be legatus legionis (I. 44, N.), but exceptions were sometimes made to the rule. Perhaps he was actually tribunus at this time, and acting pro legato in an emergency.

50. 1. Nam Vologeses. Vologeses, who was under particular obligations to Tiridates, made this effort to secure the throne of Armenia for him in the first year of his own reign (according to coins, 51 A.D.). §§ 51 and 52 extend to A.D. 54.

2. a maioribus suis. Artabanus III. placed his eldest son Arsaces on the Armenian throne after the death of Artaxias, A.D. 34. Ariobarzanes (died A.D. 2) was also a Parthian prince.

10. in tempore. "When they found opportunity."

11. regiam. The palace at Artaxata.

51. Nec aliud Radamisto subsidium fuit quam pernicio-tas equorum, quis seque et coniugem abstulit. Sed coniunx gravida primam utcumque fugam ob metum hostilem et mariti caritatem toleravit; post festinatione continua, ubi quatitur uterus et viscera vibrantur, orare ut morte honesta contumeliis 5 captivitatis eximeretur. Ille primo amplecti adlevare adhortari, modo virtutem admirans, modo timore aeger, ne quis relictus poteretur. Postremo violentia amoris et facinorum non rudis destringit acinacem vulneratamque ripam ad Araxis trahit, flumini tradit, ut corpus etiam auferretur: ipse praeceps Hiberos 10 ad patrium regnum pervadit. Interim Zenobiam (id mulieri was called the senatus consultum Claudianum. A woman who lived in concubinage with a slave after his master had objected (ignaro is too mild a word), became a fellow-slave. If the master allowed the intercourse, the woman remained free, but with the social status of a freedwoman, involving dependence upon the slave's master, and partial loss of control in matters of property. The status of the children was also defined.

5. centies quinquagies. £125,000. The freedman who was already worth £2,500,000 could afford to decline this, while he accepted the praetorian rank due only to a senator. It was strange that this law against slave-marriages should come from an ex-slave. Pallas was so haughty with his own servants that he never communicated with them by word of mouth. The decree was passed on the 23d of January.

6. consul designatus. He held a suffect consulship.

7. regibus Arcadiae. A story made out of the whole cloth to suit his name, which had belonged to a mythical king of Arcadia, for whom Evander had named the Palatine Hill.

11. aere publico. On the pedestal of Julius Caesar's statue. Pliny Jr. (Epp. VIII. 6) describes the affair at length. "Imagine Pallas," he says, "undertaking to veto a decree of the senate, deciding what honours he would receive, and declining the money, as beyond his deserts, after accepting the praetorian rank as if below them!"

54. 1. (Antonius) Felix. Josephus, who gives a detailed account of the affair (Ant. Jud. xx. 6), gives a somewhat different account, and throws the blame entirely on Cumanus.

3. tanta potentia. His brother's influence.

4. postquam. The words lost here referred to the insurrection of the Jews in the last year of Caligula, 41 A.D. They flew to arms rather than suffer the emperor's image to be erected in the temple.

6. intempestivis remediis. Cruel and unnecessary destruction of life, and burning the Scriptures.

9. discordes olim. Since the Babylonian captivity. The immediate grievance was an assault made by Samaritans upon Galilaeans going up to Jerusalem to worship.

with 3000 men, were engaged. The vessels of Claudius were of the same description, but higher built. Augustus's lake was surrounded with pleasure-gardens.

6. cincto ratibus ambitu. The contestants were condemned malefactors, and, in order to prevent an outbreak from 19,000 armed and desperate men, the lake was surrounded with a floating platform, supporting a rampart and turrets, manned by praetorians, with a supply of artillery. line (tectis navibus), manned by marines, acted as a further guard. The result showed that these precautions were necessary. When all was ready for the fight, the contestants cried, as was usual, "Ave, Imperator, morituri te salutant;" and Claudius, in his awkward way, replied, "Avete (instead of valete) vos." The men professed to understand this as implying an excuse from fighting, and it was only after a scene of confusion, which thoroughly displayed the weakness of Claudius, that the battle began.

10. tenderentur. "Could be worked." The catapults were gigantic crossbows, drawn by machinery, which discharged spears and beams; ballistae depended for their force upon twisted ropes, and were prepared for discharge by a windlass. The largest ones threw stones weighing 300 pounds to a distance of two furlongs.

14. paludamento. The official cloak of a commander, made of white, scarlet, or purple. Pliny Sr., who was present at the occasion, describes the chlamys of Agrippina with the same word. It was woven of golden threads, and he mentions it as an instance of the ductility of the metal.

17. multum. Int. 5.

57. 1. Incuria operis. Through the faulty work of Narcissus, the contractor, the tunnel followed an up grade inside the mountain, and the water of the lake could only be reduced to the proposed level by lowering the floor of the tunnel.

4. inditis pontibus. On platforms which had been built over the remaining portion of the lake.

5. effluvio lacus. A pavilion for the banquet was reared over the flood-gates which admitted the water to the tunnel, but, by another piece of bad workmanship, the force of the rush of water had not been calculated, and when the gates were opened the beams gave way, disturbing even those parts of the superstructure which were not immediately above the water (ulterioribus), and terrifying the guests.

8. Simul Agrippina. The empress was the only one who kept her head, understood the exact extent of the danger, and was capable of working at once upon her husband's cowardly mind. Compare her behaviour at the shipwreck (XIV. 5).

14. publice valebant. The contests of those early times were for the advancement of classes, not individuals. Julius Caesar was the first to advance equites to responsible positions.

7. Pontum erumpens. The accusative is poetical. Cf. erumpere nubem (Verg. Æn. I. 580). The tunny fish go up from the Mediterranean to spawn in the sea of Azov. The young fish come down through the Euxine in great shoals, and enter the Thracian Bosporus. 10. regni. Used invidiously. The Palatium had become a seraglio.

ingenio. "Ingenuity." XIV. 3, obtulit ingenium Anicetus.

12. explorare gustu. A praegustator. On account of the mania for poisoning, these officials were found at many tables of the great. They formed a guild (collegium) under a procurator. Halotus administered the poison to his master while banqueting with the priests in the arx.

67. 1. temporum illorum scriptores. Servilius Nonianus and Fabius Rusticus. Suetonius, who followed the (falsified) documents of the imperial library, gives conflicting accounts of the death of Claudius, and also of other emperors.

2. infusum. By Halotus, after tasting the food.

delectabili cibo. "His favourite dish." Nero said that mushrooms were the dish of the gods; at least they had deified Claudius.

3. socordiane an Claudii vinolentia. The poison was intended to confuse his mind and produce a lingering death (§ 66); but the silliness and drunkenness of Claudius were so habitual (XI. 2, N.; XII. 5, N.) that the attendants did not at first observe the effect of the drug. Suetonius (Claud. 33) says that he was usually relieved from his gorged dinners by tickling his throat with a feather, so that Xenophon's proceeding did not seem unusual.

5. spreta praesentium invidia. "Disregarding present appearances." As empress-dowager she could laugh at suspicion.

68. 10. ex monitis Chaldeorum. She habitually acted upon their advice (XIV. 9).

palatii repente diductis, comitante Burro Nero egreditur ad cohortem, quae more militiae excubiis adest. Ibi monente praefecto faustis vocibus exceptus inditur lecticae. Dubitavisse quosdam ferunt, respectantes rogitantesque ubi Britannicus 5 esset: mox nullo in diversum auctore quae offerebantur secuti sunt. Inlatusque castris Nero et congruentia tempori praefatus, promisso donativo ad exemplum paternae largitionis, imperator consalutatur. Sententiam militum secuta patrum consulta, nec dubitatum est apud provincias. Caelestesque honores Claudio 10 decernuntur et funeris sollemne perinde ac divo Augusto celebratur, aemulante Agrippina proaviae Liviae magnificentiam. Testamentum tamen haud recitatum, ne antepositus filio privignus iniuria et invidia animos vulgi turbaret.

69. 2. ad cohortem. One of the praetorian cohorts (I. 7, N.), with its tribune, was always on guard (excubiis is dative of end) upon the steps of the Palatium. Burrus as praefectus praetorio could control the men.

7. castris. IV. 2, N.

8. paternae largitionis. 15,000 sesterces per man.

9. patrum consulta. After a short address to the soldiers, Nero proceeded to the senate, which offered him every honour and title. He declined that of pater patriae on account of his youth.

10. Caelestesque honores Claudio. Seneca in derision wrote his Apocolocyntosis (XI. 36, N.), representing the reception of Claudius in Hades, and his final doom.

8. aetate composita. Forty years old.

9. quod tunc spectaretur. Tacitus wrote under Trajan, when the traditions of the Augustan family had died out with the family itself. The descent of Silanus was as follows:—

11. rei familiari—impositi. Procuratores rationales (IV. 15, N.).

12. venenum—datum. Dio Cassius says that Agrippina sent it from Rome, and that it was the same which had been tried on Claudius.

14. de cuius iurgiis. XII. 57, 65.

2. 6. lubricam—aetatem. VI. 49, N.

11. infra servos ingenium. Inclined to be influenced by freedmen.

tristl. "Offensive" (XII. 53, N.).

13. signum. There were two kinds of watchwords. The first, given to troops before an engagement, to serve as a battle-cry; the second, the password by which strangers were allowed to pass the pickets or enter the palace. In the latter case it was given by the emperor himself to the tribune of the cohort on duty (XII. 69, N.). It was changed daily, and was usually the name of a god or hero. Claudius sometimes gave a verse from Homer. The form was in the nominative; in this case optima mater. This was the first watchword which Nero gave.

15 et a senatu duo lictores, flaminium Claudiale, simul Claudio censorium funus et mox consecratio.

3. Die funeris laudationem eius princeps exorsus est, dum antiquitatem generis, consulatus ac triumphos maiorum enumerabat, intentus ipse et ceteri; liberalium quoque artium commemoratio et nihil regente eo triste rei publicae ab externis
5 accidisse pronis animis audita: postquam ad providentiam sapientiamque flexit, nemo risui temperare, quamquam oratio a Seneca composita multum cultus praeferret, ut fuit illi viro ingenium amoenum et temporis eius auribus adcommodatum. Adnotabant seniores, quibus otiosum est vetera et praesentia
10 contendere, primum ex iis qui rerum potiti essent Neronem alienae facundiae eguisse. Nam dictator Caesar summis oratoribus aemulus; et Augusto prompta ac profluens quaeque deceret principem eloquentia fuit. Tiberius artem quoque callebat, qua verba expenderet, tum validus sensibus aut con-

15. duo lictores. Vestals were allowed one, and one had been granted to Livia, though against the will of Tiberius (I. 14).

flaminium Claudiale. A college of priests was instituted in honour of the deified Claudius (sodales Claudiales), and Agrippina was enrolled as priestess of the man she had murdered. In the same way Livia and Octavia had been flaminicae Augustales.

16. censorium funus. IV. 15, N.

consecratio. Mentioned again (after XII. 69) to take up the order of events, and introduces the funeral oration.

3. 2. antiquitatem generis. Attus Clausus came to Rome in B.C. 504. The patrician Claudii had enjoyed 28 consulships, 5 dictatorships, 7 censorships, 6 triumphs, 2 ovations.

3. liberalium — artium. Claudius practised oratory assiduously, and piqued himself upon his acquaintance with the Greek language, in which he composed histories of Carthage and Etruria. He composed an account of his own life in Latin, and was well read in the law of augury.

8. ingenium amoenum. Seneca introduced a flowery style of composition, full of point and sparkle, but deficient in arrangement and dignity. Such was his charm that he moulded the taste of his contemporaries, or perhaps understood better than any one else the art of adapting himself to prevailing tastes. Quintilian made it his especial endeavour to recall Romans to a more temperate and classical style.

9. quibus otiosum est. "Who have nothing better to do."

11. dictator Caesar. Quintilian says that he spoke with the same spirit with which he fought, and that he alone of the Romans would have rivalled Cicero if he had had time to apply himself to oratory. His style was scrupulously elegant and exact.

12. Augusto. His composition was peculiar for its good sense and perfect clearness. He abhorred affectation and obscurity, the faults which disfigured the otherwise thoughtful and powerful oratory of Tiberius. Tacitus believed that Tiberius, through constant dissimulation, lost the power at last to say what he meant. Caligula had a frenzied eloquence, and he was famous for violent perorations. He sometimes accused innocent persons for the pleasure of hearing himself speak. Of Claudius, Augustus said in a letter, that he had been surprised at his eloquent declamation, and wondered that one who conversed so ill could speak so well (the reverse of Tiberius, who spoke best extempore, when he had no time to elaborate and conceal his thoughts). The oration of Claudius, preserved at Lyons, displays at once his learning and his pedantry (XI. 24, N.).

sulto ambiguus. Etiam Gai Caesaris turbata mens vim dicendi 15 non corruptit. Nec in Claudio, quoties meditata dissereret, elegantiam requireres. Nero puerilibus statim annis vividum animum in alia detorsit: caelare, pingere, cantus aut regimen equorum exercere; et aliquando carminibus pangendis inesse sibi elementa doctrinae ostendebat. 20

4. Ceterum peractis tristitiae imitamentis curiam ingressus et de auctoritate patrum et consensu militum praefatus, con-silia sibi et exempla capessendi egregie imperii memoravit, neque iuventam armis civilibus aut domesticis discordiis inbutam; nulla odia, nullas iniurias nec cupidinem ultionis adferre. 5 Tum formam futuri principatus praescripsit, ea maxime de-clinans, quorum recens flagrabat invidia. Non enim se negotiorum omnium iudicem fore, ut clausis unam intra domum accusatoribus et reis paucorum potentia grassaretur; nihil in penatibus suis venale aut ambitioni pervium; discretam domum 10 et rem publicam. Teneret antiqua munia senatus, consulum tribunalibus Italia et publicae provinciae adsisterent: illi patrum aditum praeberent, se mandatis exercitibus consulturum.

5. Nec defuit fides, multaque arbitrio senatus constituta

19. carminibus pangendis. Nero recited upon the stage his poem on the fall of Troy; probably the same verses which he sang while Rome was burning (XV.
39). He tried to rival Lucan (XV. 49), whom he gladly put to death.

4. 2. consilia sibi et exempla. The counsels of Burrus and Seneca; the example of Augustus, whom he professed to imitate.

4. juventam—inbutam. Even Augustus was obliged to begin his reign by vengeance on the murderers of Julius;
and Britannicus, to whom Nero slyly alluded, would inherit hatred for those who were concerned in his mother's death.

8. omnium iudicem. With the officious zeal of a weak man, Claudius attempted to perfect public justice by taking it into his own hands (XI. 5, N.).

unam intra domum. See XI. 2, where Asiaticus, attacked by Messalina, was brought to trial before the emperor in his chamber instead of being allowed his defence before the senate. The same abuses arose in the evil days of Nero, when his privy council consisted of Poppaea and Tigellinus, with whom he decided upon the death of Seneca (XV. 61).

10. venale. XII. 57, N.; XI. 5, N.
The dishonesty of freedmen and the corruption of justice.

discretam domum et rem publicam. The appointment of stewards with judicial powers (IV. 15, N.).

12. publicae (senatoriae) provinciae. I. 74, N. Hereafter, appeals from the provinces should be made to the consuls, who might, at their discretion, bring the question before the senate. In this address, composed under the direction of his counsellors, Nero undoubtedly threw blame on the part of Claudius's reign which was controlled by Messalina, or by Narcissus, his mother's enemy. But at a later time, when he had murdered her, he brought forward all the crimes and misgovernment for which Agrippina was responsible (XIV. 11). The senate decreed that the present oration should be engraved on a silver pillar, and recited before the senate annually on New Year's Day. This custom had long prevailed in regard to the enactments of earlier emperors (I. 72, N.), and it required a whole day to read them all. The silver pillar was a new invention.

5. 2. mercede aut donis. XI. 5, N.

3. edendi gladiatores. This repealed a statute of Claudius, proposed in A.D. 47 by Dolabella. Its object had been to restrict the office to the wealthy.

5. in Palatium. To the library of Apollo (II. 37, N.).

6. additis a tergo foribus. A new door was opened behind the emperor's seat, and covered with a curtain, that Agrippina might hear without being seen.

7. legatis Armeniorum. To beg aid against the Parthians. See next chapter.

8. escendere suggestum. As she had done in the days of Claudius (XII. 56, and N.).

10. Seneca admonuisset. He and Burrus stood by Nero's side. Seneca was the quicker-witted in an emergency (XIV. 7).

6. 8. magistros. "Schoolmasters." Burrus and Seneca.

11. tamen. "After all."

12. octavo decumo—anno. Between eighteen and nineteen. Pompey was born 30th September, B.C. 106. He served under his father, Pompeius Strabo, in B.C. 87, defending Rome against Cinna and Marius. Three years later he levied an army in Picenum on his own account, and joined Sulla upon his return to Italy.

15. auspiciis. II. 18, N.

quam = potius quam. The prince would show his spirit and discrimination if he chose a good general without fear lest he should be himself overshadowed, rather than appoint a rich man for personal reasons.

plane documentum, honestis an secus amicis uteretur, si ducem amota invidia egregium, quam si pecuniosum et gratia subnixum per ambitum deligeret.

Haec atque talia vulgantibus, Nero et iuventutem proximas per provincias quaesitam supplendis orientis legionibus admoveere legionesque ipsas propius Armeniam collocari iubet, duosque veteres reges Agrippam et Antiochum expedire copias, quis Parthorum fines ultro intrarent, simul pontes per amnem 5 Euphraten iungi; et minorem Armeniam Aristobulo, regionem Sophenen Sohaemo cum insignibus regiis mandat. 7. 4. veteres reges. Contrasted with the new appointments.

5. pontes. Used in the plural to express pontoons. At the approach of war the Parthians probably had the power to destroy the bridge at Zeugma, and another had to be made.

8. 2. supplicationes. Thanksgivings to the gods, appointed by the senate, usually in honour of a victorious general, and apportioned in length to the importance of his successes. Supplications of fifteen and twenty days were first granted to Julius Caesar, but the adulation of later times extended them to forty. During this period the doors of the temples were opened, and the images of the gods brought out.

3. vestem — triumphalem. I. 72, N.

ovans. II. 64, N.

4. Martis Ultoris. II. 64, N.

6. retinendae Armeniae. Prof. Rawlinson mentions this as an instance of Roman vanity; they spoke of retaining, not recovering, a kingdom from which they had been expelled. The appointment of Domitius Corbulo was such an excellent one, and so opposed to the jealous policy of the earlier emperors, that men's satisfaction was unfeigned.

11. alisque. I. 49, N.

18. specie inanum. A Greek construction for specie inani.

9. 4. quo bellum ex commodo pararet. "In order to make war at his own convenience." Vologeses was crippled for three years by the revolt of his own son Vardanes, and he gladly made use of the dissension between the Roman commanders to obtain a temporary peace. On account of his domestic troubles he must also have been glad to remove a number of suspected relatives from Parthia.

7. priore de causa. He had been sent to the king on a former embassy.

12. recente gloria. Abl. abs., expressing cause. They preferred Corbulo, because his fame was still in every one's mouth, and there existed a prejudice in his favour even among the enemy.

18. fascibus imperatoriis. By vote of the senate in B.C. 19 Augustus and his successors held a perpetual consularis potestas, typified by twelve lictors. The fasces were bundles of birch rods with an axe in the midst, the head of which was taken off and stuck on the side of the bundle while the magistrate remained in the city. Victorious consuls crowned their fasces with laurel. When generals became the emperor's legati (II. 18, N.), the imperial fasces were crowned for successes in the provinces.

10. 2. consularia insignia. I. 15, N.

tutor. A guardian, appointed by testament or by the praetor to take charge of the property of a boy under fourteen, or of a woman. A Roman came of age at fourteen, and his tutelage was then over, but a curator (thus distinguished from a tutor) was then appointed to take charge of him and his property until the age of twenty-five.

versus offerentes prohibuit. Et quamquam censuissent patres, ut principium anni inciperet mense Decembri, quo ortus erat Nero, veterem religionem kalendarum Ianuariarum inchoando anno retinuit. Neque recepti sunt inter reos Carrinas Celer senator, servo accusante, aut Iulius Densus equester, cui favor in Britannicum crimini dabatur.

11. Claudio Nerone L. Antistio consulibus cum in acta principum iurarent magistratus, in sua acta collegam Antistium iurare prohibuit, magnis patrum laudibus, ut iuvenilis animus levium quoque rerum gloria sublatus maiores continuaret. Secutaque lenitas in Plautium Lateranum, quem ob adulterium Messalinae ordine demotum reddidit senatui, clementiam suam obstringens crebris orationibus, quas Seneca, testificando quam honesta praeciperet, vel iactandi ingenii, voce principis vulgabat.

12. Ceterum infracta paulatim potentia matris delapso Nerone in amorem libertae, cui vocabulum Acte fuit, simul adsumptis in conscientiam M. Othone et Claudio Senecione, adolescentulis decoris, quorum Otho familia consulari, Senecio liberto Caesaris patre genitus. Ignara matre, dein frustra obnitente, penitus inrepserat per luxum et ambigua secreta, ne senioribus quidem principis amicis adversantibus, muliercula nulla cuiusquam iniuria cupidines principis explente, quando uxore ab Octavia, nobili quidem et probitatis spectatae, fato quodam, an quia praevalet inlicita, abhorrebat; metuebaturque ne in stupra feminarum inlustrium prorumperet, si illa libidine prohiberetur.

5. mense Decembri. XII. 25, N.

6. veterem religionem. IV. 70, N.

11. 1. in acta principum. I. 72, N. It would have been proper for Antistius to read aloud (praefari) the oath which the senate took, but Nero forbade it, to show that they were equal so long as they held the consulship together (two months).

4. maiores. Sc. res. The senators hoped that Nero, learning the pleasures of honourable praise in minor matters, would be encouraged to undertake greater ones.

6. clementiam suam obstringens. "Pledging himself to clemency." It is said that Seneca observed his pupil's cruel disposition from the first, and endeavoured to check it in every way; asserting to his friends that when once the lion had tasted blood, his natural ferocity would break forth. His treatise on "Clemency" was written and dedicated to Nero about the end of this year.

7. testificando is dative of end; iactandi ingenii requires causa understood.

12. 2. vocabulum. I. 17, N.

5. liberto Caesaris. The name Claudius shows that his father had been the freedman of the emperor Claudius, and now (by inheritance of clientship) of Nero, the present Caesar.

6. inrepserat. Acte.

luxum. Much stronger than the English word luxury. It expresses debauches and sensual excess; ambigua secreta = suspicious interviews.

7. muliercula—explente. The phrase senioribus—adversantibus has so drawn the mind away from the subject of the sentence, that it is allowed to be repeated here in the ablative absolute.

13. Sed Agrippina libertam aemulam, nurum ancillam aliaque eundem in modum muliebriter fremere, neque paenitentiam filii aut satietatem opperiri, quantoque foediora exprobrabat, acrius accendere, donec vi amoris subactus exueret
 5 obsequium in matrem seque Senecae permetteret, ex cuius familiaribus Annaeus Serenus simulatione amoris adversus eandem libertam primas adolescentis cupidines velaverat prae-bueratque nomen, ut quae princeps furtim mulierculae tribuebat, ille palam largiretur. Tum Agrippina versis artibus per blandi-
 10 menta iuvenem adgredi, suum potius cubiculum ac sinum offerre contegendis quae prima aetas et summa fortuna expe-terent: quin et fatebatur intempestivam severitatem et suarum opum, quae haud procul imperatoriis aberant, copias tradebat, ut nimia nuper coercendo filio, ita rursum intemperanter
 15 demissa. Quae mutatio neque Neronem fefellit, et proximi amicorum metuebant orabantque cavere insidias mulieris semper atrocis, tum et falsae. Forte illis diebus Caesar inspecto ornatu, quo principum coniuges ac parentes effulserant, deligit vestem et gemmas misitque donum matri nulla parsimonia, cum 20 praecipua et cupita aliis prior deferret. Sed Agrippina non his instrui cultus suos, sed ceteris arceri proclamat et dividere filium, quae cuncta ex ipsa haberet.

14. Nec defuere qui in deterius referrent. Et Nero infensus iis, quibus superbia muliebris innitebatur, demovet Pallantem cura rerum, quis a Claudio impositus velut arbitrium regni agebat; ferebaturque degrediente eo magna prosequen-
 5 tium multitudine non absurde dixisse, ire Pallantem ut eiuraret.

13. 5. ex cuius familiaribus, i.e. Senecae.

10. suum potius cubiculum ac sinum. She desired that if he must continue his amour with Acte, he should rather employ her (Agrippina's) own apartments and privacy (sinum), than allow strangers to know of it.

19. vestem et gemmas. The imperial jewels were heirlooms. If Claudian can be believed, the ornaments of Livia were preserved until the time of Honorius (A.D. 398).

20. prior deferret. He offered her of his own accord (prior) the best of them, though many another woman longed for them.

14. 3. velut arbitrium regni agebat. "He practically held the control of the state" by his government of the finances.

5. non absurde. "Shrewdly enough."

ut eiuraret. Curule officers, on the last day of their term, proceeded to the forum and publicly swore that they had done nothing contrary to law. Their friends and admirers accompanied them on the occasion. As Nero sees the pompous freedman departing with his retinue from the Palatium where he had lorded it so long, he declares that the man's reign is over, and that he is going to surrender his administration.

Sane pepigerat Pallas ne cuius facti in praeteritum interrogaretur paresque rationes cum re publica haberet. Praeceptis posthac Agrippina ruere ad terrorem et minas, neque principis auribus abstinere quo minus testaretur, adultum iam esse Britannicum, veram dignamque stirpem suscipiendo patris imperio, quod insitus et adoptivus per iniurias matris exerceret. Non abnuere se quin cuncta infelicis domus mala patefierent, suae in primis nuptiae, suum veneficium: id solum dis et sibi provisum quod viveret privignus. Ituram cum illo in castra; audiretur hinc Germanici filia, inde debilis rursus Burrus et exul Seneca, trunca scilicet manu et professoria lingua generis humani regimen expostulantes. Simul intendere manus, aggerere probra, consecratum Claudium, infernos Silanorum manes invocare et tot inrita facinora.

Turbatus his Nero et propinquo die, quo quartum decimum aetatis annum Britannicus explebat, volutare secum modo matris violentiam, modo ipsius indolem, levi quidem experimento nuper cognitam, quo tamen favorem late quae-sivisset. Festis Saturno diebus inter alia aequalium ludicra regnum lusu sortientium evenerat ea sors Neroni. Igitur ceteris diversa nec ruborem adlatura: uni Britannico iussit exsurgeret progressusque in medium cantum aliquem inciperet, inrisum ex eo sperans pueri sobrios quoque convictus, nedum temulentos ignorantis, ille constanter exorsus est carmen, quo

6. ne cuius facti. Genitive of legal action, with interrogaretur.

7. paresque rationes. "And that his accounts with the state should be called balanced."

15. debilis. Apparently Burrus had lost one hand in war. Church and Brodribb observe that, by the Greeks and Romans, any physical defect was regarded as a positive disgrace.

16. exul. Seneca's banishment to Corsica lasted from 41 to 49 A.D.

18. Silanorum. M. and L. Junius Silanus.

19. tot inrita facinora. She invokes the memory of her crimes as avenging gods against her son, for whose sake they were committed.

15. 1. propinquo die. "As the day drew near." The Saturnalia were now past (about Christmas time). Britannicus would be fifteen years old (XII. 25, N.) on February 13th of the next year, and assume the toga virilis on the Liberalia (March 16th, XII. 41, N.) which followed.

3. levi quidem experimento. An experiment which was trifling enough, but which showed how generally the boy was loved.

5. Festis Saturno diebus. Before Augustus the Saturnalia lasted but one day. He extended them to three, the 17th, 18th, and 19th of December. They were a popular carnival, celebrated by all classes, even by the slaves, with drinking, gambling, and merry-making.

6. regnum lusu sortientium. An amusement resembling a game of forfeits, called Basilinda. A king was appointed by the chance of the dice, and his companions were obliged to obey his commands, however absurd.

10. constanter. "With composure." Neque segnem ei fuisse indolem ferunt carmen. Lipsius suggests that it was a chorus from the Andromache of Ennius, lamenting the fall of Priam's house.

14. nullum crimen. "No ground of accusation."

19. olim provisum erat. XII. 26, N., and XII. 41.

23. iubere supplicium veneficae. According to Suetonius, Nero summoned the woman and beat her with his own hand. "Do you suppose," said he, "that I am afraid of the Julian law?" He compelled her to concoct the poison in his antechamber, and tried it on a kid, which lived for five hours. He then ordered her to concentrate it, until it was strong enough to produce the instant death of a pig. This is what is meant by cognitis antea venenis.

16. 1. idem aetatis. Accusative of specification.

2. sedentes vesci. This was the manner of the earlier Romans, who would not suffer children or women to recline at table. Among the companions of Britannicus was Titus, who afterwards became emperor. He took one sip from his friend's poisoned cup, and suffered a long while from its effects.

4. delectus ex ministris. A praegustator (XII. 66, N.).

7. potio. Calda, a kind of hot punch. fervore. Ablative of cause. Fervor is a boiling heat.

11. resistunt. "Keep their seats."
 This spoken of the boy companions.

12. comitialem morbum. XII. 26,
 N. So called because epilepsy was considered ominous, and its occurrence broke up the comitia.

17. parricidii exemplum. She felt that he who could murder his brother would not shrink from matricide.

20. laetitia is jollity, which may be affected ; gaudium represents real enjoyment.

17. 2. In campo tamen Martis. It was impossible to refuse the boy a resting-place in the mausoleum of Augustus (I.
 8, N.).

3. sepultus est here includes the burning and all the funeral rites.

adeo turbidis imbribus. Xiphilinus relates that the body of Britannicus had been chalked to conceal the blackness occasioned by poison. The streaming rain washed the chalk away, a thing which must have been noticeable enough under the glare of the funeral torches (III. 4, N.).

4. plerique tamen hominum. An ironical statement of Tacitus, who had little faith in auguries (XIV. 12). So far were the gods from showing their anger at this action, that even men, with their harsher judgment, forgave it for the most part. "Brothers had always quarrelled," they said, "since the days of Romulus and Remus. The empire was a possession which admitted no rival of the emperor." This is an instance of the exceedingly lax condition of public opinion under the early Caesars. Cf. IV. 60 ;

 XV. 2 ; Hist. IV. 70.

9. inter sacra mensae. See XV. 52, N. The table was rendered sacred by the libations to the gods, and the prayer for a blessing (Hor. Sat. II. 2, 124).
 The silver salt-cellar was a symbol of hospitality. A slave admitted by his master to the sacra mensae before witnesses gained his freedom (§ 27, N.).

10. sorum. Octavia was present.
 His half-sister Antonia does not appear to have been with him.

At matris ira nulla munificentia leniri, sed amplecti Octaviam, crebra cum amicis secreta habere, super ingenitam avaritiam undique pecunias quasi in subsidium corriprens, tribunos et centuriones comiter excipere, nomina et virtutes nobilium, qui Cognitum id Neroni, excubiasque militares, quae ut coniugi imperatoris olim, tum ut matri servabantur, et Germanos nuper eundem in honorem custodes additos degredi iubet. family had continued without adoption since Attus Clausus, and the male line ended with Britannicus.

13. acerba funera. Untimely (literally unripe) deaths ; used for funera intempestive morientium. The term was used of those who died before assuming the toga virilis. It was esteemed that sorrow for them could only affect the family, and not the state.

18. 2. viros gravitatem adseverantes. "Men who professed austere morality." Burrus, and particularly the philosopher Seneca. Lipsius is disturbed by this hint to the discredit of his favourite, and greatly incensed against Dio Cassius (whom he calls ille Bithynus) for his undisguised dislike of the moralist.

9. qui etiam tum supererant. A few of the ancient nobility remained after the cruelty of Tiberius and the folly of Claudius. When Tacitus wrote his works, they had perished under Nero and Domitian. Orelli observes that the great names of republican Rome rarely appear in inscriptions after the period of Domitian. A new race came in from the provinces.

10. ducem et partes. She sought a leader from the senate, and partisans in the army.

11. excubias. I. 24, N.

12. Germanos. Distinguished from the praetorians.

15. Antoniae fuerat. Probably Antonia Jr., the wife of Drusus Sr. She had occupied a distinguished position under Tiberius, and her palace would be well adapted to a dowager's use.

19. 3. amore an odio incertas. If they were her enemies, they aggravated her disgrace by affected sympathy.

9. opibus—Silanae. Agrippina, with her love of money (ingenitam—avaritiam), hoped to be Silana's heiress, in case the latter died unmarried. Compare her anxiety about Acerronia's will (XIV. 6).

14. pari ac Nero gradu.

15. conjugioque ejus et jam imperio. "By marrying him, and then making him emperor."

20. atrociter. "In the harshest terms."

20. 6. Agrippinae gratia provectum. XII. 42.

11. consensum auctorum. Tacitus introduces this statement of his general plan of composition at the beginning of Nero's reign, which was covered by an unusual number of independent authorities; he professes that he will follow their account without variation where they agree; when they differ he will allow the reader to weigh their evidence for himself.

auctorum secuturi, si qui diversa prodiderint, sub nominibus ipsorum trademus. Nero trepidus et interficiendae matris avidus non prius differri potuit quam Burrus necem eius pro-15 mitteret, si facinoris coargueretur: sed cuicumque, nedum parenti defensionem tribuendam; nec accusatores adesse, sed vocem unius ex inimica domo adferri: reputaret tenebras et vigilatam convivio noctem omniaque temeritati et inscitiae propiora.

21. Sic lenito principis metu et luce orta itur ad Agrippinam, ut nosceret obiecta dissolveretque vel poenas lueret. Burrus iis mandatis Seneca coram fungebatur; aderant et ex libertis arbitri sermonis. Deinde a Burro, postquam crimina et auctores
 5 exposuit, minaciter actum est. Agrippina ferociae memor "non miror" inquit "Silanam, numquam edito partu, matrum adfectus ignotos habere; neque enim perinde a parentibus liberi quam ab inpudica adulteri mutantur. Nec si Iturius et Calvisius ades

Nam Domitiae inimicitiis gratias agerem, si benevolentia mecum in Neronem meum certaret: nunc per concubinum Atimetum et histrionem Paridem quasi scaenae fabulas componit. Aut existat qui cohortes in urbe temptatas, qui provinciarum fidem labefactatam, denique servos vel liberos ad scelus corruptos arguat. Vivere ego Britannico potente rerum poteram? Ac

17. reputaret. An emendation of Lipsius for refutare. He must remember how difficult it was to form a cool judgment under the present circumstances.

21. 3. ex libertis arbitri. These henchmen of the emperor were to act as spies upon Burrus and Seneca, and to observe the words of Agrippina.

6. Silanam. Whom Agrippina had called (§ 19) impudicam et vergentem annis. She here insinuates the words adulteri and anui.

9. novissimam — operam. "The miserable trade."

10. parricidii. Used of any atrocious murder. "I ought not to be wronged," says Agrippina, "with the suspicion that I have tried to kill my son; nor should he blacken his conscience by killing me."

14. scaenae. Dative. The accusation, says Agrippina, is a perfect farce, apparently devised to give Paris a chance to act a scene before Nero.

Baiarum suarum. "Her estate at Baiae," for which Nero afterwards murdered Domitia. The piscinae, or fish preserves, originally introduced to supply food, became a favourite amusement of the wealthy. Hortensius and Antonia Jr. petted their lampreys; Vedius Pollio fed his with slaves. The ponds at Baiae were of salt water, and were surrounded with marble benches and porticoes.

15. proconsulare jus et designatio consulatus. XII. 25 and 41.

19. Vivere ego—poteram? By this indignant question Agrippina tries to show that her threat to put Britannicus si Plautus aut quis alius rem publicam iudicaturus obtinuerit, 20 desunt scilicet mihi accusatores, qui non verba impatientia caritatis aliquando incauta, sed ea crimina obiciant, quibus nisi obtinuit.

22. Praefectura annonae Faenio Rufo, cura ludorum, qui a Caesare parabantur, Arruntio Stellae, Aegyptus Ti. Balbillo permittuntur. Suria P. Anteio destinata, sed variis mox artibus elusus, ad postremum in urbe retentus est. At Silana in exilium acta; Calvisius quoque et Iturius relegantur; de 5
Atimeto supplicium sumptum, validiore apud libidines principis Paride quam ut poena adficeretur. Plautus ad praesens silentio transmissus est.

23. Deferuntur dehinc consensisse Pallas ac Burrus, ut Cornelius Sulla claritudine generis et adfinitate Claudii, cui per nuptias Antoniae gener erat, ad imperium vocaretur. Eius accusationis auctor extitit Paetus quidam, exercendis apud aerarium sectionibus famosus et tum vanitatis manifestus. Nec 5 tam grata Pallantis innocentia quam gravis superbia fuit:

21. impatientia caritatis. "On account of affectionate jealousy."

22. 1. Praefectura annonae. I. 2, N. Rufus Stella and Balbillus were equites; Anteius a consular senator, for the government of Syria was a consular dignity.

23. 4. exercendis—sectionibus. He bought confiscated goods at auction (at a low price, because public opinion opposed any participation in such matters), and sold them again at a profit.

5. vanitatis manifestus. "Convicted of bearing false witness" against Pallas and Burrus.

10. inter iudices. He sat as an assessor or counsellor of the emperor in his own case; a proof of the disregard with which Nero treated the accusation.

11. tabulae exustae sunt, etc. When his attention had been called to the affairs of the treasury, Nero proceeded to the popular measure of burning the old lists of treasury dues, which had become antiquated by non-collection, but were still a dread to debtors and their heirs. Paetus had been in the habit of reviving such forgotten claims, to make his own profit by them.

24. 1. statio cohortis. I. 77, N. It was found impossible to dispense with this guard (§ 25).

4. Urbem—lustravit. The pontifex maximus led a sow, a sheep, and a bull around the walls of the city, and then sacrificed them. This was done to expiate prodigies. The fratres arvales led the victims round the fields each spring to obtain a fruitful year, and the censors, at the conclusion of their office, led them in like manner around the people assembled in the Campus Martius.

2. deverticula. "Taverns." Suetonius calls them popinae, or cook shops. In consequence of the general relations of guest-friendship, Romans of the upper classes rarely stopped at taverns, which naturally acquired a low character.

3. veste servili. Borrowed clothes and a wig, according to Xiphilinus.

4. venditioni exposita. The shops at Rome were booths, projecting into the street, and closed at night by chained shutters. Nero broke them open, and afterwards held an auction of "the spoils" in the palace.

6. et ore praeferret. Pliny gives the recipe for the salve which Nero used to remove the bruises from his face. After his fight with Montanus he was obliged to keep the house for several days.

9. captivitatis = captae urbis, the sack of a city.

10. senatorii ordinis. In order to interest the upper classes in the work of government, Augustus had allowed the sons of senators to wear the laticlave and to be admitted to the meetings of the senate, but without the right to vote. A candidate for actual senatorship must have been quaestor.

18. plerumque coram prospectans. Nero was carried to the theatre in a closed litter, and, mingling with the rabble in the upper gallery, cheered on the rioters, throwing pieces of the benches with his own hand. He managed to break a praetor's head.

20. histriones Italia pellerentur, i.e. those in whose interests the riots took place. Others were engaged in their stead.

26. 1. de fraudibus libertorum. They cheated their patrons of the gratitude which was due them.

2. revocandae libertatis. Athenian law allowed a master to revoke the manumission of an ungrateful freedman, but this principle was never admitted at Rome, for the reasons set forth in the following chapter. Claudius had deprived certain ungrateful freedmen of liberty, and Nero, while refusing in this instance to ratify a general law, allows the senate a special jurisdiction over individual cases.

4. relationem incipere. The proposition had been brought before the senate by speakers on other subjects, as they had a right to do (II. 33, N.); but the consuls dared not formally put the question until they had the emperor's consent.

5. Ille an auctor. The text at this point is exceedingly corrupt. Lipsius said that editors only served as undertakers at its funeral. The text here given is Draeger's.

6. inter paucos. The emperor consulted his privy advisers, but even they are divided.

7. coalitam. "Strengthened." Insolence has become so great, that freedmen do not even treat their old master as an equal, or ask his advice; but shake their fists at him (verberibus is dative of end), and impudently advise him not to meddle with them.

11. quam ut—releget. Augustus, who legislated upon the status of freedmen, gave their patrons, it appears, this power of banishing them a hundred miles from Rome. But the only effect of this was to despatch them to the watering-places of Campania, which were just beyond this limit.

12. actiones. In the legal sense preserved in English.

14. retinendi libertatem. Understand some such word as necessitas, but of a neuter gender. This elliptical genitive of the gerund occurs again in XV. 5, where consilium is to be understood with vitandi ; and XV. 21, where jus is needed with ostentandi (Int. 49).

27. 2. late fusum id corpus. Orelli observes that the inscriptions of ancient Rome best prove how large a majority of the population consisted of freedmen or their descendants. The original Italian names gradually disappear.

3. tribus. The four urban tribes, among which libertini were regularly enrolled, though a few found their way into the more respectable country tribes.

decurias. The collegia of scribae, lictores, praecones, and viatores, were divided into decuriae.

ministeria magistratibus. The acensi, besides the classes already mentioned.

ministeria—sacerdotibus. Calatores and praeciae.

6. libertini. Includes liberti and their descendants.

9. duas species. Manumissio was of two kinds : 1st, justa or legitima, which conferred full civil rights, and was given either by vindicta (the touch of the praetor's wand), census (the act of the censor, and consequently out of date under the empire), or testamentum (not mentioned here, because the freedman could not be ungrateful to the dead) ; 2d, Manumissio imperfecta, granted either by epistola (a writing signed by five witnesses), inter amicos (by speech, attested by five witnesses), or convivium (by solemnly admitting the slave to the master's table). Slaves thus imperfectly manumitted became Latini Juniani (so called from the lex Junia Norbana, II. 59, N., which regulated their condition), and had no power to inherit or bequeath, their property returning at their death to their patron or his heirs. The ceremony of manumission before the praetor was attested by turning the slave about on his heels ; he came out a freedman. The master was obliged to pay a tax of 5 per cent on the slave's value, it being Roman policy to restrict the increase of citizenship.

28. Manebat nihilo minus quaedam imago rei publicae. Nam inter Vibullium praetorem et plebei tribunum Antistium ortum certamen, quod inmodestos fautores histrionum et a praetore in vincla ductos tribunus omitti iussisset. Piso designatus consul, ne quid intra domum pro potestate adverterent, neve multam ab iis dictam quaestores aerarii in publicas tabulas ante quattuor menses referrent; medio temporis contra dicere liceret, deque 10 eo consules statuerent. Cohibita artius et aedilium potestas statutumque quantum curules, quantum plebei pignoris caperent vel poenae inrogarent. Et Helvidius Priscus tribunus plebei adversus Obultronium Sabinum aerarii quaestorem contentiones proprias exercuit, tamquam ius hastae adversus inopes incle- 15 menter augeret. Dein princeps curam tabularum publicarum a quaestoribus ad praefectos transtulit.

29. Varie habita ac saepe mutata eius rei forma. Nam

28. 1. nihilo minus. Though the senate no longer ventured to act for itself.

4. Conprobavere. The action of the praetor.

6. aut vocare ex Italia. The tribunes of the people never had the right of summoning (vocatio), but only of apprehending men (prehensio) for wrongs done in the tribune's presence. Nor had they any jurisdiction beyond the city itself. This legislation therefore is directed against abuses of tribunician authority which had gradually crept in.

7. ne quid intra domum—adverterent. Tribunes of the people were obliged by law to keep their houses open by day and night as a refuge for the oppressed; but by the statute of Piso they could not issue veto or give judgment except at the rostra in the forum, where publicity prevented abuse of their prerogative.

9. aerarii. III. 51, N.

11. aedilium potestas. The power of the aediles dwindled until the office was abolished under Alexander Severus. They controlled, to a certain extent, streets, baths, taverns, and brothels, held literary censorship, and had general charge of public morals under the guidance of the emperor's ensoria potestas.

12. quantum—pignoris caperent. A citizen who did not obey the summons of a magistrate, or a senator who did not attend a meeting of the senate, after due notice, was liable to a levy on his goods. This was called pignus capere. He might recover by making proper excuse for absence.

15. jus hastae. Forced sales for unpaid treasury dues.

29. 1. eius rei forma. The aerarium (III. 51, N., to be distinguished from the aerarium militare, I. 78, N., and the fiscus, VI. 2, N.) was controlled in republican times by quaestors. In 45 B.C. no quaestors were elected, owing to the absence of Julius Caesar, who ordained in consequence that their duties should be transferred to the aediles. In 28 Augustus put the treasury under two prefects of praetorian rank, elected annually by the senate; but, to avoid canvassing, he ordained in 23 that two of the praetors should each year be appointed to the office by lot. This introduced new difficulties (quia sors deerrabat ad parum idoneos), and Claudius ordained in 44 A.D. that the duty should be assigned to two extraordinary quaestors, appointed for the purpose triennially; and, lest young men at the beginning of their public career should fear to offend influential persons in the discharge of treasury duties, he enacted that they should at once become praetors at the conclusion of their term, without being aedile or tribunus plebis. Nero now (A.D. 56), in order to secure more experienced treasury officials, appoints prefects of praetorian rank (thus returning to the original ordinance of Augustus, except in retaining the power of appointment for the emperor). Dio Cassius says that the office now became an annual one. During the civil wars, from Galba to Vespasian, praetors again held the office ; but we find Pliny Jr., under Trajan, acting as praetorian prefect, with a two years' term.

30. 2. Sardiniam provinciam. At this time imperial, so that its prefect would be tried before the emperor, while the proconsul of Crete and Cyprus would be arraigned by the senate.

11. bonis artibus. He increased his large fortune by economy and good husbandry. Nero called it longa parcimonia. Columella quotes a saying of his in favour of keeping hereditary tenants on estates.

12. amicitia. It was certainly unusual to be the friend of Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius, and to survive them all. The copier of the MS., not appreciating the irony, gave malitia, which Lipsius corrected.

31. 2. laudandis fundamentis et trabibus. This theatre of Nero's was entirely constructed of wood, and was finished within a year. Pliny Sr., who collects particulars, mentions a beam of larch used in its construction 120 feet long and 2 feet thick.

9. ad retinendam populi fidem. "To save the national credit." It appears that the aerarium (III. 51, N.) had not been so well administered as the fiscus and aerarium militare, which were under the emperor's control. He is accordingly able to relieve the pressure on the aerarium (to be henceforth under his jurisdiction, § 28, N.) by a contribution of £330,000 from his own surplus. Augustus records in the Marmor Ancyranum that he made four contributions of this kind for public expenses, amounting in all to £1,250,000.

quintae et vicesimae. A tax upon the sale of slaves, to be distinguished from the manumission tax (§ 27, N.). Augustus invented this impost, fixing it at two per cent of the slave's price; Caligula increased it to four (quinta et vicesima pars); Nero now removes it from purchasers, who were usually Romans, and imposes it on the slave-dealers, who were foreigners, intending to throw the burden abroad; but the dealers simply put up their price, and the law went for nothing.

12. ne quis magistratus aut procurator. "No senatorial or imperial governor" (I. 74, N.). It had become the custom of governors, after pillaging the wealth of a province, to please the lower classes of the place by shows (also provided at the expense of the wealthier provincials), and thus to prevent an accusation of extortion by dividing the interests of the people. Another custom had arisen of persuading a part of the provincials to pass a vote of thanks to the governor at the end of his term, and thus to secure his political advancement. The cities of the east were always divided by factions (II. 54), and it was usually possible to secure one party as supporter of the proconsul. Compare XV. 21. An attempt was made to check these practices of "averting by intrigue the results of their arbitrary government (libidine)."

32. 1. senatus consultum. In accordance with the Senatus Consultum Silanianum, passed in A.D. 10, all slaves who lived under the roof of a master who was murdered, or had been in company with him when he was murdered away from home, were to be tortured; and if it appeared that they had not done their best to save him, they were put to death. The heir was not allowed to succeed to the property until this investigation had been made. An instance is given (XIV. 42) where four hundred innocent slaves were put to death under this law. The senatus consultum here mentioned (called Neronianum or Pisonianum from the consuls of the year) provided, in addition, that slaves manumitted by the will of the murdered man should not be exempt from the penalty, and ordered a similar investigation where the mistress of a house was murdered.

7. superstitionis externae. Foreign religions had been brought into discredit by the priests of Isis and by the Jews (II. 85, N.); their practice was forbidden by law. Perhaps Pomponia was a Christian.

8. propinquis coram. The wife being in manu mariti, he possessed, theoretically, a power of life and death over her. To prevent abuses, the wife's relations were called in to assist his judgment. By custom, these family tribunals had acquired a legal right, in disgraceful cases, when it was preferred not to bring the wife into court.

14. Lucullo Pompeioque. During their campaigns against Tigranes, in 69, 68, and 66 B.C.

85. 2. Suria transmotae legiones. The Syrian army had been divided between Ummidius Quadratus and Corbulo in A.D. 54 (§ 8), and Corbulo had led his share, consisting of two legions with the auxiliaries, into Cappadocia. Nipperdey supposes that the means of discipline here described were adopted in 56, and that the bitter winter mentioned below was that of 56-57 (more probably 57-58).

3. munia—Romanorum. The troops had degenerated to the condition of the Asiatics, from among whom they were chiefly levied. The bad discipline of the Syrian legions under Piso is mentioned (II. 55; III. 13).

5. non stationem, non vigiliis. I. 28, N.

6. sine galeis. In imitation of the praetorians (XII. 36, N.).

7. nitidi et quaestuosi. Horace uses nitidus in the sense of "a cockney" (Ep. I. 7, 33). Quaestuosi refers to the trading business carried on by soldiers in garrison towns (§ 51, N.).

10. ex Germania legio. Legio XII., Fulminata. Originally stationed in Syria. Claudius removed it to the Rhine in A.D. 43, when he withdrew the German legions for service in Britain. It was now restored.

 non ignaro duce nostro, qui viae pariter et pugnae composuerat exercitum. Latere dextro tertia legio, sinistro sexta incedebat, mediis decumanorum delectis; recepta inter ordines impedi-menta, et tergum mille equites tuebantur, quibus iusserat ut instantibus comminus resisterent, refugos non sequerentur. In 10 cornibus pedes sagittarius et cetera manus equitum ibat, pro-ductiore [cornu] sinistro per ima collum, ut, si hostis intravisset, fronte simul et sinu exciperetur. Adsultare ex diverso Tiri-

10. agmina. "Roman equites in droves." Those mentioned before were consulars. Seneca, in the Apocolocy-

Famae numquam pepercit, maritos et adulteros non distinguens ; neque adfectui suo aut alieno obnoxia, unde utilitas ostenderetur, illuc libidinem transferebat. Igitur agentem eam in matrimonio Rufri Crispini equitis Romani, ex quo filium genuerat, Otho pellexit iuventa ac luxu et quia flagrantissimus in amicitia Neronis habebatur : nec mora quin adulterio matrimonium iungeretur.

46. Otho sive amore incautus laudare formam elegantiamque uxoris apud principem, sive ut accenderet ac, si eadem femina poterentur, id quoque vinculum potentiam ei adiceret. Saepe auditus est consurgens e convivio Caesaris, se quidem ire ad illam, sibi concessam dictitans nobilitatem, pulchritudinem, vota omnium et gaudia felicium. His atque talibus inritamentis non longa cunctatio interponitur. Sed accepto aditu Poppaea primum per blandimenta et artes valescere, imparem cupidini se et forma Neronis captam simulans ; mox acri iam principis amore ad superbiam vertens, si ultra unam alteramque noctem attineretur, nuptam esse se dictitans, nec posse matrimonium amittere, devinctam Othoni per genus vitae, quod nemo adaequaret : illum animo et cultu magnificum ; ibi se summa fortuna digna visere : at Neronem, paelice ancilla et adsuetudine Actes devinctum, nihil e contubernio servili nisi abiectum et sordidum traxisse. 12. decebat. "It was becoming" to her beauty.

16. filium. This boy was named after his father. Nero had him drowned because he played at being General, which was interpreted as treasonable.

Otho pellexit. Tacitus here changes, upon further examination, an account which he had given in the Histories (I. 13) that Otho from the beginning was only used as a cover for Nero's intrigue.

15. contubernio. A word used to express the cohabitation of slaves, opposed to the matrimonium of the free.

18. Lusitaniae praeficitur. This occurred after the murder of Agrippina in A.D. 59. The appointment was more remarkable, because the office was one of praetorian dignity, and Otho had only held the quaestorship.

dacio intendit. Pons Mulvius in eo tempore celebris nocturnis inlecebris erat; ventitabatque illuc Nero, quo solutius urbem extra lasciviret. Igitur regredienti per viam Flaminiam com-positas insidias fatoque evitatas, quoniam diverso itinere Sallus-10 tianos in hortos remeaverit, auctoremque eius doli Sullam ementitur, quia forte redeuntibus ministris principis quidam per iuvenilem licentiam, quae tunc passim exercebatur, inanem metum fecerant. Neque servorum quisquam neque clientium Sullae adgnitus, maximeque despecta et nullius ausi capax sponsibility of government.

6. Pons Mulvius. Leads the Flaminian way across the Tiber, two miles north of the city. Probably a suburb extended as far as this, and the neighbourhood of the bridge was occupied by taverns and brothels.

8. regredienti. This is to be taken with what follows. Graptus tells him that an ambushade had been laid for him in case he had returned by the usual Flaminian Way, which he did not do, but took the Via Salaria, entered the Colline gate, and proceeded to the gardens of Sallust, between the Pincian and Quirinal. His servants had returned by the Flaminian Way, and were scared by some young mohocks, as was then the fashion.

9. Sallustianos—hortos. Begun by the historian, and adorned by his grandnephew. They were inhabited by Ves-pasian, Nerva, and Aurelian.

48. 2. ordo plebs. "The senate and the people." Coloniae and municipia, in the first century after Christ, were governed by a senate consisting of one hundred members, called decuriones.
These were appointed by officers, chosen for the purpose once in five years, like Roman censors, and called quinquennales.
The officers of the town were chosen annually during this period by popular election. The chief ones were duumviri or judges (in the year when quinquennales acted there were no duumviri); two quaestores or treasurers; and two aediles, with charge of streets and markets. The decuriones were called the ordo of a place.
Augustus conferred upon them the right to vote at Roman elections, by sealing their ballots in the urn and forwarding it to the city; but this privilege was ended under Tiberius, with the suspension of the comitia.

49. Non referrem vulgarissimum senatus consultum, quo civitati Syracusanorum egredi numerum edendis gladiatoribus finitum permittebatur, nisi Paetus Thrasea contra dixisset praebuissetque materiem obtrectatoribus arguendae sententiae. Cur enim, si rem publicam egere libertate senatoria crederet, tam 5 levia consecraretur? Quin de bello aut pace, de vectigalibus et legibus, quibusque aliis res Romana contineretur, suaderet dissuaderetve? Licere patribus, quoties ius dicendae sententiae accepissent, quae vellent expromere relationemque in ea postulare. An solum emendatione dignum, ne Syracusis 10 spectacula largius ederentur: cetera per omnes imperii partes perinde egregia, quam si non Nero sed Thrasea regimen eorum teneret? Quod si summa dissimulatione transmitterentur, quanto magis inanibus abstinendum? Thrasea contra, rationem poscentibus amicis, non praesentium ignarum respondebat eius 15 modi consulta corrigere, sed patrum honori dare, ut manifestum fieret magnarum rerum curam non dissimulatu-ros, qui animum etiam levissimis adverterent.

50. Eodem anno crebris populi flagitationibus, inmodestiam publicanorum arguentis, dubitavit Nero, an cuncta vectigalia omitti iuberet idque pulcherrimum donum generi mortalium daret. Sed impetum eius, multum prius laudata magnitudine animi, attinuere senatores, dissolutionem imperii docendo, si 5 fructus quibus res publica sustineretur deminuerentur: quippe sublatis portoriis sequens ut tributorum abolitio expostularetur.

49. 1. vulgarissimum. As superlative, ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

2. numerum edendis gladiatoribus. Augustus limited the Roman shows to sixty pairs of gladiators twice a year. Tiberius introduced further restrictions. We are not acquainted with the regulations of provincial towns.

The fancy of Nero, that he could cast the whole burden of the State upon the provincials, shows his entire ignorance of the empire and its possibilities. The senators explain that the provinces would at once require exemption from their tributum.

4. extra ordinem. That is, immediately, without putting such cases on the court calendar, and thus deferring them until the tax-gatherer's term was concluded.

5. immunitas. "Exemption" from all taxes. An advantage acquired by provincials who enlisted in the legions. The only exception was in the case of soldiers who trafficked—a custom which was contrary to public policy (§ 35, N.).

7. quadragessimae quinquagesimaeque. These exactions of 2½ and 2 per centum were evidently illegal, and are not to be confused with any recorded imposts of the same amount.

9. Temperata—subvectio. "Importation—was encouraged" by relieving corn merchants of unnecessary harbour-dues ; and by exempting corn ships from the property-tax which formed part of the provincial tribute (IV. 6, N.).

8. dicioni nostrae. Boiocalus professes that by settling his men on Roman land he makes them Roman subjects. After all, how small a part of the land claimed by them is occupied by the soldiers' cattle, which are sent across the Rhine to graze on it. Let them keep their pastures, though they starved men by doing so; but why did they prefer to leave the country beyond a wilderness, instead of filling it with loyal friends? Nipperdey considers the awkward jacere an interpolation. Esse should be understood instead.

vellentne contueri inane solum: potius mare superfunderent adversus terrarum ereptores.

56. Et commotus his Avitus: patienda meliorum imperia; id dis quos inplorarent placitum, ut arbitrium penes Romanos maneret, quid darent quid adimerent, neque alios iudices quam se ipsos paterentur. Haec in publicum Ampsivariis respondit, ipsi Boiocalo ob memoriam amicitiae daturum agros. Quod 5 ille ut proditiōis pretium aspernatus addidit "deesse nobis terra in vitam, in qua moriamur, non potest:" atque ita infensis utrimque animis discessum. Illi Bructeros, Tencteros, ulteriores etiam nationes socias bello vocabant: Avitus scripto ad Curtilium Manciam superioris exercitus legatum, ut Rhenum 10 transgressus arma a tergo ostenderet, ipse legiones in agrum Tencterum induxit, excidium minitans, ni causam suam dissociarent. Igitur absistentibus his pari metu exterriti Bructeri; et ceteris quoque aliena pericula deserentibus sola Ampsivariorum gens retro ad Usipos et Tubantes concessit. 16. potius mare superfunderent. A natural thought for a Dutchman in a land which was afterwards flooded by the Zuyder Zee.

56. 1. commotus his. Moved to pity, he reasoned instead of threatening; but claimed the entire right of decision for the Romans. Boiocalus interpreted it as a refusal.

9. socias bello. "To aid them in the war." Bello is dative.

14. deserentibus. "Seeking to avoid."

sola. "Deserted."

17. hospites, egeni, hostes, in alieno. At first they were received; then, when their needs made them troublesome, they were treated as enemies. Everywhere they were on strange ground.

57. 2. flumen. Probably the Werra, a confluent of the Weser. Among its sources in the Thuringian forest are salt springs, where the manufacture is still conducted.

4. eos maxime locos propinquare caelo. The Thuringian forest is high ground, but probably the meaning is simply that the gods look with favour upon the spot.

7. eluvie maris. Pliny Sr. describes the manufacture of salt by sluicing seawater into pools in the sand, and also the method described here, of pouring salt water upon hot embers. It produced tem arborum struem fusa ex contrariis inter se elementis, igne atque aquis, concretum. Sed bellum Hermunduris prosperum, a kind of salt charcoal, which was used by the Gauls in Varro's time.

10. victores—sacravere. Caesar says that the Germans, before a battle, vowed the enemy to the gods. If they conquered, they slew all the prisoners and horses as sacrifices, and piled the spoil in one sacred heap, which was left to decay. In the defeat of Varus, the Romans had been sacrificed in this way (I.
 61), and later authors mention the same custom.

12. minae—hostiles. The Chatti had threatened to treat the Hermunduri in the same way.

14. ignes terra editi. A peat-fire smouldering underground, and spreading to grass and trees. Such fires may continue for years. Heaps of stones might possibly help to check them; the use of old clothes was probably a superstition.

 Bush fires are put out by beating them with green saplings.

58. 1. Ruminalem arborem. The sacred fig-tree which grew upon the Germalus at the western extremity of the Palatine, and overshadowed the Lupercal or grotto where Romulus and Remus were suckled. By a miracle of the augur Attus Naevius, it was transplanted to the comitium in the days of Tarquinius Priscus.

2. octingentos et quadraginta. The Med. gives quadraginta, which would make Romulus twenty-eight years old at the foundation of Rome, instead of eighteen, which was the common tradition. Lipsius proposed the reading tri- ginta (XXX. for XXXX.).

Sed quae Cluvius, eadem ceteri quoque auctores prodidere, et fama huc inclinat, seu concepit animo tantum inmanitatis Agrippina, seu credibilior novae libidinis meditatio in ea visa est, quae puellaribus

9. praesumendo remedia. Suetonius says that Nero tried poison three times and failed. Next he arranged a ceiling to crush her in her bed, but the plot was disclosed by his accomplices. Finally, he conceived the idea of the dissolving ship, suggested, according to Dio Cassius, not by Anicetus, but by a machine of the same kind which had been employed in the theatre to bring wild beasts upon the stage, and then to let them loose.

4. acciperetque. "And might believe it."

6. nam Antio adventabat. From her estate at Antium, where Nero had been born.

7. ducitque Baulos. Agrippina came in her own galley from Antium, was received and welcomed by Nero at Bauli, which was about a mile north of Misenum after doubling the promontory. She supped that night with Nero at Baiae, two miles further north, making the trip in her own sedan chair; but was persuaded to return in the treacherous galley, which had followed her from Bauli. After the shipwreck she took a small boat, and, instead of returning to Bauli, passed on to her own villa on the Lucrine lake, a little further north than Baiae.

5. Noctem sideribus inlustrem et placido mari quietam quasi convincendum ad scelus di praebuere. Nec multum erat progressa navis, duobus e numero familiarium Agrippinam comitantibus, ex quis Crepereius Gallus haud procul gubernaculis adstabat, Acerronia super pedes cubitantis reclinis paenitentiam filii et recuperatam matris gratiam per gaudium memorabat, cum dato signo ruere tectum loci multo plumbo grave, pressusque Crepereius et statim exanimatus est. Agrippina et 10 Acerronia eminentibus lecti parietibus ac forte validioribus, quam ut oneri cederent, protectae sunt. Nec dissolutio navigii sequebatur, turbatis omnibus et quod plerique ignari etiam conscios impediabant. Visum dehinc remigibus unum in latus inclinare atque ita navem submergere: sed neque ipsis promptus in rem subitam consensus, et alii contra nitentes dedere facultatem lenioris in mare iactus. Verum Acerronia, imprudentia

17. adductus. The metaphor is taken from reining in a horse. Nero checked his boyish merriment for a moment to ask his mother's advice upon affairs of state.

18. oculis et pectori haerens. He kissed her eyes and breast.

5. 4. gubernaculis. II. 6, N. The party were upon the deck near the stern. Agrippina reclined upon a lectus or couch formed like a modern sofa, with back and ends (parietes), but so large that Acerronia, the maid of honour, could recline at her lady's feet. Over the place was a canopy or baldachino, with a roof like a dome, and weighted with lead.

6. gratiam. "Influence."

14. alii contra nitentes. The marines and sailors were not in the plot; when the oarsmen rushed to one side to sink the ship, they naturally hurried to the other, to save it and themselves. Still, the deck was brought so near the water-line that Agrippina was able to slip over the edge into the sea without making much noise.

15. imprudencia. "In her thoughtlessness." She supposed that every one would be eager to help the empress, not understanding that the wreck was designed to destroy her.

7. At Neroni nuntios patrati facinoris opperienti adfertur evasisse ictu levi sauciam et hactenus adito discrimine, ne auctor dubitaretur. Tum pavore exanimis et iam iamque adfore obtestans vindictae properam, sive servitia armaret vel militem accenderet, sive ad senatum et populum pervaderet, 5

Ille praetorianos toti Caesarum domui obstrictos memoresque Germanici nihil adversus progeniem eius atrox ausuros respondit: perpetraret Anicetus promissa. Qui nihil cunctatus poscit 15

6. 3. terrestre machinamentum. Such as the devices in theatres for stage effects, called tegmata. See § 3, N.

5. sensit. A word wanting in the MS. where it was absorbed by the preceding esse and following si.

7. fortuna ejus. "His own good luck." In the flattery of the times, the emperor's luck (Fortuna Augusti) was supposed to protect all that belonged to him.

9. sibi. Int. 19.

12. non per simulationem. She knew that Acerronia had made a will in her favour, and was anxious to secure her property. Agrippina was able to conceal her anger, grief, and fear, but her ruling passion, avarice, remained strong in death.

7. 2. hactenus adito discrimine. "The danger had gone just so far that there could be no doubt about its author."

Ne for ut non is rare in clauses of result. There is, perhaps, an ironical idea of purpose. "The affair seemed specially arranged to bring the blame upon Nero."

4. vindictae properam. "Speedy in her vengeance." Vindictae is genitive.

6. quod contra subsidium sibi? Esse is understood, being objurgatory question in indirect narration, and replacing the apodosis after armaret, etc. "If his mother should undertake these measures, what had he to rely upon?"

8. incertum an. "It is uncertain whether even before they were absolutely ignorant of the plot." The et strengthens the doubt.

11. hactenus promptius. Sc. egit. Seneca, the man of the court, was the first to act so far as this; he looked over his shoulder at Burrus, and asked him, etc. (XIII. 5, N.).

summam sceleris. Ad eam vocem Nero illo sibi die dari imperium auctoremque tanti muneris libertum profitetur: iret propere duceretque promptissimos ad iussa. Ipse audito venisse missu Agrippinae nuntium Agerinum, scaenam ultro criminis

Anicetus villam statione circumdat refractaque ianua obvios

Abeunte dehinc ancilla "tu quoque me deseris" prolocuta respicit Anicetum, trierarcho Herculeio et Obarito centurione classario comitatum: ac, si ad visendum venisset, refotam nuntiaret, sin facinus patraturus, nihil se de filio credere; non imperatum parricidium. illo sibi die dari imperium. Agrippina had pretended to make him emperor, while holding the power in her own hands; Burrus and Seneca were too scrupulous to keep him; it is to this freedman that he is really indebted.

19. scaenam ultro criminis parat. Agrippina had a just cause for accusing her son; but he prepares a false one on his side (ultro) against her, by the farce of dropping a dagger at her messenger's feet (XIII. 21, N.).

8. 2. mollum obiectus. The Lucrine lake was divided from the Bay of Naples by a sandbank a mile long. Tradition ascribed its origin to the work of Hercules. Agrippa, when building the Julian Port, added dykes and piers, portions of which are still visible under water.

adflixit. Iam in mortem centurioni ferrum destringenti protendens uterum “ventrem feri” exclamavit multisque vulneribus confecta est.

9. Haec consensu produntur. Aspexeritne matrem exanimem Nero et formam corporis eius laudaverit, sunt qui tradiderint, sunt qui abnuant. Cremata est nocte eadem conviviali lecto et exsequiis vilibus; neque, dum Nero rerum potiebatur, congesta aut clausa humus. Mox domesticorum cura 5 levem tumultum accepit, viam Miseni propter et villam Caesaris dictatoris, quae subiectos sinus editissima prospectat. Accenso rogo libertus eius cognomento Mnester ipse se ferro transegit, incertum caritate in patronam an metu exitii. Hunc sui finem multos ante annos crediderat Agrippina contempseratque. 10 Nam consulenti super Nerone responderunt Chaldaei fore ut imperaret matremque occideret; atque illa “occidat” inquit, “dum imperet.”

10. Sed a Caesare perfecto demum scelere magnitudo eius intellecta est. Reliquo noctis modo per silentium defixus, saepius pavore exsurgens et mentis inops lucem opperiebatur tamquam exitium adlaturam. Atque eum auctore Burro prima centurionum tribunorumque adulatio ad spem firmavit, prensan- 5 tium manum gratantiumque quod discrimen improvisum et matris facinus evasisset. Amici dehinc adire templa, et coepto exemplo proxima Campaniae municipia victimis et legationibus laetitiam testari: ipse diversa simulatione maestus et quasi

22. “ventrem feri.” According to Dion she bared her womb and cried:—“Strike this, for it bore a Nero.” Nero was born feet first, a delivery occasioning the greatest pain and danger to a mother, and regarded by the ancients as of evil augury.

9. 2. sunt qui tradiderint. Suetonius says that he laid his hands upon the body, praising some parts and finding fault with others. Feeling thirsty, he called for wine and drank. Dion adds his words:—“I did not know that I had so beautiful a mother.”

3. conviviali lecto. A banqueting couch, differing altogether in form from the conventional lectus funebris or bier, which was supported by two trestles for convenience in carrying. A hasty funeral was unseemly, except in the case of young children (XIII. 17, N.).

5. congesta aut clausa humus. The earth was not heaped in a mound, nor surrounded by an enclosure to separate it from the road, until Nero's death, ten years later. Ruins are still shown on the road to Bauli called the tomb of Agrippina, but Swinburne (Two Sicilies, III. 5) says that they are more like a theatre or hanging-garden than a tomb. The villa of Julius Caesar, like that of Lucullus (VI. 50, N.), overlooks the Bays of Naples and Caieta.

11. responderunt Chaldaei. The son of Thrasyllus (VI. 22).

10. 5. centurionum tribunorumque. Belonging to the praetorian cohorts which attended him.

8. municipia. Used indefinitely of towns inhabited by Roman citizens.

cum telo unum, qui cohortes et classes imperatoris perfringeret?
Ergo non iam Nero, cuius inmanitas omnium questus anteibat, sed Seneca adverso rumore erat, quod oratione tali confessionem 15 scripsisset.

12. Miro tamen certamine procerum decernuntur supplisucceeded. Julius Africanus, who came with a complimentary embassy from Gaul on this occasion, ingeniously observed:—"Rogant te, Caesar, Galliae tuae, ut tuam felicitatem fortiter feras." In Nero's address to the senate on the subject, written for him by Seneca, were the words:—"Salvum me esse adhuc nec credo nec gaudeo."

14. tumulo. It was stated in the last chapter that no mound was made, but this is used indefinitely of the grave. Nero never recovered from his dread of his mother's ghost. He saw it in his dreams, and endeavoured to propitiate it by magic rites (XV. 24, N.). The simple ablative of collibus and tumulo is poetical. Tacitus affects such forms in relating legends (Int. 28). See XI. 11, N.

17. conscientia. Ablative of cause. Agrippina had atoned by death for her privy to the plot.

11. 2. iuraturasque in—verba. I. 7, N.

4. donativum et congiarium. This would be a blow at soldiers and people (I. 11, N.); the viris inlustribus were the senators whom Agrippina had ruined.

6. ne. Int. 41.

7. gentibus externis. The Armenians (XIII. 5).

8. obliqua insectatione. XIII. 4, N.

9. Namque et naufragium narra-bat. "For he actually told the story of the shipwreck." The good genius of Rome (he said) had procured Agrippina's death, whom, though she had escaped the sea, "vengeance suffered not to live."

14. quod—confessionem scripsisset. Such an address was a mere confession of guilt; a rhetorician like Seneca should have made better work of it, people said.

12. 1. supplicationes. Thanksgivings.

An inscription records the sacrifice made at the Capitol on this occasion by the master of the Arval brothers, on 5th April.

2. pulvinaria. The couches on which the images of the gods were placed around loaded tables, to make them the guests of the city. The statues of the goddesses were placed on chairs instead (XIII. 16, N.). These solemnities were called lecti- sternia and sellisternia.

Quinquatrus. § 4, N.

3. ludis. Sc. scenicis. Gladiatorial games had already been held at the feast.

4. Minervae simulacrum. On her own feast-day she had protected the prince.

5. dies natalis Agrippinae. 6th November.

8. libertatis initium non praebuit.
 IV. 20, N.

9. inrita. "Without result." "Ἐπι-κούφῃς hic Tacitus," says Lipsius (VI.

22, N.). The evils of the historian's age gave him a despairing feeling that the gods were indifferent to good and ill deserts (XVI. 33).

Anguem enixa mulier. A similar prodigy occurred in the days of Sulla, when the snake (as was said) was thrown into a river and swam down stream.
 Agrippina certainly had a viper for a son, and it might have been better for herself and the world had she died on the night that she conceived him. Plutarch de sera numinum vindicta; in finem.

10. sol repente obscuratus. This eclipse (30th April A.D. 59) was observed in Campania between 1 and 2 P.M.; in Armenia between 4 and 5, as Pliny relates while commenting on the effects of the earth's rotundity.

11. regiones. The fourteen wards of Rome, marked out by Augustus.

15. Iuniam (Silanam).

13. 7. obvias tribus. III. 4, N.

8. festo cultu. With robes of state (I. 72, N.), garlands, and insignia of office.

9. spectaculorum gradus. "Rows of benches."

11. publici servitii victor. Generals of the republic had conquered foreign nations; Nero had crushed the moral sense of Rome. Every one was perfectly aware of his wickedness; the lampoons and pasquinades of the time proclaimed his matricide and incest.

14. 1. curriculo quadrigarum = quadrigae, a four-horse chariot.

2. ludicrum in modum. "Like an actor;" not as an amateur. He wore the minstrel's dress (a long embroidered tunic, and a cloak that covered his arms), and submitted to the ordinary regulations of the stage.

3. regium. Hiero, Themistocles, and Alcibiades had sent horses to the Greek games, and Hiero's victories were celebrated by the odes of Pindar.

5. talique ornatu. Apollo appeared in minstrel robes as Musagetes.

9. valle Vaticana. Between the Janiculum and Mons Vaticanus, where Agrippina Sr. had her gardens, her son Caligula built a circus and adorned it with an obelisk, which still stands before St. Peter's. Its original site was at the meta of the circus, where the sacristy of St. Peter's is now erected. It was at its foot that St. Peter and other martyrs suffered in Nero's reign, according to the Roman tradition. This was the place which Nero chose for his exhibitions, which were at first confined to invited guests (haud promisca spectacula).

14. nobilium familiarum posteros. Dio Cassius mentions the Furii, Fabii, Porcii, and Valerii (XIII. 18, N.). In posterorū egestate venales in scaenam deduxit; quos fato per- 15 functos ne nominatim tradam, maioribus eorum tribuendum puto. Nam et eius flagitium est, qui pecuniam ob delicta potius dedit quam ne delinquerent. Notos quoque equites Romanos operas arenae promittere subegit donis ingentibus, nisi quod merces ab eo qui iubere potest vim necessitatis 20 adfert.

15. Ne tamen adhuc publico theatro dehonestaretur, instituit ludos iuvenalium vocabulo, in quos passim nomina data.

modestia aut quicquam probi moris reservaretur. Postremum meditans adsistentibus phonascis. Accesserat cohors militum, 15 centuriones tribunique et maerens Burrus ac laudans. Tuncque anorum, aetate ac robore conspicui, et pars ingenio procaces, alii in spem potentiae. Ii dies ac noctes plausibus personare all, 400 senators and 600 equites appeared on the stage, the turf, and the arena.

16. ne—tradam. Int. 41.

17. Nam et. Besides his regard for their families, Tacitus spared these degenerate Romans, because their fault was rather the emperor's than their own.

20. nisi quod. An apology for the word donis. The equites were not bribed but forced.

15. 2. ludos iuvenalium vocabulo. They were instituted when Nero first shaved his beard. He dedicated the hairs to Jupiter Capitolinus in a golden box.

nomina data. "They volunteered."

5. feminae inlustres. Aelia Catella, an old lady of eighty, danced on this occasion.

6. apud nemus. Near the Janiculum (XII. 56, N.).

8. veno. "For sale."

stipes. The guests were presented by Nero with sums of money to spend in these places. Decent men were obliged to use the money, and rakes boastfully expended it.

15. phonascis. Voice-trainers. They always stood at Nero's side, guiding his accents and urging him to spare his throat.

17. equites Romani. These young men were commissioned as officers of 5000 trained claqueurs who led the applause (XVI. 5, N.).

20. deum vocabulis. They called him Apollo and Pythius. When he returned from Greece they shouted, "Hail, Olympic and Pythian victor! Augustus, Hercules, Apollo! Holy is thy voice; blessed the ears that hear thee." An article in the impeachment of Thræsea was, that he, a priest, had made no vows for the preservation of Nero's divine voice. It was in reality faint and husky (Suet. Nero, 20), though he wore leaden weights on his chest, purged, employed emetics, fasted, and adopted such other means as the trainers recommended. He really believed in his own powers, and exclaimed in the hour of death, "What an artist the world is losing in me!"

quasi per virtutem. The flatterers received the rewards due to great men.

16. 3. nec dum insignis—erat. He sought the rising poets, who would not venture to eclipse his own verses, or boast of the assistance that they gave.

Hi cenati. Haase's conjecture; the MS. is unintelligible.

6. nec ore uno. They do not seem to come from one man's lips. Suetonius, who possessed autograph poems of Nero's, argued their originality from the manifest erasures and interlineations. A few scattered lines which have reached our own time show the grace and ingenuity of a silver-age poet.

8. utque—frueretur. To enjoy the fun of a fight among the philosophers. Tiberius used to amuse himself by pitting grammarians against each other.

9. ore vultuque tristi. The busts of Seneca display an affected disorder and melancholy which appear theatrical in the millionaire moralist.

17. 3. rettuli. In a lost book.

4. oppidana lascivia. "With the lawlessness of a provincial town." Scrawled inscriptions at Pompeii bear witness to the spiteful hate which the people bore towards the Nucerians.

5. sumpsere. Understand jecere by zeugma with probra and saxa.

6. deportati sunt in urbem. To Rome, in order to excite compassion, and to bear witness before the senate.

18. Motus senatu et Pedius Blaesus, accusantibus Cyrenensibus violatum ab eo thesaurum Aesculapii dilectumque militarem pretio et ambitione corruptum. Idem Cyrenenses reum agebant Acilium Strabonem, praetoria potestate usum et missum disceptatorem a Claudio agrorum, quos regis Apionis quondam 5 avitos et populo Romano cum regno relictos proximus quisque possessor invaserant, diutinaque licentia et iniuria quasi iure et aequo nitebantur. Igitur abiudicatis agris orta adversus iudicem invidia; et senatus ignota sibi esse mandata Claudii et consulendum principem respondit. Nero probata Strabonis 10 sententia, se nihilo minus subvenire sociis et usurpata concedere rescripsit.

A.U.C. 813.
A.D. 60.

10. publice. "As a city." They were forbidden their usual gladiatorial shows.

11. collegia. Guilds, or private corporations, formed by individuals without proper sanction, and promoting seditious measures. The Romans looked with great distrust upon secret societies of every kind.

18. 2. violatum. Sc. esse. The accusative and infinitive with accuso is ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

3. pretio et ambitione corruptum. He had excused men from military service for fees and favour, while governing Crete and Cyrene as propraetor of the senate.

7. diutinaque licentia. The royal land had, upon its cession by Apion's will in B.C. 96, become ager publicus of the Roman people. As no use had been made of it, the neighbouring proprietors had established a claim to it by prescription through a period of 154 years. On the principle, however, that nullum tempus occurrit reipublicae, Claudius had laid claim to the territory.

8. abjudicatis. "Adjudged away from the occupants."

19. 4. celebra. Used for celeber, as in II. 88.

quam clariorem effecit. Servilius made his life more famous than Afer's by rivalling his abilities and surpassing his morals.

20. 1. quinquennale ludicrum. It consisted of literary, gymnastic, and equestrian contests. Nero entered for the prize of Latin oratory and poetry, which was of course awarded to him.

4. Gn. quoque Pompeium incusatum. VI. 45, N.

5 quod mansuram theatri sedem posuisset. Nam antea subitariis gradibus et scaena in tempus structa ludos edi solitos, vel si vetustiora repetas, stantem populum spectavisse, ne, si consi-deret theatro, dies totos ignavia continuaret. Spectaculorum quidem antiquitas servaretur, quoties praetores ederent, nulla 10 cuiquam civium necessitate certandi. Ceterum abolitos paulatim patrios mores funditus everti per accitam lasciviam, ut quod usquam corrumpi et corrumpere queat, in urbe visatur, degeneretque studiis externis iuventus, gymnasia et otia et turpes amores exercendo, principe et senatu auctoribus, qui non modo 15 licentiam vitiis permiserint, sed vim adhibeant, ut proceres Romani specie orationum et carminum scaena polluantur. Quid superesse, nisi ut corpora quoque nudent et caestus adsumant easque pugnas pro militia et armis meditentur? An iustitiam auctum iri et decurias equitum egregium iudicandi munus ex-20 pleturas, si fractos sonos et dulcedinem vocum perite audissent?
Noctes quoque dedecori adiectas, ne quod tempus pudori relinquatur, sed coetu promisco, quod perditissimus quisque per diem concupiverit, per tenebras audeat.

21. Pluribus ipsa licentia placebat, ac tamen honesta nomina praetendebant. Maiores quoque non abhorruisse spectaculorum

7. stantem populum spectavisse. P. Cornelius Scipio Nascica Corculum, during his second consulship, B.C. 155, destroyed a theatre which had been erected, and compelled the people to stand at shows.

8. theatro. Sc. in.

Spectaculorum—antiquitas. "The old-fashioned games" of the circus.

9. praetores. To whom the charge of the games was entrusted under the empire, as a compensation for their general loss of power. Quaestors had previously held it.

11. ut—visatur. The imaginary soli-loquy of a patriotic Roman in Nero's day.

16. specie orationum et carminum. The competition into which Nero had entered with the nobles.

19. decurias equitum. The body of judices (XI. 22, N.) was chiefly recruited from the equites. Under Augustus they were divided into four decuriae, each of a thousand men. Caligula added a fifth on account of the pressure of judicial business.

20. fractos sonos. Languishing melodies.

21. 3. pro fortuna quae tum erat. "In proportion to the resources of those days."

a Tuscis accitos histriones. A pestilence occurred at Rome in B.C. 364. Games, consisting of dancers and pipers from Etruria, were celebrated to appease the gods and divert the minds of the people.

4. a Thuriis. Sybaris, whose exiled citizens founded Thurii sixty-seven years after the destruction of their home, was famous for its 5000 knights.

Achaia and Corinth were reduced by L. Mummius in 146 B.C. He triumphed in the next year. Asia Minor was made a province after the capture of Aristonicus and reduction of Pergamum in 129.

Asiaque ludos curatius editos, nec quemquam Romae honesto 5 mentum ingeniis adlaturas; nec cuiquam iudici grave aures studiis honestis et voluptatibus concessis impertire. Laetitiae 15 quibus tanta luce ignium nihil illicitum occultari queat. Sane nullo insigni dehonestamento id spectaculum transiit. Ac ne fulguris. Nam quia discumbentis Neronis apud Simbruina

6. ducentis—annis. A round number for 204.

10. magistratus. In A.D. 47 Dolabella carried a law which compelled candidates for the quaestorship to entertain the people with games at their private expense. The act was repealed in 54 (XIII. 5), but fashion still exacted the expenditure.

19. studia plebis. I. 54, N.

redditi quamquam scaenae. They had been banished in 56. See XIII. 25.

20. certaminibus sacris. The Grecian contests were matters of religion, and were only open to the free born.

21. primas. Sc. partes. "The first prize."

22. Graeci amictus. On such occasions Nero affected the Greek dress (II. 59, N.), and was imitated by his courtiers. As soon as the games were over the fashion ceased; exoleverant is used as an aorist to express immediate consecution.

22. 1. sidus cometes. It appeared in the north, crossed the sky towards the south-west, and then receded from sight, after remaining visible for six months. Cf. XV. 47, N.

4. ex Julia familia. Being the granddaughter of Tiberius, who was Julian by adoption.

 10 que disiecta erat, idque finibus Tiburtum acciderat, unde paterna Plauto origo, hunc illum numine deum destinari credebant, fovebantque multi, quibus nova et ancipitia praecolere avida et plerumque fallax ambitio est. Ergo permotus his Nero com-ponit ad Plautum literas, consuleret quieti urbis seque prava 15 diffamantibus subtraheret: esse illi per Asiam avitos agros, in quibus tuta et inturbida iuventa frueretur. Ita illuc cum coniuge Antistia et paucis familiarium concessit.

9. ictae dapes. A cup was dashed from Nero's lips by the stroke.

12. praecolere. "To pay court before the time."

19. aquae Marciae. Its sources were in the valley of the Anio, thirty-six miles from Rome; but the length of the structure, with its tunnels and arches, was sixty-two miles. The head was sufficient to supply the Capitoline Hill. Q. Marcius Rex constructed the aqueduct in B.C. 144. The water was the coldest and the clearest in the city, and was much sought by bathers and fullers.

20. potus sacros. Fountain heads were consecrated to the nymphs. It appears that the priests attached peculiar sanctity to the sources of aqueducts for sanitary reasons, in the same way that the sacred law forbade intra-mural interment.

23. 1. post deleta Artaxata. XIII. 41. In the following chapters Tacitus describes Corbulo's campaigns in the years 59 and 60.

12. igni exurit. This plan of smoking out an enemy is mentioned by Tacitus with approval. The French in Algiers aroused the indignation of Europe by employing the same means against the Arabs in modern times.

13. praegredientem. "Marching past."

Parthi Hyrcano bello distinebantur. Miserantque Hyrcani ad 5 pro pignore amicitiae ostentantes. Eos regredientes Corbulo, ne Euphraten transgressi hostium custodiis circumvenirentur, dato praesidio ad litora maris rubri deduxit, unde vitatis Parthorum finibus patrias in sedes remeare quieti. 10

26. Tiridaten per Medos extrema Armeniae intrantem,

24. 2. carne pecudum. Troops deprived of farinaceous and vegetable food become painfully lean. This difficulty was experienced by some of the English troops in the Zulu campaign of 1879, when they were compelled to subsist upon their draught oxen.

4. ducis patientia. Juvenal speaks in jest of a burden which "even Corbulo could not bear" (Sat. III. 251).

10. non ignobilis barbarus. A megistan. His head was cut off and thrown by a ballista into the enemy's camp, where it landed among the chiefs, engaged in a council of war.

13. Tigranocerta. 1st decl., fem., abl.

14. coronam auream. II. 57, N.

25. 1. praesidium. "Castle."

3. aggeri. The mound raised by the besiegers.

9. ad litora maris rubri. The Romans apparently commanded the caravan track down the west bank of the Euphrates. At the head of the Persian Gulf (mare rubrum) the ambassadors took ship, and returned to their homes by the Indian Ocean and the river Indus (Rawlinson).

26. 1. per Medos. Media Atropatene.

legionibus citis. "In light marching order." Ablative of military accompaniment.

7. regis Archelai nepos. More properly pronepos, but the words are sometimes exchanged. The descent is as follows (from Frost):—

Herod the Great m. Mariamne.

12. alae. I. 49, N.

13. pars—iussae sunt. Constructio ad sensum. The Romans were pursuing their regular foreign policy of dividing in order to control. There could be no national Armenian rising against the Cappadocian prince, and every neighbouring king had an interest in the exclusion of the Parthians.

15. morte Ummidii legati vacuum. Ummidius Quadratus died in A.D. 55, and meanwhile Syria had been nominally administered by P. Anteius, a protegé of Agrippina, whom Nero would not allow to visit his province.

27. 2. propriis opibus revaluit. In 17 A.D. Tiberius had given state assistance to cities of Asia injured by an earthquake (II. 47).

4. cognomentum. It was called colonia Claudia Neronensis Puteolana.

6. pluribus. "Most" of them preferred to return to the provinces, which had been their homes for so many years. The legal period of service was twenty years, but this was often unjustly extended (I. 17, N.).

7. neque conjugis suscipiendis. A soldier could not contract a lawful marriage. A previous marriage was annulled by the fact of enlistment.

legiones deducebantur cum tribunis et centurionibus et sui cuiusque ordinis militibus, ut consensu et caritate rem publicam 10 efficerent, sed ignoti inter se, diversis manipulis, sine rectore, sine adfectibus mutuis, quasi ex alio genere mortalium repente in unum collecti, numerus magis quam colonia.

28. Comitia praetorum arbitrio senatus haberi solita, quoniam acriore ambitu exarserant, princeps composuit, tris, qui supra numerum petebant, legioni praeficiendo. Auxitque patrum honorem statuendo ut, qui a privatis iudiciis ad senatum provocavissent, eiusdem pecuniae periculum facerent cuius ii 5 qui imperatorem appellarent; nam antea vacuum id solutumque poena fuerat. Fine anni Vibius Secundus eques Romanus accusantibus Mauris repetundarum damnatur atque Italia exigitur, ne graviore poena adficeretur, Vibii Crispi fratris opibus enisus. 10

29. Caesennio Paeto et Petronio Turpiliano consulibus gravis clades in Britannia accepta, in qua neque A. Didius legatus, ut memoravi, nisi parta retinuerat, et successor Veranius modicis excursibus Siluras populatus, quin ultra bellum proferret, morte prohibitus est, magna, dum vixit, severitatis fama, 5 supremis testamenti verbis ambitionis manifestus: quippe multa in Neronem adulatione addidit subiecturum ei provinciam fuisse, si biennio proximo vixisset. Sed tum Paulinus Suetonius obtinebat Britannos, scientia militiae et rumore populi, qui neminem sine aemulo sinit, Corbulonis concertator, receptaeque 10

9. sui cuiusque ordinis. "Each in his own century." Suus quisque is used by Cicero, Caesar, and Livy in this same way, as a compound word.

28. 1. Comitia praetorum. Since A.D. 14 these elections were held in the senate. The emperor made the nominations, and if he made more than there were places to be filled, the senate had a little free choice, which was abused on this occasion. See I. 15, and N.

3. legioni praeficiendo. The position of legatus legionis (I. 44, N.) was in the regular course of political advancement, and was held either before or after the praetorship; so that the candidates who were now sent directly to the army would not, in the long run, fall behind the others in the race for honours.

4. qui—provocavissent. An appeal to the emperor in civil cases required the appellant to give cognizance in one-third of the amount contended for. This was forfeited if he failed to gain his case. The same rule was now applied in appeals to the senate.

7. eques Romanus. He was procurator of one of the Mauretanian provinces (IV. 15, N.).

8. repetundarum. I. 74, N. Secundus had been guilty of very black injustice, for he feared deportatio.

9. ne—adficeretur. Int. 41.

10 stitionibus sacri: nam cruore captivo adolere aras et hominum fibris consulere deos fas habebant. Haec agenti Suetonio repentina defectio provinciae nuntiatur.

31. Rex Icenorum Prasutagus, longa opulentia clarus, Caesarem heredem duasque filias scripserat, tali obsequio ratus regnumque et domum suam procul iniuria fore. Quod contra vertit, adeo ut regnum per centuriones, domus per servos velut

13. breve. "Shoal."

15. adnantes equis. When the horses lost their footing the men slipped off and swam at their side. The Menai Strait at Bangor is half a mile wide. When Edward I. attacked the island in A.D. 1282, a body of men swam across, but were routed by the Welsh. All were lost except the leader, whose horse swam back with him.

30. 1. Stabat pro litore. I. 25, N. Stabat Drusus.

diversa. "Hostile."

2. veste ferali. The people of the Cassiterides, according to Strabo, dressed in black. These women were the priestesses who had been collected from all sides to Anglesey, the last refuge of the national worship.

3. faces praeferebant. Livy mentions two instances in which the Etruscans employed the same means to create a panic; in both cases they failed to overcome Roman coolness.

9. excisique luci. The sacred oak groves where the Druids offered human sacrifices on stone altars, or burned living men enclosed in huge wicker images. Tiberius checked these practices in Gaul, and Claudius in the Roman part of Britain.

31. 1. longa. "Inherited."

4. centuriones—servos. The centurions, as representatives of Paulinus the legatus pro praetore, levied the troops which were required for Roman service; the slaves and freedmen were fiscal agents of Cato Decianus, the procurator rationalis (IV. 15, N.).

7. quasi—accepissent. The subject is Romani understood. Nipperdey considers the clause an interpolation, on account of its awkwardness. An important element in causing the revolt was exuuntur, et propinqui regis inter mancipia habebantur. Qua contumelia et metu graviorum, quando in formam provinciae cesserant, rapiunt arma, commotis ad rebellionem Trinobantibus et qui alii nondum servitio fracti resumere libertatem occultis coniurationibus pepigerant, acerrimo in veteranos odio. Quippe in coloniam Camulodunum recens deducti pellebant domibus, exturbabant agris, captivos, servos appellando, fovebant in potentiam veteranorum militibus similitudine vitae et spe eiusdem licentiae. Ad hoc templum divo Claudio constitutum quasi arx aeternae dominationis aspiciebatur, delectique sacerdotes specie religionis omnis fortunas effundebant. Nec arduum videbatur excindere coloniam nullis munimentis saeptam; quod ducibus nostris parum provisum erat, dum amoenitati prius quam usui consulitur.

32. Inter quae nulla palam causa delapsam Camuloduni simulacrum Victoriae ac retro conversum, quasi cederet hostibus. Et feminae in furorem turbatae adesse exitium canebant, externosque fremitus in curia eorum auditos; consonuisse ululatibus theatrum visamque speciem in aestuario Tamesae subversae coloniae: iam Oceanus cruento aspectu, dilabente aestu humanorum corporum effigies relictæ, ut Britannis ad spem, ita veteranis ad metum trahebantur. Sed quia procul Suetonius aberat, petivere a Cato Deciano procuratore auxilium. Ille haud amplius quam ducentos sine iustis armis misit; et inerat modica militum manus. Tutela templi freti, et impredientibus qui occulti rebellionis conscii consilia turbabant, neque fossam aut vallum praeduxerunt, neque motis senibus et feminis iuventus sola restitit: quasi media pace incauti multitudine barbarorum circumveniuntur. Et cetera quidem impetu direpta aut incensa sunt: templum, in quo se miles conglobaverat, biduo obsessum the avarice of Seneca, who distressed Roman Britain by calling in his large loans (III. 40, N.).

32. 3. feminae—turbatae. In prophetic frenzy. See Tennyson's Boadicea. In the account of Dio Cassius, the sound which came from the Curia (at Camulodunum this meant the hall where the decuriones assembled) by night was the murmur of barbarous words with shouts of laughter; the appearance in the estuary of the Thames (thirty miles from Colchester) was that of houses far under water.

6. Oceanus. In the straits of Dover.

cruento aspectu. A phenomenon sometimes occasioned by infusoria.

7. effigies. "What looked like."

10. sine iustis armis. They were provincial militia—auxilia.

11. Tutela templi. Called in the preceding chapter arx, and probably surrounded by a strong enclosure.

expugnatumque. Et victor Britannus Petilio Ceriali legato legionis nonae in subsidium adventanti obvius fudit legionem, et quod peditum interfecit: Cerialis cum equitibus evasit in 20 castra et munimentis defensus est. Qua clade et odiis provinciae, quam avaritia eius in bellum egerat, trepidus procurator Catus in Galliam transiit.

33. At Suetonius mira constantia medios inter hostes Londinium perrexit, cognomento quidem coloniae non insigne, sed copia negotiatorum et commeatum maxime celebre. Ibi ambiguus an illam sedem bello deligeret, circumspecta infre-
 5 quentia militis, satisque magnis documentis temeritatem Petilii coercitam, unius oppidi damno servare universa statuit. Neque fletu et lacrimis auxilium eius orantium flexus est quin daret profectionis signum et comitantes in partem agminis acciperet: si quos inbellis sexus aut fessa aetas vel loci dulcedo attinuerat, Eadem clades municipio Verulamio fuit, quia barbari omissis castellis praesidiisque militarium, quod uberrimum spoliandi et defendentibus intutum, laeti praeda et aliorum segnes petebant. 33. 2. coloniae. Military colonies like Camulodunum or Cologne were usually established on the frontiers, as garrisons for the country (XII. 27, N.).

levis circum armatura, conglobatus pro cornibus eques adstitit. At Britannorum copiae passim per catervas et turmas exsultabant, quanta non alias multitudo, et animo adeo feroci, ut coniuges quoque testes victoriae secum traherent plaustisque 10 inponerent, quae super extremum ambitum campi posuerant.

35. Boudicca curru filias prae se vehens, ut quamque nationem accesserat, solitum quidem Britannis feminarum ductu bellare testabatur, sed tunc non ut tantis maioribus ortam regnum et opes, verum ut unam e vulgo libertatem amissam, confectum verberibus corpus, contrectatam filiarum pudicitiam 5 ulcisci. Eo provectas Romanorum cupidines, ut non corpora, ne senectam quidem aut virginitatem inpollutam relinquant. Adesse tamen deos iustae vindictae: cecidisse legionem quae proelium ausa sit; ceteros castris occultari aut fugam circumspicere. Ne strepitum quidem et clamorem tot milium, nedum 10 impetus et manus perlaturus: si copias armatorum, si causas belli secum expenderent, vincendum illa acie vel cadendum esse. Id mulieri destinatum: viverent viri et servirent.

36. Ne Suetonius quidem in tanto discrimine silebat. Quamquam confideret virtuti, tamen exhortationes et preces miscebat, ut spernerent sonores barbarorum et inanes minas: plus illic feminarum quam iuventutis aspici. Inbelles inermes cessuros statim, ubi ferrum virtutemque vincentium toties fusi 5 adgnosissent. Etiam in multis legionibus paucos, qui proelia profligarent; gloriaeque eorum accessurum quod modica manus universi exercitus famam adipiscerentur. Conferti tantum et pilis emissis, post umbonibus et gladiis stragem caedemque

7. levis circum armatura. "On both sides."

8. per catervas et turmas. An expression which denotes cavalry. Tacitus says elsewhere (Agric. 12) that the strength of the Britons was in their infantry, but that some tribes fought from chariots.

9. quanta non alias multitudo. According to Dio Cassius, 120,000 men.

35. 2. feminarum ductu. Tacitus repeats this in Agric. 16. Salic laws were German.

4. opes. § 31, "Rex Icenorum Prasutagus, longa opulentia clarus."

8. legionem. Nonam (§ 32).

9. ceteros. The second legion, kept from the battle by its terrified commander (§ 37).

10. tot milium. The numbers of the British had risen from 120,000 to 130,000.

36. 3. sonores. Used in the sense of war shouts, as in I. 65 and IV. 48. The barbarians advanced, says Dion, with much shouting, and with threatening songs; the Romans preserved silence and order until the enemy came within pilum shot.

4. feminarum. The women in the waggons.

5. vincentium. "Of their conquerors."

6. paucos, qui proelia profligarent. Only the men in the front ranks of a great army do the actual fighting.

10 continuarent, praedae inmemores: parta victoria cuncta ipsa iis cessura. Is ardor verba ducis sequebatur, ita se ad intorquenda pila expedierat vetus miles et multa proeliorum experientia, ut certus eventus Suetonius daret pugnae signum.

37. Ac primum legio gradu inmota et angustias loci pro munimento retinens, postquam in propius suggressos hostis certo iactu tela exhauserat, velut cuneo erupit. Idem auxilia-rium impetus; et eques protentis hastis perfringit quod obvium 5 et validum erat. Ceteri terga praebuere, difficili effugio, quia circumiecta vehicula saepserant abitus. Et miles ne mulierum quidem neci temperabat, confixaque telis etiam iumenta cor-porum cumulum auxerant. Clara et antiquis victoriis par ea die laus parta: quippe sunt qui paulo minus quam octoginta 10 milia Britannorum cecidisse tradant, militum quadringentis ferme interfectis nec multo amplius vulneratis. Boudicca vitam veneno finivit. Et Poenius Postumus praefectus castrorum secundae legionis, cognitis quartadecumanorum vicesimanorumque prosperis rebus, quia pari gloria legionem suam fraudaverat 15 abnueratque contra ritum militiae iussa ducis, se ipse gladio transegit.

38. Contractus deinde omnis exercitus sub pellibus habitus est ad reliqua belli perpetranda. Auxitque copias Caesar missis ex Germania duobus legionariorum milibus, octo auxilium cohortibus ac mille equitibus, quorum adventu nonani legionario 5 milite suppleti sunt. Cohortes alaeque novis hibernaculis locatae, quodque nationum ambiguum aut adversum fuerat, igni atque ferro vastatur. Sed nihil aeque quam fames adfligebat serendis frugibus incuriosos, et omni aetate ad bellum versa, dum nostros commeatus sibi destinant. Gentesque praeferoces

12. expedierat. "Had made ready to."

37. 1. angustias loci. The artae fauces of § 34.

2. hostis — exhauserat. The barbarians, surging on, soon gave the Romans opportunity to use up their pila at short range.

3. velut cuneo. The line of the Britons filled the plain. The small body of the Romans, sallying from the pass, broke into the middle of their ranks like a wedge.

8. auxerant. And soon the dead beasts had begun to block the way. A conative pluperfect, after the analogy of a conative imperfect. Cf. I. 63, "auxerant consternationem," a poetical construction.

12. praefectus castrorum. I. 20, N.

13. secundae legionis. Augustae.

38. 1. sub pellibus. I. 16, N.

3. octo auxilium cohortibus. I. 36, N. They were Batavians, and are afterwards mentioned in the Histories.

4. nonani. Lost under Cerialis (§ 32).

5. alaeque. The thousand cavalry formed two alae quingenariae (I. 49, N.). As new comers, they were excused the severer duty, and sent into winter quarters.

tardius ad pacem inclinabant, quia Iulius Classicianus successor 10 Cato missus et Suetonio discors bonum publicum privatis simultatibus impediēbat disperseratque novum legatum opperiendum esse, sine hostili ira et superbia victoris clementer deditis con-sulturum. Simul in urbem mandabat, nullum proeliorum finem exspectarent, nisi succederetur Suetonio, cuius adversa pravitati 15 ipsius, prospera ad fortunam referebat.

39. Igitur ad spectandum Britanniae statum missus est e libertis Polyclitus, magna Neronis spe posse auctoritate eius non modo inter legatum procuratoremque concordiam gigni, sed et rebelles barbarum. Animos pace componi. Nec defuit Polyclitus quo minus ingenti agmine Italiae Galliaeque gravis, 5 postquam Oceanum transmiserat, militibus quoque nostris terri-bilis incederet. Sed hostibus inrisui fuit, apud quos flagrante etiam tum libertate nondum cognita libertinorum potentia erat ; mirabanturque quod dux et exercitus tanti belli confector servitiis oboedirent. Cuncta tamen ad imperatorem in mollius 10 relata ; detentusque rebus gerundis Suetonius, quod postea paucas naves in litore remigiumque in iis amiserat, tamquam durante bello, tradere exercitum Petronio Turpiliano, qui iam consulatu abierat, iubetur. Is non inritato hoste neque laces-situs honestum pacis nomen segni otio imposuit. 15

40. Eodem anno Romae insignia scelera, alterum senatoris, servili alterum audacia, admissa sunt. Domitius Balbus erat praetorius, simul longa senecta, simul orbitate et pecunia insidiis obnoxius. Ei propinquus Valerius Fabianus, capessendis honoribus destinatus, subdidit testamentum adscitis Vinicio 5 Rufino et Terentio Lentino equitibus Romanis. Illi Antonium

11. Cato (Declano).

39. 4. barbarum. Contracted for barbarorum.

10. in mollius relata. "He made light of everything." "The danger had not been so great, after all," he said, "nor was there need of such severity towards the Britons." The freedman naturally sided with the procurator, who was a man of his own class.

11. rebus gerundis. Dative of end.
Classicianus and Polyclitus had not influence enough to remove Suetonius wholly without cause, so he was kept in office until a trifling excuse could be found.

12. amiserat. It is not stated whether the ships were lost by wreck, or in battle with the enemy. Doederlein supposes the latter, as it gave an excuse for what follows.

tamquam durante bello. Suetonius after his complete victory is insulted by the supposition that another man is needed to conclude the war.

40. 1. senatoris. Used in a broad sense. Valerius Fabianus, as is shown by the words capessendis honoribus destinatus, had not yet been quaestor or made senator, but was a candidate for such advancement, senatorii ordinis (XIII. 25, N.).

Primum et Asinium Marcellum sociaverant. Antonius audacia promptus, Marcellus Asinio Pollione proavo clarus. neque morum spernendus habebatur, nisi quod paupertatem praecipuum malorum credebat. Igitur Fabianus tabulas adscitis quos memoravi et aliis minus inlustribus obsignat. Quod apud patres convictum, et Fabianus Antoniusque cum Rufino et Terentio lege Cornelia damnantur. Marcellum memoria maiorum et preces Caesaris poenae magis quam infamiae exemere.

41. Perculit is dies Pompeium quoque Aelianum, iuvenem quaestorium, tamquam flagitiorum Fabiani gnarum, eique Italia et Hispania, in qua ortus erat, interdictum est. Pari ignominia Valerius Ponticus adfcitur, quod reos, ne apud praefectum urbis arguerentur, ad praetorem detulisset, interim specie legum, mox praevaricando ultionem elusurus. Additur senatus consulto, qui talem operam emptitasset vendidissetve, perinde poena teneretur ac publico iudicio calumniae condemnatus.

42. Haud multo post praefectum urbis Pedanium Secundum servus ipsius interfecit, seu negata libertate, cui pretium pepigerat, sive amore exoleti incensus et dominum aemulum non

11. allis minus inlustribus. A will required seven witnesses.

12. lege Cornelia. Passed by Sulla, B.C. 81. The penalty was deportatio (IV. 31, N.). Pompeius Aelianus, mentioned in the next chapter, is sentenced to the milder relegatio.

41. 3. Hispania, in qua ortus erat. From its subjection by the great Pompey, Spain preserved his name in many of its chief families, which had been his clients. In the same way, Julius was a common Gallic name (III. 40, N.).

4. reos. The non-senatorial accomplices of Valerius Fabianus, whose trial for forgery did not come under the cognizance of the senate (IV. 22, N.).

5. ad praetorem detulisset. A case could not be brought before two courts at once. Ponticus, by indicting the accused before the praetor, prevented the more summary action of the prefect (VI. 11, N.), and gained time, as he supposed, to put a stop to the proceeding by legal technicalities.

interim. "For a time."

6. Additur senatus consulto. i.e. to the vote by which Fabianus and his senatorial accomplices were condemned. It was known as the senatus consultum

Turpilianum, from the name of the presiding consul, which shows that it was passed before March 1st, when a suffect consul was appointed.

8. calumniae. "False accusation." In criminal proceedings, punished by deportatio, relegatio, or ordinis amissio; in civil proceedings, by a fine of one-fourth or one-tenth of the sum contested for in the original suit. Orelli quotes from the Digest, 48, 16, "Calumniari est falsa crimina intendere; praevaricari vera crimina abscondere; tergiversari in universum ab accusatione desistere."

42. 2. cui pretium pepigerat. Slaves could legally hold no property, but were allowed by usage to collect what was called their peculium. With this they were frequently allowed to purchase their freedom, and a price was set beforehand, though this bargain did not bind the master. In the times of Hermogenianus (a law writer under Constantine), slaves were allowed legal redress on such occasions, for by that time Christianity had ameliorated slavery. This story of Tacitus is perhaps the first record of the power exerted by the increasing ideas of humanity, working upward from the lower classes of society.

tolerans. Ceterum cum vetere ex more familiam omnem, quae sub eodem tecto mansitaverat, ad supplicium agi oporteret, concursu plebis, quae tot innoxios protegebat, usque ad seditionem ventum est senatusque obsessus, in quo ipso erant studia nimiam severitatem aspernantium, pluribus nihil mutandum censentibus. Ex quis C. Cassius sententiae loco in hunc modum disseruit :

43. "Saepe numero, patres conscripti, in hoc ordine interfui, cum contra instituta et leges maiorum nova senatus decreta postularentur; neque sum adversatus, non quia dubitarem super omnibus negotiis melius atque rectius olim provisum et quae converterentur in deterius mutari, sed ne nimio amore antiqui moris studium meum extollere viderer. Simul quidquid hoc in nobis auctoritatis est, crebris contradictionibus destruendum non existimabam, ut maneret integrum, si quando res publica consiliis eguisset. Quod hodie evenit, consulari viro domi suae interfecto per insidias serviles, quas nemo prohibuit aut prodidit quamvis nondum concusso senatus consulto, quod supplicium toti familiae minitabatur. Decernite hercule impunitatem: at quem dignitas sua defendet, cum praefectura urbis non profuerit? Quem numerus servorum tuebitur, cum Pedanium Secundum quadringenti non protexerint? Cui familia opem feret, quae ne in metu quidem pericula nostra advertit? An, ut quidam fingere non erubescunt, iniurias suas ultus est interfecto, quia de paterna pecunia transegerat aut avitum mancipium detrahebatur? Pronuntiemus ultro dominum iure caesum videri.

Civitati grande desiderium eius mansit per memoriam virtutis et successorum alterius segnem innocentiam, alterius flagrantissima flagitia. Quippe Caesar duos praetoriis cohortibus imposuerat, Faenium Rufum ex vulgi favore, quia rem frumentariam sine quaestu tractabat, Sofonium Tigellinum, veterem inpudicitiam atque infamiam in eo secutus. Atque illi pro cognitis moribus fuere. Validior Tigellinus in animo principis et intimis libidinibus adsumptus, prospera populi et militum fama Rufus, quod apud Neronem adversum experiebatur. 10 15

9. una. Named Pythias. She spat in the face of Tigellinus as she spoke.

11. civilis discidii specie. If the story of adultery had been true, the empress would have been guilty of high treason, and her goods liable to confiscation (III. 50, N.). Nero did not dare to go so far as this. He made the divorce a civil one, on the ground of sterility, which allowed the wife to reclaim her dower. In satisfaction of this claim she was given the house of Burrus (probably bequeathed to Nero), and the estates of Plautus, which had been confiscated.

15. His Nero, tamquam. Another confused place in the MSS. (which are all from one original). There is some particular reason for the accumulation of errors in a single portion of the work. A sleepy half-hour on the part of a transcriber may have occasioned difficulties for generations of editors.

conjugem. "As his wife."

61. 1. tandem. At length, after months and years of horror, the people break into unfeigned thanksgiving.

4. repetitum venerantium. Another break in the MSS. Ritter supposed the words to have been inserted as an explanation (= thanking him for the recall) by an ignorant copyist.

Iuliae. Julia, the daughter of Germanicus, was banished at the age of 23, which does not agree with aetatis robur. The reference is perhaps to Julia, the daughter of Drusus, who was put to death by Messalina A.D. 44, aged about 39, and who was probably banished first, like the other princesses.

11. ancilla. Acte.

12. Poppaea—nupta. Within sixteen days after the divorce.

64. 1. vicesimo aetatis anno. This is a mistake of Tacitus or his copyist. Octavia was 22 or 23 years old.

1. Interea rex Parthorum Vologeses cognitis Corbulonis rebus regemque alienigenam Tigranen Armeniae impositum, simul fratre Tiridate pulso spretum Arsacidarum fastigium ire ultum volens, magnitudine rursum Romana et continui foederis reverentia diversas ad curas trahebatur, cunctator ingenio et defectione Hyrcanorum, gentis validae, multisque ex eo bellis inligatus. Atque illum ambiguum novus insuper nuntius contumeliae exstimulat: quippe egressus Armenia Tigranes Adiabenos, conterminam nationem, latius ac diutius quam per latrocinia vastaverat, idque primores gentium aegre tolerabant: eo contemptum descensum, ut ne duce quidem Romano incursarentur, sed temeritate obsidis tot per annos inter mancipia habiti. Ac-

1. 1. Interea. Tacitus here goes back to the year 61 A.D., carrying on the connected story of the East from XIV. 26.

4. continui foederis. In spite of continual jealousy between Rome and Parthia, the peace had prevailed since B.C. 20, when Tiberius, under the direction of Augustus, had settled an earlier Tigranes on the Armenian throne, and a treaty was made between the two empires, subsequently ratified by C. Caesar in A.D. 1, and by Germanicus in 18.

6. defectione Hyrcanorum. XIII. 37; XIV. 25.

11. ne duce quidem Romano. Tigranes had been put on the throne at first by Verulanus Severus, but was now making war on his own account.

12. obsidis. Used contemptuously but truthfully of Tigranes. XIV. 26, "Usque ad servilem patientiam demissus."

cendebat dolorem eorum Monobazus, quem penes Adiabenum regimen, quod praesidium aut unde peteret rogicans. Iam de 15 Armenia concessum, proxima trahi; et nisi defendant Parthi, levius servitium apud Romanos deditis quam captis esse. Tiridates quoque regni profugus per silentium aut modice querendo gravior erat: non enim ignavia magna imperia contineri; virorum armorumque faciendum certamen; id in summa fortuna aequius 20 quod validius; et sua retinere privatae domus, de alienis certare regiam laudem esse.

2. Igitur commotus his Vologeses concilium vocat et proximum sibi Tiridaten constituit atque ita orditur: "hunc ego eodem mecum patre genitum, cum mihi per aetatem summo nomine concessisset, in possessionem Armeniae deduxi, qui
 5 tertius potentiae gradus habetur: nam Medos Pacorus ante ceperat. Videbarque contra vetera fratrum odia et certamina familiae nostrae penates rite composuisse. Prohibent Romani, et pacem numquam ipsis prospere laccessitam nunc quoque in exitium suum abrumpunt. Non ibo infitias: aequitate quam
 10 sanguine, causa quam armis retinere parta maioribus malueram. Si cunctatione deliqui, virtute corrigam. Vestra quidem vis et gloria in integro est, addita modestiae fama, quae neque summis mortalium spernenda est et a dis aestimatur." Simul diademate caput Tiridatis evinxit; promptam equitum manum, 15 quae regem ex more sectatur, Monaesi nobili viro tradidit, adiectis Adiabenorū auxiliis, mandavitque Tigranen Armenia exturbare, dum ipse positus adversus Hyrcanos discordiis vires intimas molemque belli ciet, provinciis Romanis minitans.

15. proxima trahi. "And now the neighbouring provinces were following."

nisi defendant. This remark of Monobazus conveys a covert threat. "If Parthia does not intend to protect us, her vassal kings, we must make our own terms with the Romans."

18. gravior erat. The more dignified silence of Tiridates produced greater effect upon Vologeses than any threats.

19. aequus quod validius—

"That they should take who have the power,
And they should keep who can."

2. 1. concilium. An assembly of the satraps.

3. summo nomine. Βασιλεὺς βασιλέων, as the Parthian sultan was called, to distinguish him from his vassal kings.

It was the weak point of all oriental monarchies previous to the Sassanidae that no policy of centralisation was adopted; that the provinces were governed as separate kingdoms; and that they were allowed to become hereditary fiefs, as in the case of Adiabene, etc.

6. vetera fratrum odia. The opposing interests of half-brothers in an oriental court (II. 1, N.).

9. infitias. Accusative of limit of motion. "I will not seek to deny."

14. diademate. VI. 37, N.

17. vires intimas. The forces of Persia, Carmania, and the other interior provinces, which had hitherto been engaged against the Hyrcani, on the north-eastern frontier.

3. Quae ubi Corbuloni certis nuntiis audita sunt, legiones duas cum Verulano Severo et Vettio Bolano subsidium Tigrani mittit, occulto praecepto, compositius cuncta quam festinantius agerent: quippe bellum habere quam gerere malebat. Scripseratque Caesari proprio duce opus esse, qui Armeniam defenderet: Suriam ingruente Vologese acriore in discrimine esse. Atque interim reliquas legiones pro ripa Euphratis locat, tumultuariam provincialium manum armat, hostiles ingressus praesidiis intercipit. Et quia egena aquaram regio est, castella fontibus inposita; quosdam rivos congestu harenae abdidit. 10

4. Ea dum a Corbulone tuendae Suriae parantur, acto raptim agmine Monaeses, ut famam sui praeiret, non ideo nescium aut incautum Tigranen offendit. Occupaverat Tigranocertam, urbem copia defensorum et magnitudine moenium validam. Ad hoc Nicephorius amnis haud spernenda latitudine partem murorum ambit et ducta ingens fossa, qua fluvio diffidebatur. Inerantque milites et provisi ante commeatus, quorum subvectu pauci avidius progressi et repentinis hostibus circumventi ira magis quam metu ceteros accenderant. Sed Partho ad exsequendas obsidiones nulla comminus audacia: raris 10 sagittis neque clausos exterret et semet frustratur. Adiabeni cum promovere scalas et machinamenta inciperent, facile detrusi, mox erumpentibus nostris caeduntur.

5. Corbulo tamen, quamvis secundis rebus suis, moderandum fortunae ratus misit ad Vologesen qui expostularent vim provinciae inlatam: socium amicumque regem, cohortes Romanas circumsideri. Omitteret potius obsidionem, aut se quoque in

3. 4. bellum habere quam gerere malebat. Corbulo saw that Roman dignity and his own influence in the East could not be maintained without war; yet he hesitated to place himself at the head of the whole army, dreading, perhaps, Nero's jealousy.

hostiles ingressus. The bridges of the Euphrates were at Zeugma (opposite the modern Bir) and Thapsacus (near Deir). From the former two roads probably ran, as they do now,—one straight to Antioch, and the other, by way of Aleppo, to Laodicea. From Thapsacus the road ran to the oasis of Palmyra, and thence by different tracks to Laodicea or Damascus. The whole of this country is ill supplied with water, but the immense caravan traffic of the ancient world must have made the roads more important than they now are.

4. 7. Inerantque milites. A Roman garrison of 1000 legionaries, 3 allied cohorts, and two alae of cavalry (XIV. 26).

10. nulla comminus audacia. The Parthians were never formidable, except as cavalry, retaining to the end their Tartar characteristics. Incessant contests for the possession of Mesopotamia made the Sassanians of a later period good engineers (VI. 34, N.).

5 agro hostili castra positurum. Casperius centurio in eam legationem delectus apud oppidum Nisibin, septem et triginta milibus passuum a Tigranocerta distantem, adiit regem et mandata ferociter edidit. Vologesi vetus et penitus infixum erat arma Romana vitandi, nec praesentia prospere fluebant.
 10 Inritum obsidium, tutus manu et copiis Tigranes, fugati qui expugnationem sumpserant, missae in Armeniam legiones, et aliae pro Suria paratae ultro inrumpere; sibi inbecillum equitem pabuli inopia: nam exorta vis locustarum ambederat quidquid herbidum aut frondosum. Igitur metu abstruso mitiora ob-
 15 tendens, missurum ad imperatorem Romanum legatos super petenda Armenia et firmanda pace respondet. Monaesen omittere Tigranocertam iubet, ipse retro concedit.

6. Haec plures ut formidine regis et Corbulonis minis patrata ac magnifica extollebant: alii occulte pepigisse interpretabantur, ut omisso utrimque bello et abeunte Vologese Tigranes quoque Armenia abscederet. Cur enim exercitum 5 Romanum a Tigranocertis deductum? Cur deserta per otium quae bello defenderant? An melius hibernavisse in extrema Cappadocia, raptim erectis tuguriis, quam in sede regni modo retenti? Dilata prorsus arma, ut Vologeses cum alio quam cum Corbulone certaret, Corbulo merita tot per 10 annos gloriae non ultra periculum faceret. Nam, ut rettuli, proprium ducem tuendae Armeniae poposcerat, et adventare Caesennius Paetus audiebatur. Iamque aderat, copiis ita divisus, ut quarta et duodecima legiones addita quinta, quae recens e Moesis excita erat, simul Pontica et Galatarum Cappadocumque auxilia Paeto oboedirent, tertia et sexta et decuma 15 legiones priorque Suriae miles apud Corbulonem manerent; cetera ex rerum usu sociarent partirenturve. Sed neque Corbulo aemuli patiens, et Paetus, cui satis ad gloriam erat, si proximus haberetur, despiciebat gesta, nihil caedis aut praedae, usurpatas nomine tenus urbium expugnationes dicitans: se tributa ac 20 leges et pro umbra regis Romanum ius victis impositurum.

7. Sub idem tempus legati Vologesis, quos ad principem missos memoravi, revertere inriti bellumque propalam sumptum a Parthis. Nec Paetus detrectavit, sed duabus legionibus, quarum quartam Funisulanus Vettonianus eo in tempore, duodecumam Calavius Sabinus regebant, Armeniam intrat tristi 5 omine. Nam in transgressu Euphratis, quem ponte tramitebant, nulla palam causa turbatus equus, qui consularia insignia gestabat, retro evasit. Hostiaque, quae muniebantur hibernaculis adsistens, semifacta opera fuga perrupit seque vallo extulit. Et pila militum arsere, magis insigni prodigio, quia 10 Parthus hostis missilibus telis decertat.

8. Ceterum Paetus spretis ominibus, necdum satis firmatis hibernaculis, nullo rei frumentariae provisu, rapit exercitum trans montem Taurum recipiendis, ut ferebat, Tigranocertis vastandisque regionibus, quas Corbulo integras omisisset. Et capta quaedam castella, gloriaeque et praedae nonnihil partum, 5 si aut gloriam cum modo aut praedam cum cura habuisset. Longinquis itineribus percursando quae obtineri nequibant, corrupto qui captus erat commeatu et instante iam hieme, reduxit exercitum composuitque ad Caesarem literas quasi confecto bello, verbis magnificis, rerum vacuas. 10

9. Interim Corbulo numquam neglectam Euphratis ripam crebrioribus praesidiis insedit; et ne ponti iniciendo impedimentum hostiles turmae adferrent (iam enim subiectis campis magna specie volitabant), naves magnitudine praestantes et

13. commeatibus. "Furloughs."

10. 1. Accitur legio duodecima. Paetus had scattered his legions; the 5th in Pontus, the 12th (probably) in Armenia Minor, and the 4th with himself in the valley of the Arsanias, at a place called Randeia. The Arsanias flows westward in the valley formed by Anti Taurus on the north, and Taurus on the south, and reaches the Euphrates forty miles west of Randeia. Arsamosata is a town in the same valley. The Parthian forces were south of the Taurus.

2. prodita infrequentia. When the two legions were brought together it became evident how their numbers had been diminished by the furloughs, and how small the force really was. Yet with this small force (qua tamen) Paetus might have maintained his position, if he had acted with common sense.

13. alares quoque Pannonios. IV. 73, N. Allied cavalry.

15. cohorte. When used by itself the word refers to a body of auxilia, the unit of whose organisation was a cohort (I. 36, N.).

4. Arsacidarum. The rare genitive after dignus. "The gods have raised up a man worthy of the throne of Arsaces." The clause appears so out of place that it is better to consider it an interpolation. Lipsius says: "Locus de quo non tria verba possum hincere."

had been useless; if Paetus had held out two days longer, their combined forces would have chased Vologeses from Armenia.

5. Corbulo. Sc. ait se. He had no authority to leave his own province; he had only come so far as this because Paetus's legions were in imminent danger. He must hurry back to the Syrian frontier at once, and thank his stars if Vologeses and his cavalry on the east bank of the Euphrates did not reach the place before him, and attack the Roman garrisons in his (Corbulo's) absence.

16. quem—Cn. Pompeio. For the execution of his duties as admiral in the Piratic war Pompey was granted co-ordinate powers with all proconsuls and governors over the coasts of the Mediterranean and fifty miles inland (Gabinian law, B.C. 67). Thus Corbulo is granted the same power that had been given to Germanicus (II. 43).

integrum militem et crebris ac prosperis laboribus exercitum, 5 in Armeniam ducit. Addiditque legionem quintam, quae per Pontum agens expers cladis fuerat, simul quintadecumanos recens adductos et vexilla delectorum ex Illyrico et Aegypto, quodque alarum cohortiumque, et auxilia regum in unum conducta apud Melitenen, qua tramittere Euphraten parabat. Tum 10 lustratum rite exercitum ad contionem vocat orditurque magni-fica de auspiciis imperatoris rebusque a se gestis, adversa in inscitiam Paeti declinans, multa auctoritate, quae viro militari pro facundia erat.

27. Mox iter L. Lucullo quondam penetratum, apertis quae vetustas obsaepserat, pergit. Et venientes Tiridatis Vologesis-que de pace legatos haud aspernatus, adiungit iis centuriones cum mandatis non inmitibus: nec enim adhuc eo ventum, ut 5 certamine extremo opus esset. Multa Romanis secunda, quaedam Parthis evenisse, documento adversus superbiam. Proinde et Tiridati conducere intactum vastationibus regnum dono accipere, et Vologesen melius societate Romana quam damnis mutuis genti Parthorum consulturum. Scire quantum intus 10 discordiarum quamque indomitas et praeferoces nationes re-geret: contra imperatori suo immotam ubique pacem et unum id bellum esse. Simul consilio terrorem adicere, et megistanas Armenios, qui primi a nobis defecerant, pellit sedibus, castella eorum excindit, plana edita, validos invalidosque pari metu 15 complet.

28. Non infensum nec cum hostili odio Corbulonis nomen etiam barbaris habebatur, eoque consilium eius fidum credebant.

26. 5. legionem quintam. § 6, N.

7. vexilla delectorum. "Detachments," used in a general sense, without reference to the veterans (I. 17, N.).

8. alarum. I. 49, N.

cohortium. I. 36, N.

10. lustratum—exercitum. The lus-tratio was regularly performed at the beginning of a campaign. The army being collected and maintaining strict silence, the priests offered suovetaurilia (VI. 37, N.), and carried the flesh of the victims around the army; after which it was burned on the altar, with accompanying prayers.

11. auspiciis imperatoris. II. 18, N.

27. 1. iter L. (Licinio) Lucullo quondam penetratum. Lucullus in B.C. 69 invaded Armenia, crossing the Euphrates south of the Taurus, marching across Sophene to the Tigris, which he passed near the modern Diarbekr, and thence across Kurdistan to Tigranocerta.

 He constructed a road for his army, which Corbulo followed, directing his engineers to remove the obstructions which had accumulated in 132 years.

4. eo ventum. Matters were not come to such a pass.

9. Scire. Sc. sc. Corbulo knew perfectly well the condition of the Parthian state, harassed by the revolt of the Hyrcanians, and weakened by its want of cohesion (§ 2, N.; VI. 33, N.).

Ergo Vologeses neque atrox in summam, et quibusdam praefecturis indutias petit: Tiridates locum diemque conloquio poscit. Tempus propinquum, locus, in quo nuper obsessae cum 5 Paeto legiones erant, cum barbaris delectus esset ob memoriam laetioris sibi rei, Corbulo non vitavit, ut dissimilitudo fortunae gloriam augeret. Neque infamia Paetiangebatur, quod eo maxime patuit, quia filio eius tribuno ducere manipulos atque operire reliquias malae pugnae imperavit. Die pacta Tiberius 10
 Alexander, inlustris eques Romanus, minister bello datus, et Vinicianus Annius, gener Corbulonis, nondum senatoria aetate sed pro legato quintae legioni inpositus, in castra Tiridatis venire, honore eius ac ne metueret insidias tali pignore; viceni dehinc equites adsumpti. Et viso Corbulone rex prior equo desi- 15 luit; nec cunctatus Corbulo, sed pedes uterque dexteras miscuere.

29. Exim Romanus laudat iuvenem omissis praecipitibus tuta et salutaria capessentem. Ille de nobilitate generis multum praefatus, cetera temperanter adiungit: iturum quippe Romam laturumque novum Caesari decus, non adversis Parthorum rebus supplicem Arsaciden. Tum placuit Tiridaten ponere 5 apud effigiem Caesaris insigne regium nec nisi manu Neronis resumere; et conloquium osculo finitum. Dein paucis diebus interiectis, magna utrimque specie, inde eques compositus per turmas et insignibus patriis, hinc agmina legionum stetere ful-gentibus aquilis signisque et simulacris deum in modum templi: 10 medio tribunal sedem curulem et sedes effigiem Neronis sustinebat. Ad quam progressus Tiridates, caesis ex more victimis, sublatum capiti diadema imagini subiecit, magnis apud cunctos

28. 3. Ergo Vologeses. Vologeses showed his confidence in Corbulo by adopting a generally (in summam) conciliatory tone, and even condescending to ask a truce for some of the provinces.

praefecturis. XI. 8, N.

5. locus. This would lie north-west of the point which Corbulo had now reached, and across the Taurus.

10. operire reliquias. Burying the bones and removing the débris, as Germanicus had done (I. 62).

11. inlustris eques. I. 73, N.

minister bello. In charge of the commissariat department.

12. senatoria aetate. Fixed at twenty-five by Augustus, who changed the quaes-torian age from twenty-nine to twenty-four (III. 29, N.). As this young man had not yet been quaestor, he had no claim to a legatio legionis (I. 44, N.). Family influence had advanced him.

14. honore. Ablative of cause. The MS. omits the final e before the following eius (Int. 54, 6).

20. 6. insigne regium. II. 56, N.

9. insignibus patriis. Ablative of quality. "With their national standards."

fulgentibus aquilis. I. 18, N.; I. 24, N.

11. tribunal. I. 18, N.

13. diadema imagini subject. This reverence done to an effigy does not seem animorum motibus, quos augebat insita adhuc oculis exercituum 15 Romanorum caedes aut obsidio. At nunc versos casus : iturum Tiridaten ostentui gentibus, quanto minus quam captivum ?

30. Addidit gloriae Corbulo comitatem epulasque ; et rogi-tante rege causas, quoties novum aliquid adverterat, ut initia vigiliarum per centurionem nuntiari, convivium bucina dimitti et structam ante augurale aram subdita face accendi, cuncta in 5 maius attollens admiratione prisca moris adfecit. Postero die spatium oravit, quo tantum itineris aditurus fratres ante matremque viseret : obsidem interea filiam tradit literasque supplices ad Neronem.

31. Et digressus Pacorum apud Medos, Vologesen Ecba-tanis repperit, non incuriosum fratris : quippe et propriis nuntiis a Corbulone petierat, ne quam imaginem servitii Tiridates per-ferret neu ferrum traderet aut complexu provincias optinentium 5 arceretur foribusve eorum adsisteret, tantusque ei Romae quantus consulibus honor esset. Scilicet externae superbiae sueto non inerat notitia nostri, apud quos vis imperii valet, inania tramittuntur.

to have implied dishonour to an Oriental mind. Artabanus of Parthia, who had defied and hated Tiberius, being pleased with the accounts given of Caligula, crossed the Euphrates and adored the images of the new emperor.

30. 1. rogitante rege. By an anacoluthon these words are afterwards regarded as the object of adfecit, though for translation it is more convenient to supply eum.

2. initia vigiliarum. II. 13, N.

3. convivium bucina dimitti. Trumpets and horns sounded at sunset the hour of the soldiers' meal, and afterwards announced the change of watches. The buccina (a curved shell) was a different instrument, and represented the personal movements of the commander. Under the republic a signal was given for each consul, when both were in camp. —Livy, XXVII. 47.

4. augurale. II. 13, N.

aram — accendi. "To kindle the altar," implying in English the sacrifice upon the altar, which consisted of libations from the general's feast. As he was representative of Rome, the augurale was his focus.

31. 1. apud Medos. In Media Atropatene, which was his kingdom ; Ecbatana was 200 miles further south, in Media proper.

4. neu ferrum traderet. The acinaces or dagger (XII. 51, N.) was the badge of a Parthian nobleman, and was worn at feasts (Hor. Carm., I. 27, 5), and even at court. When Tiridates was brought before Nero he refused to be disarmed, as was customary (IV. 21, N. ; XI. 22, N.), but allowed the acinaces to be fastened in its sheath with rivets.

complexu. The embrace and kiss were the proper salutation of equals (St. Luke vii. 45). Pliny (N. H., 26, 1) describes a species of eruption which spread only among the Roman nobility without affecting the lower classes, and attributes it to the contagion of the kiss. Tiridates was to be treated with due ceremony, and not compelled to wait for an audience in the palaces of proconsuls, who usually maintained great state. Cicero praised his own moderation during his government of Cilicia, because he gave free admission to all visitors, without the interposition of a chamberlain (Ad Att., VI. 2). See IV. 2, N. and § 24, N.

32. Eodem anno Caesar nationes Alpium maritimarum in ius Latii transtulit. Equitum Romanorum locos sedilibus plebis anteposuit apud circum; namque ad eam diem indiscreti inibant, quia lex Roscia nihil nisi de quattuordecim ordinibus sanxit. Spectacula gladiatorum idem annus habuit pari magnificentia ac priora; sed feminarum inlustrium senatorumque plures per arenam foedati sunt. 5

33. C. Laecanio M. Licinio consulibus acriore in dies cupidine adigebatur Nero promiscas scaenas frequentandi. Nam adhuc per domum aut hortos cecinerat iuvenalibus ludis, quos ut parum celebres et tantae voci angustos spernebat. Non tamen Romae incipere ausus Neapolim quasi Graecam urbem delegit: inde initium fore, ut transgressus in Achaiam insignesque et antiquitus sacras coronas adeptus maiore fama studia civium eliceret. Ergo contractum oppidanorum volgus, et quos e proximis coloniis et municipiis eius rei fama acciverat, quique Caesarem per honorem aut varios usus sectantur, etiam militum manipuli, theatrum Neapolitanorum complent. 10

A.U.C. 817.
A.D. 64.

34. Illic, plerique ut arbitrabantur, triste, ut ipse, providum potius et secundis numinibus evenit: nam egresso qui adfuerat populo vacuum et sine ullius noxa theatrum conlapsum est. Ergo per conpositos cantus grates dis atque ipsam recentis casus fortunam celebrans petiturusque maris Hadriae traiectus 5

32. 1. nationes Alpium maritimarum. The modern French département of the Alpes Maritimes, in which are Nice and Monaco. Augustus in B.C. 14 made it a province under a procurator.

2. Ius Latii. This gave the rights of Commercium; the enjoyment of their own laws; and the power to take their own census. Their municipal magistrates became ipso facto Roman citizens, and eligible to Roman magistracies. It was called Latinitas, because it was modelled after the condition of the cities of Latium before the social war, B.C. 90.

3. apud circum. The senators had always enjoyed the right of sitting in the orchestra of the theatre, and the Roscian law in B.C. 67 assigned the next fourteen rows to the equites. Seats in the circus were not set apart (III. 31) until the time of Claudius, who assigned a certain portion to senators; Nero now established the equites in a similar manner.

33. 1. C. Laecanio (Basso) M. Licinio (Crasso).

2. promiscas scaenas. "The public stage."

3. hortos. Near the Vatican (XIV. 14, N.).

Iuvenalibus ludis. XIV. 15, N.

4. tantæ voci. XIV. 15, N.

6. insignesque—coronas. He contested, and of course received the prizes, at the Olympian, Isthmian, Pythian, and Nemean games. On returning from this Greek tour in A.D. 68, he had a part of the walls of Naples torn down, and entered in triumph after the fashion of victors at sacred games (hieronicae).

34. 3. theatrum conlapsum est. It had been shaken by an earthquake while he was singing, but he would not stop.

5. maris Hadriae traiectus. At Brundisium.

apud Beneventum interim consedit, ubi gladiatorium munus a Vatinio celebre edebatur. Vatinus inter foedissima eius aulae ostenta fuit, sutrinae tabernae alumnus, corpore detorto, facetiis scurrilibus, primo in contumelias adsumptus; dehinc optimi 10 cuiusque criminatione eo usque valuit, ut gratia, pecunia, vi nocendi etiam malos praemineret.

35. Eius munus frequentanti Neroni ne inter voluptates quidem a sceleribus cessabatur. Isdem quippe illis diebus Torquatus Silanus mori adigitur, quia super Iunia familiae claritudinem divum Augustum abavum ferebat. Iussi accusa-
 5 tores obicere prodigum largitionibus, neque aliam spem quam in rebus novis esse. Quin eum inter libertos habere, quos ab epistulis et libellis et rationibus appellet, nomina summae curae et meditamenta. Tum intimus quisque libertorum vincti abreptique. Et cum damnatio instaret, brachiorum venas Tor-
 10 quatus interscidit. Secutaque Neronis oratio ex more, quamvis sontem et defensionem merito diffisum victurum tamen fuisse, si clementiam iudicis expectasset.

36. Nec multo post, omissa in praesens Achaia (causae in incerto fuere) urbem revisit, provincias orientis, maxime Aegyptum, secretis imaginationibus agitando. Dehinc edicto testificatus non longam sui absentiam et cuncta in re publica
 5 perinde immota ac prospera fore, super ea profectione adiit Capitolium. Illic veneratus deos, cum Vestae quoque templum

9. in contumelias. "As a laughing-stock."

35. 3. (D. Junius) Silanus Torquatus.

Juniae familiae claritudinem. The Junian clan had existed since the time of the kings. The Silani came into prominence during the war with Hannibal, which exhausted almost all the old blood of the Roman families, and introduced the names which were famous in the later republic and early empire.

6. Quin eum—habere. The MS. has qui ne nobiles habere, which is unintelligible. It is clear from XVI. 8 that these officers of the household were freedmen.

ab epistulis et libellis et rationibus. "Chancellor, master of petitions, and treasurer;" the offices held under Claudius by Narcissus, Callistus, and Pallas respectively. The names, said Nero, became the imperial household alone, and showed that Torquatus was entertaining designs (meditamenta) in that direction.

12. iudicis. The emperor, by virtue of the tribunician power, was the representative of the Roman people, and supreme court of appeal in cases which concerned a citizen's life (I. 9, N.).

36. 1. omissa—Achaia. Giving up the idea of visiting Greece.

3. edicto. III. 6, N.

6. Vestae quoque templum. After leaving the Capitol he proceeded to the temple of Vesta, at the end of the forum, under the Palatine (41, N.). As Vesta was goddess of the hearth, and the penates of the people were preserved in her shrine, Nero offered to her his last sacrifice before proceeding on his journey. In the same way, individuals bade farewell to their private penates before leaving home on journeys.

 Et celeberrimae luxu famaue epulae fuere, quas a Tigellino nihil flagitii reliquerat quo corruptior ageret, nisi paucos post 15 dies uni ex illo contaminatorum grege (nomen Pythagorae fuit)

8. facinorum recordatione. XIV. 10, N.

9. curas. "Desires."

16. volentia = gratia. The people knew that the frequency of the shows depended upon the emperor's presence; and it was at these shows that the cry for cheap bread was raised (VI. 13, N.). Nero had been careful and indulgent in this matter (§ 18).

cupidine et—metuenti. Int. 54, 3.

37. 5. in stagno Agrippae. On the Campus Martius, north of the Pantheon.

6. navium allarum. The raft is regarded as a species of vessel. It was made of planks nailed on empty barrels.

9. Oceano abusque. Even from the Atlantic. Juvenal speaks of sleepy seals; Horace, in jest, talks of cetaria, "whale ponds."

10. Crepidinibus. Sc. in.

12. tenebrae incedebant. Incedere expresses a gradual or stately approach (XI. 32, N.).

ἡκε δ' ὁ δ' πυκτὶ δούκας.

in modum sollemnium coniugiorum denupsisset. Inditum imperatori flammeum, visi auspices, dos et genialis torus et faces nuptiales, cuncta denique spectata, quae etiam in femina nox

38. Sequitur clades, forte an dolo principis incertum (nam utrumque auctores prodidere), sed omnibus quae huic urbi per violentiam ignium acciderunt gravior atque atrocior. Initium in ea parte circi ortum, quae Palatino Caelioque montibus contigua est, ubi per tabernas, quibus id mercimonium inerat quo flamma alitur, simul coeptus ignis et statim validus ac vento citus longitudinem circi corripuit. Neque enim domus munitis saeptae vel templa muris cincta aut quid aliud morae interiacebat. Impetu pervagatum incendium plana primum, 10 deinde in edita adsurgens et rursus inferiora populando, anteiit remedia velocitate mali et obnoxia urbe artis itineribus hucque et illuc flexis atque enormibus vicis, qualis vetus Roma fuit. Ad hoc lamenta paventium feminarum, fessa aetate aut rudis pueritiae, quique sibi quique aliis consulebant, dum trahunt
15 invalidos aut opperiuntur, pars mora, pars festinans, cuncta impediabant. Et saepe dum in tergum respectant, lateribus aut fronte circumveniebantur, vel si in proxima evaserant, illis

38. 1. nam utrumque auctores prodidere. Tacitus is cautious in his statements. Suetonius and Dio Cassius ascribe the conflagration to Nero without hesitation, and so does Pliny Sr., a grave and contemporaneous authority, H. N., 17, 1.

2. omnibus quae—acciderunt. The burning by the Gauls in B.C. 390; a fire on the Caelian in A.D. 27 (IV. 64); one on the Aventine in 36 (VI. 45). This fire began in almost the same quarter as the two last, near the porta triumphalis of the Circus Maximus (VI. 45, N.).

5. id mercimonium. The tar and pitch of the sail-lofts.

7. citus. A participle, not an adjective (II. 6, N.).

domus. A palace, whose stony walls and garden spaces were a protection against fire (VI. 45, N.).

10. deinde in edita adsurgens. From the circus the fire rose to the tops of the adjacent hills, and again descended beyond them to the forum, on the side of the Palatine, and to the dockyards beyond the Aventine.

11. obnoxia urbe. "The city was liable to such accidents, on account of the narrow streets, bending to and fro, and the shapeless blocks of houses." After the Gallic conflagration the city was erected in haste, and every man chose his own building site. Consequently, the old lines of streets and sewers were disregarded, and proprietors encroached on the streets, which became so narrow that litters were used instead of carriages. Martial, who lived in the upper story of a tenement, could shake hands with his neighbour across the way.

13. fessa aetate aut rudis pueritiae. Sc. mortales. The ablative and genitive of quality are co-ordinated, and aetas used for senectus (Int. 54, 1).

17. si in proxima evaserant. The confusion of the fugitives, the hopelessness of escaping the pursuing fire, the swarming of thieves to prey on the wreck, have their exact counterparts in modern conflagrations. Compare Pliny Jr.'s vivid description of the eruption of Vesuvius, A.D. 79 (Epp. VI. 20, §§ 14, 15). The letter which contains it was addressed to quoque igni correptis, etiam quae longinqua crediderant in eodem casu reperiiebant. Postremo, quid vitarent quid peterent ambigui, complere vias, sterni per agros; quidam amissis omnibus fortunis, diurni quoque victus, alii caritate suorum, quos eripere nequiverant, quamvis patente effugio interiere. Nec quisquam defendere audebat, crebris multorum minis restinguere prohibentium, et quia alii palam faces iaciebant atque esse sibi auctorem vociferabantur, sive ut raptus licentius exercerent seu iussu. 20 25

39. Eo in tempore Nero Antii agens non ante in urbem regressus est quam domui eius, qua Palatium et Maecenatis hortos continuaverat, ignis propinquaret. Neque tamen sisti potuit, quin et Palatium et domus et cuncta circum haurirentur. Sed solacium populo exturbato ac profugo campum Martis ac monumenta Agrippae, hortos quin etiam suos patefecit et subitaria aedificia exstruxit, quae multitudinem inopem acciperent; subvectaque utensilia ab Ostia et propinquis municipiis, pretiumque frumenti minutum usque ad ternos nummos. Quae quamquam popularia in irritum cadebant, quia pervaserat rumor ipso tempore flagrantis urbis inisse eum domesticam 10

Tacitus, and seems to have been imitated in this passage.

21. diurni quoque victus. Supply copia from fortunia.

24. faces iaciebant. Suetonius says that men of consular rank found Nero's chamberlains in their gardens, with tow and pitch, but dared not stop them.

39. 2. qua Palatium et Maecenatis hortos continuaverat. Maecenas left his gardens and tower on the Esquiline to Augustus, and they had remained in the imperial family. Nero's connection must have been made by a viaduct, running above the Via Sacra, probably adorned with a covered gallery.

6. monumenta Agrippae. The population of imperial Rome, crowded together in the swarming insulae to an extent that is unknown in modern times, had to be provided with public resorts for spending the day abroad. Agrippa supplied these in the years 26 and 25 B.C. on a magnificent scale. The Pantheon still remains as the greatest dome of the world; baths were constructed covering acres; the portico of the Argonauts, named from the frescoes on its walls, afforded long covered cloisters; the Septa Julia, or voting polls, a building of solid stone, capable of holding the mass of Roman voters, was magnificently adorned with statuary; the Diribitorium, or place for counting votes, had a vaulted roof exceeding that of the Pantheon, and could not be restored when destroyed by a fire under Titus. These magnificent edifices were capable of sheltering almost all the fugitives from the conflagration.

hortos—suos. Originally Agrippina's (XIV. 14, N.).

8. utensilia. "Necessaries."

9. pretium frumenti minutum. I. 2, N. Three sesterces a peck, or two shillings a bushel, is about half the modern price. According to Pliny Sr., a peck of the best flour (which required two pecks of corn to make it) averaged a value of forty asses, making three shillings and fourpence per bushel for grain, corresponding nearly to modern prices (I. 17, N.).

11. inisse—domesticam scaenam. According to Suetonius, Nero mounted the tower of Maecenas in his player's dress, and sang the tragedy of Troy.

scaenam et cecinisse Troianum excidium, praesentia mala vetustis cladibus adsimulantem.

40. Sexto demum die apud imas Esquilias finis incendio factus, prorutis per inmensum aedificiis, ut continuae violentiae campus et velut vacuum caelum occurreret. Necdum positus metus, et redibat haud levius rursum grassatus ignis patulis
 5 magis urbis locis, eoque strages hominum minor: delubra deum et porticus amoenitati dicatae latius procidere. Plusque infamiae id incendium habuit, quia praediis Tigellini Aemilianis proruperat; videbaturque Nero condendae urbis novae et cognomento suo appellandae gloriam quaerere. Quippe in regiones 10 quattuordecim Roma dividitur, quarum quattuor integrae manebant, tres solo tenus deiectae: septem reliquis pauca tectorum vestigia supererant, lacera et semusta.

41. Domuum et insularum et templorum, quae amissa sunt, numerum inire haud promptum fuerit: sed vetustissima religione, quod Servius Tullius Lunae, et magna ara fanumque, quae praesenti Herculi Arcas Evander sacraverat, aedesque
 5 Statoris Iovis vota Romulo Numaeque regia et delubrum Vestae

40. 1. Sexto demum die. The first fire lasted six days and seven nights; the returning fire (occasioned, according to Xiphilinus, by a strong wind which arose and drove it in a new direction) lasted three days more.

3. velut vacuum caelum. A hyperbole to express the clearance of buildings. Nipperdey says that the foot of the Esquiline means the valley between it and the Viminal (the Subura).

4. patulis magis urbis locis. A disagreeable homoioteleuton. From the statement that this fire broke out from the Aemilian Gardens, which lay between the Quirinal and Capitol, it appears that it now passed towards the north-west, and attacked the porticoes (§ 39, N.) in the Campus Martius.

9. regiones quattuordecim. XIV. 12, N.

41. 1. Domuum et insularum. VI. 45, N.

2. haud promptum fuerit. The potential subjunctive in the third person corresponds to the modest subjunctive in the first.

3. quod Servius Tullius Lunae. The Chevalier Bunsen believed this to be the same as the famous temple of Diana built by Servius on the Aventine, overlooking the valley of the Circus Maximus. As the temple was originally built at the expense of the different cities of Latium, the goddess may have been worshipped under different names. It contained the spoils of Corinth, dedicated by Mummius.

magna ara. XII. 24, N. The shrine of Hercules was erected at a much later time than the altar. It was restored as the circular temple still standing by the Tiber near the mouth of the cloaca maxima (Sta. Maria del Sole).

4. aedesque Statoris Jovis. See the plan of the Palatine on p. 285. The temple of Jupiter Stator was at the Porta Mugonia (x); the circular temple of Vesta (6), on the forum at the foot of the hill, preserved the national Penates (§ 36, N.). There was also a temple of the Penates on the opposite side of the forum—possibly the one which is now incorporated in the church of SS. Cosma and Damiano. The small and quaint regia of Numa Pompilius adjoined the temple of Vesta.

5. vota Romulo. See Index, sub v. Jupiter.

cum Penatibus populi Romani exusta ; iam opes tot victoriis quaesitae et Graecarum artium decora, exim monumenta ingeniorum antiqua et incorrupta, ut quamvis in tanta resurgentis urbis pulchritudine multa seniores meminerint, quae reparari nequibant. Fuere qui adnotarent XIII Kal. Sextiles principium incendii huius ortum, quo et Senones captam urbem inflammaverint. Alii eo usque cura progressi sunt, ut totidem annos mensesque et dies inter utraque incendia numerent. 10

42. Ceterum Nero usus est patriae ruinis exstruxitque domum, in qua haud perinde gemmae et aurum miraculo essent, solita pridem et luxu volgata, quam arva et stagna et in modum solitudinum hinc silvae inde aperta spatia et prospectus, magistris et machinatoribus Severo et Celere, quibus ingenium et audacia erat, etiam quae natura denegavisset, per artem temptare et viribus principis inludere. Namque ab lacu Averno navigabilem fossam usque ad ostia Tiberina depressuros promiserant, squalenti litore aut per montes adversos. Neque enim aliud umidum gignendis aquis occurrit quam Pomptinae paludes : 10 5

6. opes tot victoriis quaesitae. The spoils of Carthage, Greece, and the East, dedicated in the temples by the old generals, or preserved in their family mansions.

7. monumenta ingeniorum. Old and autograph manuscripts, preserved in the library of the Palatine Apollo and elsewhere. Early copies were peculiarly valuable when printing did not exist to establish an authentic text.

9. meminerint. "Still remember."

10. XIII Kal. Sextiles. July 19th, the day after the battle of the Allia.

12. totidem annos. From the Gallic conflagration to the fire under Nero (B.C. 390—A.D. 64) is a space of 453 years (we must remember in calculating dates that there was no year 0). 417 years + 417 months + 417 days = 452 years, 10 months, and 22 days, which is tolerably near.

42. 1. usus est patriae ruinis. He took possession of the real estate, which was very valuable. Julius Caesar paid £830,000 for the comparatively small spot on which he erected his forum. The unhealthiness of the Campagna, and the inconvenience of crossing the Tiber, narrowed the limits of the city, raised the price of land, and occasioned the many-storied houses.

2. domum. Called the domus aurea. In its vestibule on the east front of the Palatine was a statue of Nero 120 feet high. Before this, where the Colosseum now stands, was a lake surrounded by porticoes ; forests and parks on the Coelian and Aventine were filled with wild beasts : the palace, radiant with gold, ivory, and gems, was supplied with baths of sea and sulphur waters. The epigram was current—

Roma domus fiet ; Veios migrate Quirites
Si non et Veios occupat ista domus.

8. navigabilem fossam. A canal broad enough for two quinqueremes to pass, and 120 miles long. It must necessarily run along the dry sea-shore, cutting through the volcanic ridge of Avernus and the limestone promontory of Terracina. Lying parallel with the sea, it would be of no commercial utility, only serving to carry the emperor to Baiae without sea-sickness. The Romans employed locks (cataractae, Plin. Epp. 10, 69) rarely, and only in rivers. (It has been suggested that there would have been real utility in a water-way between Rome and the Campanian harbours, which were far superior to that of Ostia.)

cetera abrupta aut arentia, ac si perrumpi possent, intolerandus labor nec satis causae. Nero tamen, ut erat incredibilium cupitor, effodere proxima Averno iuga conisus est, manentque vestigia inritae spei.

43. Ceterum urbis quae domui supererant non, ut post Gallica incendia, nulla distinctione nec passim erecta, sed dimensis vicorum ordinibus et latis viarum spatiis cohibitaque aedificiorum altitudine ac patefactis areis additisque porticibus, 5 quae frontem insularum protegerent. Eas porticus Nero sua pecunia exstructurum purgatasque areas dominis traditurum pollicitus est. Addidit praemia pro cuiusque ordine et rei familiaris copiis, finivitque tempus intra quod effectis domibus aut insulis apiscerentur. Ruderi accipiundo Ostienses paludes destinabat, 10 utique naves, quae frumentum Tiberi subvectavissent, onustae rudere decurrerent, aedificiaque ipsa certa sui parte sine trabibus saxo Gabino Albanove solidarentur, quod is lapis ignibus impervius est; iam aqua privatorum licentia intercepta quo largior et pluribus locis in publicum flueret, custodes, et subsidia reprimendis ignibus in propatulo quisque haberet; nec communione 15 parietum, sed propriis quaeque muris ambirentur. Ea ex utilitate accepta decorem quoque novae urbi attulere. Erant tamen qui crederent, veterem illam formam salubritati magis post Gallica incendia. § 38, N.

43. 1. urbis quae domui supererant. As much as was left after building the palace.

3. cohibitaque aedificiorum altitudine. Augustus limited it to seventy feet; Trajan to sixty. Nero's statute has not been preserved.

4. patefactis areis. Leaving open courts; areas below means building-lots.

additisque porticibus. As was customary at Alexandria, Antioch, and other eastern cities, built by the Macedonian kings after definite designs.

6. purgatasque areas. Suetonius says that Nero allowed none but his own men to search for treasures in the ashes, and that he made a good speculation.

8. finivitque tempus. Owners who restored their buildings within a specified time were to be encouraged by a government largess. Rome seems to have been rebuilt before Nero fell in A.D. 69.

9. Ostienses paludes. Where new levees were always needed, to control the river's course.

10. utique not utique.

12. saxo Gabino Albanove. Porous tufa and limestone, which do not crack from heat like the harder stones.

13. aqua. On the water supply of Rome see XI. 13, N. The aqueducts supplied distributing reservoirs, from whence it flowed to the fountains (lacus) by which ancient as well as modern Rome was supplied. It had been diverted to private fountains in the palaces; an abuse which was now checked.

14. custodes. Sc. aquarum destinabantur. These watermen numbered 460 in Trajan's time. The vigiles were firemen (IV. 5, N.).

subsidia reprimendis ignibus. Buckets, and fire-engines (siphones) worked with double hand-brakes.

15. communione parietum. "Party-walls." The XII Tables ordained that each house should be surrounded by a space 2½ feet broad.

18. salubritati magis conduxisse. An idea preserved in modern Rome, where the sunny side of the street is careconduxisse, quoniam angustiae itinerum et altitudo tectorum non perinde solis vapore perrumperentur: at nunc patulam 20 latitudinem et nulla umbra defensam graviore aestu ardescere.

44. Et haec quidem humanis consiliis providebantur. Mox petita dis piacula aditique Sibyllae libri, ex quibus supplicatum Volcano et Cereri Proserpinaeque, ac propitiata Iuno per matronas, primum in Capitolio, deinde apud proximum mare, unde hausta aqua templum et simulacrum deae perspersum est; et 5 sellisternia ac pervigilia celebrare feminae quibus mariti erant. Sed non ope humana, non largitionibus principis aut deum placamentis decedebat infamia, quin iussum incendium crederetur. Ergo abolendo rumori Nero subdidit reos et quaesitis- 10 simis poenis adfecit, quos per flagitia invisos vulgus Christianos appellabat. Auctor nominis eius Christus Tiberio imperitante per procuratorem Pontium Pilatum supplicio adfectus erat; repressaue in praesens exitiabilis superstitio rursum erumpebat, non modo per Iudaeam, originem eius mali, sed per urbem etiam, quo cuncta undique atrocita aut pudenda confluunt cele- 15 branturque. Igitur primum correpti qui fatebantur, deinde indicio eorum multitudo ingens haud perinde in crimine incendii quam odio humani generis convicti sunt. Et pereuntibus addita ludibria, ut ferarum tergis, contecti laniatu canum interirent, multi crucibus adfixi aut flamma usti, aliique, ubi defecisset 20 fully avoided through dread of fever. See Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, II. 2, 3, "Air rectified."

44. 2. petita dis piacula. Numa erected an altar on the Aventine to Jupiter Elicius, in order to elicit from the minds of the gods the expiations due on account of prodigies (Liv. I. 20).

Sibyllae libri. I. 76, N.

3. Volcano. As god of fire.

Cereri Proserpinaeque, whose temples had been burned with the Circus (II. 49, N.).

5. simulacrum deae perspersum. Theophrastus, 28.

6. sellisternia. XIV. 12, N.

pervigilia. "Nocturna mulierum sacrificia ne sunt, praeter olla quae pro populo rite fiant."—Cic. de legg., II. 9.

10. Christianos. The Christians were regarded as a sect of the Jews; and the Jews were confounded with the superstitious and licentious nations of the east, the reverence for whose rites was a growing evil at Rome (II. 85, N.). The Jews, because they would not eat with the uncircumcised, and the Christians, because they would not visit the theatres or join in the pagan festivals, were accused of hatred for the human race. Tertullian thinks it necessary to refute most atrocious calumnies against the Christians. The ignorance of Tacitus on the subject is more remarkable, because his friend Pliny Jr. had learned the ways of Christians while governor of Asia Minor (Ep. X. 96).

12. procuratorem. IV. 15, N.

20. aut flamma usti. "Or set up to be burned." Nero wrapped them in tarred sheets and burned them, with sharpened stakes placed under the chin to make them hold their heads up. Street lighting was introduced at Rome in the second century A.D. Seneca, writing under Nero (de Ira, III. 19) says: "Quid tam inauditum quam nocturnum supplicium."

dies, in usum nocturni luminis urerentur. Hortos suos ei spectaculo Nero obtulerat et circense ludicrum edebat, habitu aurigae permixtus plebi vel curriculo insistens. Unde quamquam adversus fontes et novissima exemplâ meritis miseratio 25 oriebatur, tamquam non utilitate publica sed in saevitiam unius absumerentur.

45. Interea conferendis pecuniis pervastata Italia, provinciae eversae sociique populi et quae civitatum liberae vocantur. Inque eam praedam etiam di cessere, spoliatis in urbe templis egestoque auro, quod triumphis, quod votis omnis populi Romani
 5 aetas prospere aut in metu sacraverat. Enimvero per Asiam atque Achaïam non dona tantum sed simulacra numinum abripiebantur, missis in eas provincias Acrato ac Secundo Carinate. Ille libertus cuicumque flagitio promptus, hic Graeca doctrina ore tenus exercitus animum bonis artibus non inbuerat.
 10 Ferebatur Seneca, quo invidiam sacrilegii a semet averteret, longinqui ruris secessum oravisse, et postquam non concedebatur, ficta valetudine, quasi aeger nervis, cubiculum non egressus. Tradidere quidam venenum ei per libertum ipsius, cui nomen Cleonicus, paratum iussu Neronis vitatumque a

46. Per idem tempus gladiatores apud oppidum Praeneste

21. Hortos suos. XIV. 14, N.

22. habitu aurigae. The city was divided between the chariots and drivers of the red, white, green, and blue factions. Nero used to appear in the green dress of his faction, to the delight of its backers.

23. curriculo insistens. Expressing the attitude of a driver bending forward in a chariot, which was open behind, and rapidly sloped upwards in front.

45. 1. conferendis pecuniis. The contributions were nominally voluntary, and in many cases really so. In other instances communities were practically forced to pay an extra tax.

2. sociique populi. The client states, such as Thrace, Cilicia Trachaea, and Commagene. They were nominally autonomous, though politically dependent, and furnished contingents for the legions. The liberae civitates were foreign cities, which, for their good deserts, were wholly or partially free from imperial taxation, and elected their own magistrates. Rhodes was an example.

4. quod triumphis, quod votis. Victors dedicated their spoils in temples. In times of danger the senate made vows for the preservation of the state.

6. simulacra numinum. The image of Apollo from Delphi and hundreds of other masterpieces were brought to decorate the Golden House.

11. longinqui ruris. A distant county seat.

12. aeger nervis. Suffering with rheumatism.

15. per simplicem victum. Seneca boasts in his epistles of this philosophical simplicity.

16. profluente aqua is fresh from a fountain.

46. 1. apud oppidum Praeneste. An imperial school of gladiators was maintained here, under proper guards. It supplied material for the usual games.

temptata eruptione praesidio militis, qui custos adesset, coerciti sunt, iam Spartacum et vetera mala rumoribus ferente populo, ut est novarum rerum cupiens pavidusque. Nec multo post clades rei navalis accipitur, non bello (quippe haud alias tam immota pax), sed certum ad diem in Campaniam redire classem Nero iusserat, non exceptis maris casibus. Ergo gubernatores, quamvis saeviente pelago, a Formiis movere; et gravi Africo, dum promunturium Miseni superare contendunt, Cumanis litibus in tacti triremium plerasque et minora navigia passim amiserunt. 5 10

47. Fine anni volgantur prodigia, imminentium malorum nuntia. Vis fulgurum non alias crebrior, et sidus cometes, sanguine inlustri semper Neroni expiatum. Bicipites hominum aliorumve animalium partus abiecti in publicum aut in sacrificiis, quibus gravidas hostias inmolari mos est, reperti. Et in agro Placentino viam propter natus vitulus, cui caput in crure esset; secutaque haruspicum interpretatio, parari rerum humanarum aliud caput, sed non fore validum neque occultum, quia in utero repressum aut iter iuxta editum sit. 5

48. Ineunt deinde consulatum Silius Nerva et Atticus Vestinus, coepta simul et aucta coniuratione, in quam certatim nomina dederant senatores eques miles, feminae etiam, cum odio Neronis, tum favore in C. A.D. 65.

5. haud alias tam immota pax. Coins of Nero represent the closed temple of Janus, with the inscription: Pax P(opuli) R(omani) terra marique parva Janum clusit.

8. gravi Africo. The west-south-west wind. Hence it was nearly abeam as they coasted along Campania, but was almost full ahead when they tried to double Misenum, and drove them back to Cumae.

47. 3. sanguine inlustri—expiatum. An oriental soothsayer assured Nero that a comet always announced the end of some distinguished man, and that he might turn away the fate from himself by putting noblemen to death (XIV. 22).

5. gravidas hostias. Offered to the goddess Tellus (Ovid, Fast. IV. 629-634).

6. cui caput in crure. The animal had been distorted by pressure in the womb, and the head had adhered to the shank by cohesion of the skin where they touched. According to the soothsayers this prefigured a new head of the state; but the pressure of the womb and the birth by the wayside showed the repression and discovery of the plot.

7. haruspicum. XI. 15, N.

48. 2. coepta simul et aucta coniuratione. The conspiracy came to a head in April of this year (A.D. 65). Its origin and rapid growth must be referred back at least a year, as the conspirators had been forming plans when the city was burning (§ 50).

7. facundiam tuendis civibus. The easiest path of an orator to success was cebat, largitionem adversum amicos, et ignotis quoque comi sermone et congressu ; aderant etiam fortuita, corpus procerum, 10 decora facies : sed procul gravitas morum aut voluptatum par-simonia ; levitati ac magnificentiae et aliquando luxu indulge-bat. Idque pluribus probabatur, qui in tanta vitiorum dulcedine summum imperium non restrictum nec perseverum volunt.

49. Initium coniurationi non a cupidine ipsius fuit : nec tamen facile memoraverim, quis primus auctor, cuius instinctu concitum sit quod tam multi sumpserant. Promptissimos Subrium Flavum tribunum praetoriae cohortis et Sulpicium Asprum
5 centurionem extitisse constantia exitus docuit ; et Lucanus Annaeus Plautiusque Lateranus vivida odia intulere. Lucanum propriae causae accendebant, quod famam carminum eius premebat Nero prohibueratque ostentare, vanus adsimulatione :
Lateranum consulem designatum nulla iniuria, sed amor rei
10 publicae sociavit. At Flavius Scaevinus et Afranius Quintianus, uterque senatorii ordinis, contra famam sui principium tanti facinoris capessivere. Nam Scaevino dissoluta luxu mens et proinde vita somno languida : Quintianus mollitia corporis infamis et a Nerone probroso carmine diffamatus contumelias 15 ultum ibat.

50. Ergo dum scelera principis, et finem adesse imperio deligendumque qui fessis rebus succurreret, inter se aut inter amicos iaciunt, adgregavere Claudium Senecionem, Cervarium Proculum, Vulcatium Araricum, Iulium Augurinum, Muna-
5 tium Gratum, Antonium Natalem, Marcium Festum, equites Romanos. Ex quibus Senecio, e praecipua familiaritate Neronis, speciem amicitiae etiam tum retinens eo pluribus periculis conflictabatur ; Natalis particeps ad omne secretum Pisoni erat ;

the trade of delator ; a man who avoided this way was esteemed by the senate.

8. largitionem. He inherited large wealth from his mother, practised general liberality, and every year presented deserving men of the lower class with equestrian fortunes.

11. luxu. "Debauchery." The dative.

49. 4. tribunum praetoriae cohortis. I. 7, N.

8. vanus adsimulatione. Nero's vain opinion of his own genius made him an enemy of Lucan, whom he presumed to rival. See XIV. 16, and notes.

9. consulem designatum. Nero had shown him the greatest favour by nominating him ; Lateranus therefore could not have been influenced by personal motives.

13. proinde vita somno languida. Like his friend Petronius Arbiter (XVI. 18), he turned night into day, and was always blinking in daylight.

50. 1. finem adesse imperio. As had been foretold by the prodigies described in § 47, Nero was the last of the blood of the Caesars, with the exception of Junius Silanus.

ceteris spes ex novis rebus petebatur. Adscitae sunt super Subrium et Sulpicium, de quibus rettuli, militares manus, Gavius 10
 Silvanus et Statius Proximus tribuni cohortium praetoriarum, Maximus Scaurus et Venetus Paulus centuriones. Sed sum-mum robur in Faenio Rufo praefecto videbatur, quem vita famaue laudatum per saevitiam inpudicitiamque Tigellinus in animo principis anteibat, fatigabatque criminationibus ac 15 saepe in metum adduxerat quasi adulterum Agrippinae et desiderio eius ultioni intentum. Igitur ubi coniuratis praefectum quoque praetorii in partes descendisse crebro ipsius sermone facta fides, promptius iam de tempore ac loco caedis agitabant. Et cepisse impetum Subrius Flavus ferebatur in 20 scaena canentem Neronem adgrediendi, aut cum ardente domo per noctem huc illuc cursaret incustoditus. Hic occasio solitudinis, ibi ipsa frequentia tanti decoris testis pulcherrima animum exstimulaverant, nisi impunitatis cupido retinuisset, magnis semper conatibus adversa. 25

51. Interim cunctantibus prolatantibusque spem ac metum Epicharis quaedam, incertum quonam modo sciscitata (neque illi ante ulla rerum honestarum cura fuerat), accendere et urgere coniuratos, ac postremum lentitudinis eorum pertaesa et in Campania agens primores classiariorum Misenensium 5 labefacere et conscientia inligare conisa est tali initio. Erat navarchus in ea classe Volusius Proculus, occidendae matris Neroni inter ministros, non ex magnitudine sceleris proventus, ut rebatur. Is mulieri olim cognitus, seu recens orta amicitia, dum merita erga Neronem sua et quam in inritum cecidissent 10 aperit adicitque questus et destinationem vindictae, si facultas oreretur, spem dedit posse inpelli et plures conciliare: nec leve auxilium in classe, crebras occasiones, quia Nero multo apud Puteolos et Misenum maris usu laetabatur. Ergo Epicharis plura et omnia scelera principis orditur; neque senatui neque 15

eversae rei publicae daret: accingeretur modo navare operam et militum acerrimos ducere in partes, ac digna pretia expectaret; nomina tamen coniuratorum reticuit. Unde Proculi 20 indicium inritum fuit, quamvis ea quae audierat ad Neronem detulisset. Accita quippe Epicharis et cum indice composita nullis testibus innisum facile confutavit. Sed ipsa in custodia retenta est, suspectante Nerone haud falsa esse etiam quae vera non probabantur.

52. Coniuratis tamen metu proditoris permotis placitum maturare caedem apud Baias in villa Pisonis, cuius amoenitate captus Caesar crebro ventitabat balneasque et epulas inibat omissis excubiis et fortunae suae mole. Sed abnuvit Piso, in-
 5 vidiam praetendens, si sacra mensae dique hospitales caede qualiscumque principis cruentarentur: melius apud urbem in illa invisā et spoliis civium exstructa domo vel in publico patraturos quod pro re publica suscepissent. Haec in commune, ceterum timore occulto, ne L. Silanus eximia nobilitate discipli-
 10 naeque C. Cassii, apud quem educatus erat, ad omnem claritudinem sublatus imperium invaderet, prompte daturis qui a coniuratione integri essent quique miserarentur Neronem tamquam per scelus interfectum. Plerique Vestini quoque consulis acre ingenium vitavisse Pisonem crediderunt, ne ad libertatem 15 oreretur, vel delecto imperatore alio sui muneris rem publicam faceret. Etenim expers coniurationis erat, quamvis super eo crimine Nero vetus adversum insontem odium expleverit.

Ordinem insidiis composuerant, ut Lateranus, quasi subsidium rei familiari oraret, 5 deprecabundus et genibus principis accidens prosterneret incautum premeretque, animi validus et corpore ingens. Tum iacentem et impeditum tribuni et centuriones et ceterorum, ut quisque audentiae habuisset, adcurrerent trucidarentque, primas sibi partes expostulante Scaevino, qui pugionem templo 10 Salutis sive, ut alii tradidere, Fortunae Ferentino in oppido detraxerat gestabatque velut magno operi sacrum. Interim Piso apud aedem Cereris opperiretur, unde eum praefectus Faenius et ceteri accitum ferrent in castra, comitante Antonia Claudii Caesaris filia ad eliciendum volgi favorem, quod C. 15 Plinius memorat. Nobis quoquo modo traditum non occultare in animo fuit, quamvis absurdum videretur aut inanem ad spem Antoniam nomen et periculum commodavisse, aut Pisonem notum amore uxoris alii matrimonio se obstrinxisse, nisi si cupido dominandi cunctis adfectibus flagrantior est. 20

54. Sed mirum quam inter diversi generis ordinis, aetatis sexus, dites pauperes taciturnitate omnia cohibita sint, donec proditio coepit e domo Scaevini; qui pridie insidiarum multo sermone cum Antonio Natale, dein regressus domum testamentum obsignavit, promptum vagina pugionem, de quo supra 5 rettuli, vetustate obtusum increpans, asperari saxo et in mucronem ardescere iussit eamque curam liberto Milicho mandavit.  15 cum secum servilis animus praemia perfidiae reputavit simulque inmensa pecunia et potentia obversabantur, cessit fas et salus patroni et acceptae libertatis memoria. Etenim uxoris quoque consilium adsumpserat muliebre ac deterius: quippe ultro metum intentabat, multosque adstitisse liberos ac servos, qui 20 eadem viderint; nihil profuturum unius silentium; at praemia penes unum fore, qui indicio praevenisset.

55. Igitur coepta luce Milichus in hortos Servilianos pergit; et cum foribus arceretur, magna et atrocia adferre dictitans deductusque ab ianitoribus ad libertum Neronis Epaphroditum, mox ab eo ad Neronem, urguens periculum, graves congruentia responderant, inditaque vincla. Et tormentorum aspectum ac minas non tulere: prior tamen Natalis, totius conspirationis magis gnarus, simul arguendi peritior, de Pisone 5 primum fatetur, deinde adicit Annaeum Senecam, sive inter-nuntius inter eum Pisonemque fuit, sive ut Neronis gratiam pararet, qui infensus Senecae omnes ad eum opprimendum artes conquirebat. Tum cognito Natalis indicio Scaevinus quoque pari inbecillitate, an cuncta iam patefacta credens nec 10 mortem adprobaret. Inmotus his et paululum in publico versatus, post domi secretus, animum adversum suprema firmabat, donec manus militum adveniret, quos Nero tirones aut stipendiis recentes delegerat : nam vetus miles timebatur tamquam favore inbutus. Obiit abruptis brachiorum venis. Testamentum foedis adversus Neronem adulationibus amoris uxoris dedit, quam degenerem et sola corporis forma commendatam amici matrimonio abstulerat. 60. Proximam necem Plautii Laterani consulis designati Nero adiungit, adeo propere, ut non complecti liberos, non illud breve mortis arbitrium permetteret. Raptus in locum servilibus poenis sepositum manu Statii tribuni trucidatur, plenus constantis silentii nec tribuno obiciens eandem conscientiam. 5

Sequitur caedes Annaei Senecae, laetissima principi, non quia coniurationis manifestum compererat, sed ut ferro grassaretur, quando venenum non processerat. Solus quippe Natalis et hactenus prompsit, missum se ad aegrotum Senecam, uti viseret conquerereturque cur Pisonem aditu arceret : melius fore, si amicitiam familiari congressu exercuissent. Et respondisse Senecam sermones mutuos et crebra colloquia neutri conducere ; ceterum salutem suam incolumitate Pisonis inniti. placing it on a block. The officer was expected to cut it off at a single blow. In this case the executioner was an accomplice. His hand trembled, and the first blow only wounded Lateranus, who drew back his head for a moment and then extended it again. Before his death, when the freedman Epaphroditus questioned him, he answered : "If I want anything I will let your master know."

61. Seneca missum ad se Natalem conquestumque nomine Pisonis quod a visendo eo prohiberetur, seque rationem valetudinis et amorem quietis excusavisse respondit. Cur salutem privati hominis incolumitati suae anteferret, causam non ha-
 5 buisse; nec sibi promptum in adulationes ingenium. Idque nulli magis gnarum quam Neroni, qui saepius libertatem Senecae quam servitium expertus esset. Ubi haec a tribuno relata sunt Poppaea et Tigellino coram, quod erat saevienti principi intimum consiliorum, interrogat an Seneca voluntariam mortem
 10 pararet. Tum tribunus nulla pavoris signa, nihil triste in verbis eius aut vultu deprensum confirmavit. Ergo regredi et indicere mortem iubetur. Tradit Fabius Rusticus non eo quo venerat itinere redisse tribunum, sed flexisse ad Faenium praefectum, et expositis Caesaris iussis an obtemperaret interrogavisse, 15 monitumque ab eo ut exsequeretur, fatali omnium ignavia. Nam et Silvanus inter coniuratos erat augebatque scelera, in quorum ultionem consenserat. Voci tamen et aspectui pepercit intromisitque ad Senecam unum ex centurionibus, qui necessitatem ultimam denuntiaret.

citiae laturos. Simul lacrimas eorum modo sermone, modo intentior in modum coercentis, ad firmitudinem revocat, rogitans ubi praecepta sapientiae, ubi tot per annos meditata ratio adversum imminetia? Cui enim ignaram fuisse saevitiam Neronis? Neque aliud superesse post matrem fratremque in- 10 terfectos quam ut educatoris praeceptorisque necem adiceret.

— 63. Ubi haec atque talia velut in commune disseruit, com- plectitur uxorem, et paululum adversus praesentem fortitudinem mollitus rogat oratque temperaret dolorem neu aeternum sus- ciperet, sed in contemplatione vitae per virtutem actae deside- rium mariti solaciis honestis toleraret. Illa contra sibi quoque 5 destinatam mortem adseverat manumque percussoris exposcit. Tum Seneca gloriae eius non adversus, simul amore, ne sibi unice dilectam ad iniurias relinqueret, “vitae” inquit “deleni- menta monstraveram tibi, tu mortis decus mavis: non invidebo exemplo. Sit huius tam fortis exitus constantia penes utros- 10 que par, claritudinis plus in tuo fine.” Post quae eodem ictu brachia ferro exsolvunt. Seneca, quoniam senile corpus et parco victu tenuatum lenta effugia sanguini praebebat, crurum quoque et poplitum venas abrumpit. Saevisque cruciatibus defessus, ne dolore suo animum uxoris infringeret atque ipse 15 visendo eius tormenta ad inpatientiam delaberetur, suadet in aliud cubiculum abscedere. Et novissimo quoque momento suppeditante eloquentia advocatis scriptoribus pleraque tradidit, quae in vulgus edita eius verbis invertere supersedeo.

crurum—et poplitum venas. The blood-vessels which approach the surface at the ankles and under the knees.

14. Saevisque cruciatibus. The body is attacked by convulsions when nearly drained of blood.

18. advocatis scriptoribus. Short- hand was much employed by the Romans. Their method is lost, but they were able to keep up with a speech or conversa- tion.

19. invertere supersedeo. The an- cients, regarding the form rather than the substance of history, required that all documents should be presented by the his- torian in his own style, and conveniently abbreviated.

incertum an ignarae. Nam, ut est vulgus ad deteriora promptum, non defuere qui crederent, donec inplacabilem Neronem timuerit, famam sociatae cum marito mortis petivisse, deinde oblata mitiore spe blandimentis vitae evictam; cui addidit paucos postea annos, laudabili in maritum memoria et ore ac membris in eum pallorem albentibus, ut ostentui esset multum 10 vitalis spiritus egestum. Seneca interim, durante tractu et lentitudine mortis, Statium Annaeum, diu sibi amicitiae fide et arte medicinae probatum, orat provisum pridem venenum, quo damnati publico Atheniensium iudicio extinguerentur, promeret; adlatumque hausit frustra, frigidus iam artus et cluso 15 corpore adversum vim veneni. Postremo stagnum calidae aquae introiit, respergens proximos servorum addita voce, libare se liquorem illum Iovi liberatori. Exim balneo inlatus et vapore eius exanimatus, sine ullo funeris sollemni crematur. Ita codicillis praescripserat, cum etiam tum praedives et prae-20 potens supremis suis consuleret.

65. Fama fuit Subrium Flavum cum centurionibus occulto consilio, neque tamen ignorante Seneca, destinavisse, ut post occisum opera Pisonis Neronem Piso quoque interficeretur tradereturque imperium Senecae, quasi insontibus claritudine virtutum ad summum fastigium delecto. Quin et verba Flavi vulgabantur, non referre dedecori, si citharoedus demoveretur et tragoedus succederet, quia ut Nero cithara, ita Piso tragico ornatu canebat.

64. 4. incertum an ignarae. "Probably after she was unconscious." Incertain an is affirmative in Tacitus, who believed in the devotion of Paulina, and does not follow the report of Dio Cassius that she was practically compelled by her husband to have her veins opened.

9. albentibus. A deadly paleness, opposed to the candor of health. Ore refers to lips and cheeks.

12. venenum. The cicuta aquosa by which Socrates died. To take effect, it must be carried by the circulation to the extremities, and Seneca's exhaustion prevented this.

14. artus. Int. 22.

15. stagnum. A stone basin.

17. liquorem illum. The blood. Cf. XVI. 35.

Iovi liberatori, who would deliver him from the tyrant. Greeks poured a libation from their poisoned cup to Mercury, as guide of souls to rest.—Val. Max. II. 6, 8.

65. 4. insontibus—delecto. The choice of innocent men. The debauched nobles preferred the luxurious Piso, but the governing qualities of earlier Rome were now only found among the legions, which controlled the empire after the death of Nero.

6. non referre dedecori. "It made no difference so far as the disgrace was concerned" (Int. 25).

7. tragico ornatu. "Piso Calpurnius, ut Probus inquit, antiqua familia, scaenico habitu tragoedias actitavit: in latrunculorum lusu (draughts) tam perfectus et callidus ut ad eum ludentem concurreretur."—Schol. ad Juv. V. 109.

66. Ceterum militaris quoque conspiratio non ultra fefellit, accensis indicibus ad prodendum Faenium Rufum, quem eundem conscium et inquisitorem non tolerabant. Ergo instanti minitantiue renidens Scaevinus neminem ait plura scire quam ipsum, hortaturque ultro redderet tam bono principi vicem. 5 Non vox adversum ea Faenio, non silentium, sed verba sua praepediens et pavoris manifestus, ceterisque et maxime Cervario Proculo equite Romano ad convincendum eum conisis, iussu imperatoris a Cassio milite, qui ob insigne corporis robur adstabat, corripitur vinciturque. 10

67. Mox eorundem indicio Subrius Flavus tribunus pervertitur, primo dissimilitudinem morum ad defensionem trahens, neque se armatum cum inermibus et effeminatis tantum facinus consociaturum; dein, postquam urguebatur, confessionis gloriam amplexus. Interrogatusque a Nerone, quibus causis ad oblivionem sacramenti processisset, "oderam te" inquit, "nec quisquam tibi fidelior militum fuit, dum amari meruisti. Odisse coepi, postquam parricida matris et uxoris, auriga et histrio et incendiarius extitisti." Ipsa rettuli verba, quia non, ut Senecae, volgata erant, nec minus nosci decebat militaris viri 10 sensus incompertos et validos. Nihil in illa coniuratione gravius auribus Neronis accidisse constitit, qui ut faciendis sceleribus promptus, ita audiendi quae faceret insolens erat. Poena Flavi Veiano Nigro tribuno mandatur. Is proximo in agro scrobem effodi iussit, quam visam Flavus ut humilem et angustam in- 15 crepans, circumstantibus militibus, "ne hoc quidem" inquit "ex disciplina." Admonitusque fortiter protendere cervicem, "utinam" ait "tu tam fortiter ferias!" et ille multum tremens, cum vix duobus ictibus caput amputavisset, saevitiam apud Neronem iactavit, sesquiplaga interfectum a se dicendo. 20

20. sesquiplaga. Compare Caligula's standing direction to the executioner: "Ita feri ut se mori sentiat."

68. 3. non aliter tot flagitiis ejus subveniri potuisse. Dio Cassius ren-subveniri potuisse. Tum iussam poenam subiit. Nec ceteri 5 centuriones in perpetiendis suppliciis degeneravere: at non Faenio Rufo par animus, sed lamentationes suas etiam in testamentum contulit.

Opperiebatur Nero, ut Vestinus quoque consul in crimen attraheretur, violentum et infensum ratus: sed ex coniuratis 10 consilia cum Vestino non miscuerant, quidam vetustis in eum simultatibus, plures, quia praecipitem et insociabilem credebant.
 Ceterum Neroni odium adversus Vestinum ex intima sodalitate coeperat, dum hic ignaviam principis penitus cognitam despicit, ille ferociam amici metuit, saepe asperis facetiis in-15 lus, quae ubi multum ex vero traxere, acrem sui memoriam relinquunt. Accesserat repens causa, quod Vestinus Statilium Messalinam matrimonio sibi iunxerat, haud nescius inter adulteros eius et Caesarem esse.

69. Igitur non crimine, non accusatore existente, quia speciem iudicis induere non poterat, ad vim dominationis conversus Gerellanium tribunum cum cohorte militum inmitit iubetque praevenire conatus consulis, occupare velut arcem 5 eius, opprimere delectam iuventutem, quia Vestinus imminentes foro aedes decoraque servitia et pari aetate habebat. Cuncta eo die munia consulis impleverat conviviumque celebrabat, nihil metuens an dissimulando metu, cum ingressi milites vocari eum a tribuno dixere. Ille nihil demoratus exsurgit et omnia 10 simul properantur: clauditur cubiculo, praesto est medicus, ders it: "ὅτι ἄλλως σοι βοηθήσαι οὐκ ἔδυνάμην." Plato, in the Gorgias, shows that, in the case of a criminal who is beyond repentance, the greatest kindness to him and to the world is to put him out of it, that he may not become more wicked.

6. lamentationes suas. VI. 38, N.

11. insociabilem credebant. Shakspere, Julius Caesar, II. 1—

"Cas. But what of Cicero? Shall we sound him?"

I think he will stand very strong with us. . . .

Bru. O, name him not; let us not break with him;

For he will never follow anything
 That other men begin.

Cas. Then leave him out."

16. repens. "Recent."

69. 4. velut. Int. 10.

5. imminentes foro aedes. Real estate on the forum was dear (§ 42, N.), and the mansions here were erected on small lots, and of great height, contrary to the usual custom (VI. 45, N.). Piso had such a house (III. 9). The neighbourhood of the palace made the place fashionable.

6. decoraque servitia. The later Romans matched their tall litter-bearers as they would teams of horses (§ 57, N.).

7. munia consulis. The consuls presided as chairmen of the senate (IV. 8, N.) on alternate days.

8. dissimulando metu. Dative of end.

10. praesto est medicus. Suet. Nero, 37, "Mori jussis non amplius quam horarum spatium dabat. Ac ne quid morae interveniret, medicos admovebat, qui cunctantes continuo curarent; ita enim vocabat, venas mortis gratia incidere."

abscinduntur venae, vicens adhuc balneo infertur, calida aqua mersatur, nulla edita voce qua semet miseraretur. Circumdati interim custodia qui simul discubuerant, nec nisi provecta nocte omissi sunt, postquam pavorem eorum, ex mensa exitium operientium, et imaginatus et inridens Nero satis supplicii luisse 15 pro epulis consularibus.

70. Exim Annaei Lucani caedem imperat. Is profluente sanguine ubi frigescere pedes manusque et paulatim ab extremis cedere spiritum fervido adhuc et compote mentis pectore intellegit, recordatus carmen a se compositum, quo vulneratum militem per eius modi mortis imaginem obisse tradiderat, versus 5 ipsos rettulit, eaque illi suprema vox fuit. Senecio posthac et Quintianus et Scaevinus non ex priore vitae mollitia, mox reliqui coniuratorum periere, nullo facto dictove memorando.

71. Sed compleri interim urbs funeribus, Capitolium victimis; alius filio, fratre alius aut propinquo aut amico interfec- tis, agere grates deis, ornare lauru domum, genua ipsius advolvi et dextram osculis fatigare. Atque ille gaudium id credens Antonii Natalis et Cervarii Proculi festinata indicia inpunitate 5 remuneratur. Milichus praemiis ditatus conservatoris sibi nomen, Graeco eius rei vocabulo, adsumpsit. E tribunis Gavius Silvanus, quamvis absolutus, sua manu cecidit; Statius Proximus veniam, quam ab imperatore acceperat, vanitate exitus corripit. Exuti dehinc tribunatu * * Pompeius, Cornelius 10 Martialis, Flavius Nepos, Statius Domitius, quasi principem non quidem odissent, sed tamen existimarentur. Novio Prisco per amicitiam Senecae, et Glitio Gallo atque Annio Pollioni infamatis magis quam convictis data exilia. Priscum Artoria Flaccilla coniunx comitata est, Gallum Egnatia Maximilla, 15

16. pro epulis consularibus. "For dining at the consul's."

70. 4. carmen. "Some lines." A passage in the Pharsalia describes the death of a man torn asunder in the sea-fight at Massilia:

"ruptis cadit undique venis:
Discursusque animae diversa in membra meat Interceptus aquis."—III. 639, seqq.

3. ipsius = Neronis.

6. conservatoris—nomen. Σωτήρ.

9. vanitate exitus corripit. Silvanus had not been convicted, but escaped the tyrant's service by suicide. Proximus, after begging his life from the emperor, imitated his comrade's death in a spirit of vanity. Besides these four, deposed on suspicion, three others were implicated in the conspiracy, so that only two (Gerellanus and Niger) of the nine tribunes were left in office.

66. 819. C. LUCCIUS TELESINUS; C. SÜETONIUS PAULLINUS II.

1. Inlusit dehinc Neroni fortuna per vanitatem ipsius et promissa Caeselli Bassi, qui origine Poenus, mente turbida, nocturnae quietis imaginem ad spem haud dubiae rei traxit, vectusque Romam, principis aditum emercatus, expromit re-
 5 pertum in agro suo specum altitudine inmensa, quo magna vis auri containeretur, non in formam pecuniae, sed rudi et antiquo pondere. Lateres quippe praegraves iacere, adstantibus parte alia columnis; quae per tantum aevi occulta augendis praesentibus bonis. Ceterum, ut coniectura demonstrabat, Dido
 10 Phoenissam Tyro profugam condita Carthagine illas opes abdidisse, ne novus populus nimia pecunia lasciviret, aut reges Numidarum, et alias infensi, cupidine auri ad bellum accenderentur.

2. Igitur Nero, non auctoris, non ipsius negotii fide satis spectata nec missis per quos nosceret an vera adferrentur, auget ultro rumorem mittitque qui velut paratam praedam adveherent. Dantur triremes et delectum remigium iuvandae

4. emercatus. By bribes to the chamberlains, as was customary (IV. 2, N.).

6. non in formam pecuniae. Money was first coined at Miletus and Aegina in the eighth century B.C.

7. Lateres—columnis. Ingots and bars.

9. ut coniectura demonstrabat. As Bassus tried to prove by conjecture.

12. et alias infensi. According to Vergil, King Iarbas of Numidia was offended because Dido refused him her hand. In the time of Quintilian the Greek accusative of women's names in o had superseded the Latin form, which Caesar tried to introduce. Hence Dido (Διδώ), not Didonem.

2. 4. delectum remigium. "Picked rowers" to hasten the voyage (Int. 2).

festinationi. Nec aliud per illos dies populus credulitate, 5 prudentes diversa fama tulere. Ac forte quinquennale ludicrum secundo lustro celebrabatur, ab oratoribusque praecipua materia in laudem principis adsumpta est. Non enim solitas tantum fruges nec confusum metallis aurum gigni, sed nova ubertate provenire terram et obvias opes deferre deos, quaeque alia 10 summa facundia nec minore adulatione servilia fingeant, securi de facilitate credentis.

3. Gliscebat interim luxuria spe inani, consumebanturque veteres opes quasi oblati quas multos per annos prodigeret.
 Quin et inde iam largiebatur; et divitiarum expectatio inter causas paupertatis publicae erat. Nam Bassus, effosso agro suo latisque circum arvis, dum hunc vel illum locum promissi 5 specus adseverat, sequunturque non modo milites sed populus agrestium efficiendo operi adsumptus, tandem posita vaecordia, non falsa antea somnia sua seque tunc primum elusum ad-mirans, pudorem et metum morte voluntaria effugit. Quidam vinctum ac mox dimissum tradidere ademptis bonis in locum 10 regiae gazae.

4. Interea senatus, propinquo iam lustrali certamine, ut dedecus averteret, offert imperatori victoriam cantus adicitque facundiae coronam, qua ludicra deformitas velaretur. Sed Nero nihil ambitu nec potestate senatus opus esse dicitans, se aequum adversum aemulos et religione iudicum meritam laudem 5 adsecuturum, primo carmen in scaena recitat; mox flagitante vulgo ut omnia studia sua publicaret (haec enim verba dixere) ingreditur theatrum, cunctis citharae legibus obtemperans, ne fessus resideret, ne sudorem nisi ea quam indutui gerebat veste detergeret, ut nulla oris aut narium excrementa viserentur. 10 Postremo flexus genu et coetum illum manu veneratus sententias iudicum opperiebatur ficto pavore. Et plebs quidem urbis, histrionum quoque gestus iuvare solita, personabat certis modis plausuque composito. Crederes laetari, ac fortasse laetabantur per incuriam publici flagitii.

5. Sed qui remotis e municipiis severaque adhuc et antiqui moris retinente Italia, quique per longinquas provincias lascivia inexperti officio legationum aut privata utilitate advenerant, neque aspectum illum tolerare neque labori inhonesto sufficere, cum manibus nesciis fatiscerent, turbarent gnaros ac saepe a militibus verberarentur, qui per cuneos stabant, ne quod temporis momentum inpari clamore aut silentio segni praeteriret. Constitit plerosque equitum, dum per angustias aditus et ingruentem multitudinem enituntur, obtritos, et alios, dum diem noctemque sedilibus continuant, morbo exitiabili correptos. Quippe gravior inerat metus, si spectaculo defuissent, multis palam et pluribus occultis, ut nomina ac voltus, alacritatem tristitiamque coeuntium scrutarentur. Unde tenuioribus statim inrogata supplicia, adversum inlustres dissimulatum ad praesens et mox redditum odium. Ferebantque Vespasianum, tamquam somno coniveret, a Phoebio liberto increpitum aegreque meliorum precibus obtectum, mox imminentem perniciem maiore fato effugisse.

6. Post finem ludicri Poppaea mortem obiit, fortuita mariti iracundia, a quo gravida ictu calcis adflicta est. Neque enim venenum crediderim, quamvis quidam scriptores tradant, odio magis quam ex fide: quippe liberorum cupiens et amoris uxoris obnoxius erat. Corpus non igni abolitum, ut Romanus mos, sed regum externorum consuetudine differtum odoribus conditur tumuloque Iuliorum infertur. 7. Mortem Poppaeae ut palam tristem, ita recordantibus laetam ob inpudicitiam eius saevitiamque, nova insuper invidia Nero complevit prohibendo C. Cassium officio exsequiarum, quod primum indicium mali. Neque in longum dilatum est, sed Silanus additur, nullo crimine, nisi quod Cassius opibus 5 vetustis et gravitate morum, Silanus claritudine generis et modesta iuventa praecelebant. Igitur missa ad senatum oratione removendos a re publica utrosque disseruit, obiectavitque Cassio quod inter imagines maiorum etiam C. Cassi effigiem coluisset, ita inscriptam “duci partium”: quippe semina belli 10 civilis et defectionem a domo Caesarum quaesitam. Ac ne memoria tantum infensi nominis ad discordias uteretur, adsumpsisse L. Silanum, iuvenem genere nobilem, animo praeruptum, quem novis rebus ostentaret.

8. Ipsum dehinc Silanum increpuit isdem quibus patrum eius Torquatum, tamquam disponderet iam imperii curas praeficeretque rationibus et libellis et epistulis libertos, inania simul et falsa: nam Silanus intentior metu et exitio patru ad praecavendum exterritus erat. fratris filio et diros sacrorum ritus confingerent. Trahebantur ut conscii Volcatius Tullinus ac Marcellus Cornelius senatores et Calpurnius Fabatus eques Romanus ; qui appellato principe
 10 instantem damnationem frustrati, mox Neronem circa summa scelera distentum quasi minores evasere.

9. Tunc consulto senatus Cassio et Silano exilia decernuntur : de Lepida Caesar statueret. Deportatusque in insulam Sardiniam Cassius, et senectus eius exspectabatur. Silanus, tamquam Naxum deveheretur, Ostiam amotus ; post municipio
 5 Apuliae, cui nomen Barium est, clauditur. Illic indignissimum casum sapienter tolerans, a centurione ad caedem misso corripitur ; suadentique venas abrumpere, animum quidem morti destinatum ait, sed non remittere percussori gloriam ministerii. At centurio quamvis inermem, praevalidum tamen et irae quam
 10 timori propiorem cernens premi a militibus iubet. Nec omisit Silanus obniti et intendere ictus, quantum manibus nudis valebat, donec a centurione vulneribus adversis tamquam in pugna caderet.

10. Haud minus prompte L. Vetus socrusque eius Sextia et Pollitta filia necem subiere, invisi principi tamquam vivendo exprobrarent interfectum esse Rubellium Plautum, generum L. Veteris. Sed initium detegendae saevitiae praebuit interversis
 5 patroni rebus ad accusandum transgrediens Fortunatus libertus, adscito Claudio Demiano, quem ob flagitia vinctum a Vetere Asiae pro consule exsolvit Nero in praemium accusationis. Quod ubi cognitum reo, seque et libertum pari sorte componi, Formianos in agros digreditur. Illic eum milites occulta cus-
 10 todia circumdant. Aderat filia, super ingruens periculum longo dolore atrox, ex quo percussores Plauti mariti sui viderat ; cruentamque cervicem eius amplexa servabat sanguinem et vestes respersas, vidua inpexa luctu continuo nec ullis alimentis nisi quae mortem arcerent. audiret insontem neve consulatus sui quondam collegam dederet liberto, modo muliebri eiulatu, aliquando sexum egressa voce infensa clamitabat, donec princeps immobilem se precibus et invidiae iuxta ostendit.

11. Ergo nuntiat patri abicere spem et uti necessitate: simul adfertur parari cognitionem senatus et trucem sententiam. Nec defuere qui monerent magna ex parte heredem Caesarem nuncupare atque ita nepotibus de reliquo consulere. Quod aspernatus, ne vitam proxime libertatem actam novissimo servitio foedaret, largitur in servos quantum aderat pecuniae; et si qua asportari possent, sibi quemque deducere, tris modo lectulos ad suprema retineri iubet. Tunc eodem in cubiculo, eodem ferro abscindunt venas, properique et singulis vestibus ad verecundiam velati balineis inferuntur, pater filiam, avia neptem, illa utrosque intuens, et certatim precantes labenti animae celerem exitum, ut relinquerent suos superstites et morituros. Servavitque ordinem fortuna, ac seniores prius, tum cui prima aetas extinguuntur. Accusati post sepulturam decretumque ut more maiorum punirentur. At Nero intercessit, mortem sine arbitro permittens. Ea caedibus peractis ludibria adiciebantur.

5 depopulabatur, nulla caeli intemperie, quae occurreret oculis. Sed domus corporibus exanimis, itinera funeribus complebantur; non sexus, non aetas periculo vacua; servitia perinde et ingenua plebes raptim extinguere, inter coniugum et liberorum lamenta, qui dum adsident, dum deflent, saepe eodem rogo cremabantur.

14. Illyricis legionibus. Including those of Pannonia and Moesia.

15. Cladem Lugdunensem. Lyons had been burned to the ground in A.D. 58, but as that was now seven years ago, and Lyons had sent relief to Rome after the fire of 64, Nipperdey supposes that some new disaster must have occurred. Nero's contribution (£33,000) was not a lavish one for him.

5. ejusdem loci. An unknown island.

8. non frustra ratus. Sosianus suspected that there was something at the bottom of these messages and astrological calculations; perhaps something that trari cognoscit. Neque nescium habebat Anteiū caritate Agrippinae invisum Neroni opesque eius praecipuas ad elicien- 10 dam cupidinem eamque causam multis exitio esse. Igitur interceptis Antei literis, furatus etiam libellos, quibus dies genitalis eius et eventura secretis Pammenis occultabantur, simul repertis quae de ortu vitaeque Ostorii Scapulae composita erant, scribit ad principem magna se et quae incolumitati eius 15 conducerent adlaturum, si brevem exilii veniam inpetravisset:

 quippe Anteiū et Ostorium imminere rebus et sua Caesarisque fata scrutari. Exim missae liburnicae advehiturque propere Sosianus. Ac vulgato eius indicio inter damnatos magis quam inter reos Anteius Ostoriusque habebantur, adeo ut testamentum 20 Antei nemo obsignaret, nisi Tigellinus auctor extitisset, monito prius Anteio ne supremas tabulas moraretur. Atque ille hausto veneno, tarditatem eius perosus intercisis venis mortem adpro-peravit.

15. Ostorius longinquis in agris apud finem Ligurum id temporis erat. Eo missus centurio, qui caedem eius maturaret.
 Causa festinandi ex eo oriebatur, quod Ostorius multa militari fama et civicam coronam apud Britanniam meritis, ingenti vi corporis armorumque scientia metum Neroni fecerat, ne in- 5 vaderet pavidum semper et reperta nuper coniuratione magis exterritum. Igitur centurio, ubi effugia villae clausit, iussa inperatoris Ostorio aperit. Is fortitudinem saepe adversum hostes spectatam in se vertit: et quia venae quamquam inter-ruptae parum sanguinis effundebant, hactenus manu servi usus, 10 ut inmotum pugionem extolleret, adpressit dextram eius iugulo-que occurrit.

to head the list. At the same time he warned Anteius to make his will effective by dying speedily (VI. 29, N.).

 modo exsequiis a promisca sepultura separantur, ita in traditione supremorum accipiant habeantque propriam memoriam.

 Cerialis Anicius, Rufrius Crispinus, T. Petronius cecidere, Mela

 quondam praefectus praetorii et consularibus insignibus donatus 5 ac nuper crimine coniurationis in Sardiniam exactus, accepto iussae mortis nuntio semet interfecit. Mela, quibus Gallio et Seneca parentibus natus, petitione honorum abstinerat per am-bitionem praeposteram, ut eques Romanus consularibus potentia aequaretur ; simul acquirendae pecuniae brevius iter credebat 10 per procuraciones administrandis principis negotiis. Idem Annaeum Lucanum genuerat, grande adiumentum claritudinis.
 Quo interfecto dum rem familiarem eius acriter requirit, accusatorem concivit Fabium Romanum, ex intimis Lucani amicis.
 Mixta inter patrem filiumque coniurationis scientia fingitur, nerve the mind by sadness.

Neque aliam defensionem. My only excuse for describing these tame and wearisome deaths, says Tacitus, is this :
 If I attempted to pass them over in silence, I should be accused of feeling personal enmity (oderim) towards them or their families.

8. Ira illa numinum. Cf. *Fatali were allowed to hold this office, lest they should abuse it to gain means for political advancement.

12. accusatorem concivit. Fabius Romanus had probably been indebted to Lucan, and the father, by insisting on the payment due to his son's estate, incurred the man's ill will. Lucan's goods had not been wholly confiscated, because he anticipated by suicide the decree of the senate (IV. 20, N.).

pecuniam in Tigellinum generumque eius Cossutianum Capitonem erogabat, quo cetera manerent. Additur codicillis, tamquam de iniquitate exitii querens ita scripsisset, se quidem 20 mori nullis supplicii causis, Rufrium autem Crispinum et Anicium Cerialem vita frui infensos principi. Quae composita credebantur de Crispino, quia interfectus erat, de Ceriale, ut interficeretur. Neque enim multo post vim sibi attulit, minore quam ceteri miseratione, quia proditam Gaio Caesari coniurationem ab eo meminerant. 25

18. De C. Petronio pauca supra repetenda sunt. Nam illi dies per somnum, nox officiis et oblectamentis vitae transigebatur; utque alios industria, ita hunc ignavia ad famam protulerat, habebaturque non ganeo et profligator, ut plerique sua haurientium, sed erudito luxu. Ac dicta factaque eius quanto 5 solutiora et quandam sui negligentiam praeferentia, tanto gratius in speciem simplicitatis accipiebantur. Pro consule tamen Bithyniae et mox consul vigentem se ac parem negotiis ostendit. Dein revolutus ad vitia, seu vitiorum imitatione, inter paucos familiarium Neroni adsumptus est, elegantiae arbiter, dum nihil 10 amoenum et molle adfluentia putat, nisi quod ei Petronius adprobavisset. Unde invidia Tigellini quasi adversus aemulum et scientia voluptatum potioem. Ergo crudelitatem principis, cui ceterae libidines cedebant, adgreditur, amicitiam Scaevini Petronio obiectans, corrupto ad indicium servo ademptaque 15 defensione et maiore parte familiae in vincla rapta.

19. Additur codicillis. This was a forgery of Nero's, who thus excused the murder of Crispinus, and paved the way for that of Cerealis. It was not uncommon to insert complaints and other matter in wills (VI. 38, N.).

18. 7. In speciem simplicitatis. He affected perfect frankness and naïveté.

Pro consule tamen Bithyniae. I. 74, N.

9. seu vitiorum imitatione. Perhaps he found that vice was the only profitable course at Nero's court, and applied his intelligence to devise perfect luxury, as he had previously displayed it in good government.

10. elegantiae arbiter. He became Master of Good Taste at court.

nihil amoenum. Nero, on account of his satiety in pleasure (affluentia), thought that no amusement was sufficiently ingenious and refined unless it had received the sanction of Petronius.

11. Neronem—adulatus est. He did not condescend to flatter Nero in order to preserve his property for his daughter Pontia. (She was executed soon after.)

12. sub nominibus. To show how accurate his knowledge of Nero's vices was, he expressly named the court favourites.

14. Fregitque anulum. He feared that Nero might use it after his death to forge false evidence against others, as had been done in the case of Annaeus Mela (§ 17, N.). Petronius also broke a unique murrhine dish, which he knew the emperor coveted.

20. 2. offertur Silia. When Nero begins to wonder how the character of his nightly amusements could be known to Petronius (who, bad as he was, had been kept in ignorance of the worst), some one suggests the name of Silia.

5. proprio odio. Silia's ruin was due to Nero's personal resentment; Minucius Thermus died because he had offended Tigellinus.

21. 4. cum de Agrippina referretur. When a vote of congratulation was passed after Agrippina was murdered (XIV. 12).

Antenore institutis habitu tragico cecinerat. Die quoque, quo praetor Antistius ob probra in Neronem composita ad mortem damnabatur, mitiora censuit obtinuitque; et cum deum honores 10 Poppaeae decernuntur, sponte absens, funeri non interfuerat. Quin et illa obiectabat, principio anni vitare Thraseam sollemne ius iurandum; nuncupationibus votorum non adesse, quamvis quindecimvirali sacerdotio praeditum; numquam pro salute principis aut caelesti voce immolavisse; adsidium olim et indefessum, qui vulgaribus quoque patrum consultis semet 5 fautorem aut adversarium ostenderet, triennio non introisse curiam; nuperrimeque, cum ad coercendos Silanum et Veterem certatim concurreretur, privatis potius clientium negotiis vacavisse. Secessionem iam id et partes et, si idem multi audeant, bellum esse. “Ut quondam C. Caesarem” inquit “et M. 10 Catonem, ita nunc te, Nero, et Thraseam avida discordiarum civitas loquitur. 23. At Baream Soranum iam sibi Ostorius Sabinus eques Romanus poposcerat reum ex proconsulatu Asiae, in qua offensiones principis auxit iustitia atque industria, et quia portui Ephesiorum aperiendo curam insumpserat vimque civitatis
5 Pergamenae, prohibentis Acratum Caesaris libertum statuas et picturas evehere, inultam omiserat. Sed crimini dabatur amicitia Plauti et ambitio conciliandae provinciae ad spes novas. Tempus damnationi delectum, quo Tiridates accipiendo Armeniae regno adventabat, ut ad externa rumoribus intestinum 10 scelus obscuraretur, an ut magnitudinem imperatoriam caede insignium virorum quasi regio facinore ostentaret.

24. Igitur omni civitate ad excipiendum principem spectandumque regem effusa, Thrasea occursum prohibitus non demisit animum, sed codicillos ad Neronem composuit, requirens obiecta et expurgaturum adseverans, si notitiam criminum et 5 copiam diluendi habuisset. Eos codicillos Nero properanter accepit, spe exterritum Thraseam scripsisse per quae claritudinem principis extolleret suamque famam dehonestaret. Quod ubi non evenit vultumque et spiritus et libertatem insontis ultro extimuit, vocari patres iubet.

24. 1. ad excipiendum principem. Nero arrived with Tiridates from Naples, and every one turned out to greet the prince, as they had done after he murdered his mother (XIV. 13). Thrasea, who before this had been forbidden to appear at the palace (XV. 23), is informed that he must not appear among the senators on this occasion.

5. properanter. "Eagerly." He received the tablets, and read them with impatience.

9. ultro extimuit. He dreaded Thrasea on his own side.

Aspiceret populus virum morti obvium, audiret senatus voces quasi ex aliquo numine supra humanas : posse ipso miraculo etiam Neronem per- moveri. Sin crudelitati insisteret, distingui certe apud posteros memoriam honesti exitus ab ignavia per silentium pereuntium.

26. Contra qui opperiendum domui censebant, de ipso Thrasea eadem, sed ludibria et contumelias imminere : subtraheret aures conviciis et probris. Non solum Cossutianum aut Eprium ad scelus promptos : superesse qui forsitan manus ictusque per immanitatem ingesturi sint ; etiam bonos metu sequi. Detraheret potius senatui, quem semper ornavisset, infamiam tanti flagitii, et relinqueret incertum quid viso Thrasea reo decreturi patres fuerint. Ut Neronem flagitiorum pudor caperet, inrita spe agitari ; multoque magis timendum ne in coniugem, in filiam, in cetera pignora eius saeviret. Proinde intemeratus, inpollutus, quorum vestigiis et studiis vitam duxerit, eorum gloria peteret finem. Aderat consilio Rusticus Arulenus, flagrans iuvenis, et cupidine laudis offerebat se intercessurum senatus consulto : nam plebei tribunus erat. Cohibuit spiritus eius Thrasea, ne vana et reo non profutura, intercessori exitiosa inciperet. Sibi actam aetatem, et tot per annos continuum vitae ordinem non deserendum : illi initium magistratum et integra quae supersint. 30. Atque interim Ostorius Sabinus Sorani accusator ingreditur orditurque de amicitia Rubellii Plauti, quodque proconsulatum Asiae Soranus pro claritate sibi potius adcommodatum quam ex utilitate communi egisset, alendo seditiones civitatum. Vetera haec: sed recens et quo discrimini patris filiam conectebat, quod pecuniam magis dilargita esset. Acciderat sane pietate Serviliae (id enim nomen puellae fuit), quae caritate erga parentem, simul imprudentia aetatis, non tamen aliud consultaverat quam de incolumitate domus, et an placabilis Nero, an cognitio senatus nihil atrox adferret. Igitur accita est in senatum, steteruntque diversi ante tribunal consulum grandis aevo parens, contra filia intra vicesimum aetatis annum, nuper marito Annio Pollione in exilium pulso viduata desolataque, ac ne patrem quidem intuens, cuius onerasse pericula videbatur.

5. venerabilis species does not mean that Thrasea was present. The thought of him filled their minds.

9. neque famosi carminis. His friends maintained that Montanus had written no pasquinades, and that only Nero's poetical jealousy banished him.

30. 1. ingreditur. Ostorius Sabinus, a simple eques, had no place in the senate, and waited at the door until the time came for him to accuse Soranus.

3. pro claritate. He charges Soranus with having regarded the proconsulate of Asia (the highest honour that a senator could enjoy, III. 32, N.) as merely a tribute due to his pre-eminence, and that he had encouraged the rivalry of its cities in order to fish in troubled waters.

5 subiret. Simul in amplexus occurrentis filiae ruebat, nisi interiecti lictores utrisque obstitissent. Mox datus testibus locus; et quantum misericordiae saevitia accusationis permoverat, tantum irae P. Egnatius testis concivit. Cliens hic Sorani, et tunc emptus ad opprimendum amicum, auctoritatem
10 Stoicae sectae praeferibat, habitu et ore ad exprimendam imaginem honesti exercitus, ceterum animo perfidiosus, subdolus, avaritiam ac libidinem occultans; quae postquam pecunia reclusa sunt, dedit exemplum praecavendi, quo modo fraudibus involutos aut flagitiis commaculatos, sic specie bonarum artium 15 falsos et amicitiae fallaces.

33. Idem tamen dies et honestum exemplum tulit Cassii Asclepiodoti, qui magnitudine opum praecipuus inter Bithynos, quo obsequio florentem Soranum celebraverat, labentem non deseruit, exutusque omnibus fortunis et in exilium actus, aequi-

Igitur flentes queritantesque qui aderant facessere propere Thrasea neu pericula sua miscere cum sorte damnati hortatur, Arriamque temptantem mariti suprema et exemplum Arriae matris sequi monet retinere vitam filiaeque communi subsidium unicum non adimere.

7. Italia depelluntur. Simple relegatio without confiscation.

Montanus patri concessus est. Montanus was forgiven for the sake of his father, a friend of Nero, and a noted epicure; but a warning was given that he must not enter public life, nor seek any office.

8. Eprio et Cossutiano. They received £42,000 each; Ostorius Sabinus, who was an eques, received £10,000 (I. 75, N.) and quaestorian rank (I. 15, N.), to make him eligible to the senate.

34. 1. quaestor consulis. Since 38 B.C. each consul had been allowed two quaestores for the transaction of his business.

3. coetum—egerat. For coegerat.

4. Cynicae institutionis. Cynics differed little from Stoics, except in an affected brusqueness and neglect of dress.

conjectare erat. Int. 43.

5. de natura animae. He was accustomed to say: "Nero can kill me, but not destroy me"—'Ο γὰρ Νέρων ἀποκτεῖναι! μὲν με δύναται, ἀπολέσαι δὲ οὐ δύναται.

12. filiaeque communi. Fanniae.

35. 6. Jovi liberatori. XV. 64, N.

7. juvenis. A quaestor was twenty-four to twenty-seven years old (III. 29, N.).

9. graves cruciatus. XV. 63, N.

10. obversis in Demetrium. Sc. oculis. See Schol. in Juv. V. 36.

[The remainder of the sixteenth book of the Annals is lost. It contained the events of the years 66, 67, and 68 A.D., thus connecting it with the Histories, which began with the year 69.]

INDEX.

Abdagaeses. VI. 36, 37, 43, 44. Treasurer to the king of Parthia. In A.D. 35 he engaged in the unsuccessful Revolution of Tiridates, who made him prime minister.

Abdus. VI. 31, 32. A eunuch at the court of Artabanus III. of Parthia. He conspired against his master, who had him poisoned, A.D. 35.

Abudius Buso. VI. 30. An ex-edile who accused Lentulus Gaetulicus of treason, A.D. 34. He was refuted, and banished for perjury.

Acbarus. XII. 12, 14. A king of the Arabs in Osrhoene. His treachery misled Meherdates when he invaded the Parthian empire in 49 A.D. According to Nipperdey he reigned A.D. 13 to 50.

On. Acerronius Proculus. VI. 45. Consul, A.D. 37. His statue, with an extant inscription, was erected in the Acropolis of Athens during his proconsulship of Achaia.

Acerronia Polla. XIV. 5. Daughter of the last and a friend of Agrippina. She perished in the wreck of Nero's ship.

Achaemenes. XII. 18. (Zend, Hak-hâmanishâ.) The great-great-grandfather of Cyrus the Great, and ancestor of Darius Hystaspes, from whom the royal line of Persia descended.

Achaia. I. 76, 80; II. 53; IV. 13; V. 10; VI. 24; XV. 45. A Roman province, including the whole of Greece except a part of Epirus (II. 53, N.). It was a senatorial province until A.D. 15, and was restored to the senate by Claudius. Vespasian revoked the freedom which had been given it by Nero. Ptolemy assigns Thessaly to the province of Macedonia, and Acarnania to Epirus. The name Achaia was originally and properly given to a strip of land on the north of the Peloponnesus (IV. 13).

Acilia Lucana. XV. 56, 71. Daughter of a famous Cordovan lawyer, and mother of the poet Lucan.

O. Acilius Aviola. III. 41. Legatus pro praetore of Gallia Lugdunensis (an office of consular dignity) in A.D. 21. He was proconsul of Asia in 38.

M'. Acilius Aviola. XII. 64. Consul A.D. 54; governor of Asturia; proconsul of Asia 65-66; curator aquarum, 74-97. Son of the last.

Acilius Strabo. XIV. 18. Appointed by Claudius to reclaim public lands then occupied by citizens of Cyrene. They appealed against his decisions, which were supported by Nero, A.D. 59.

Acratus. XV. 45; XVI. 23. ('Ακρατος.) A freedman of Nero, who employed him to pillage the Greek temples, A.D. 64.

Acte. XIII. 12, 46; XIV. 2. A concubine of Nero. Agrippina opposed and Seneca supported her influence. Nero talked of making her empress, but deserted her for Poppaea. After his fall in 69 it was Acte who buried him.

Actium. I. 3, 42; II. 53; IV. 5; XV. 23. A promontory of Acarnania, forming the south side of the Ambracian gulf, where Antony was defeated, B.C. 31. Augustus, in thanksgiving, enlarged the temple of Apollo on the headland, and revived ancient equestrian, gymnastic, and musical contests, which were thereafter celebrated once in five years.

Acutia. VI. 47. Wife of P. Vitellius. Convicted of treason A.D. 37.

Adgandestrius. II. 88. Prince of the Chatti. He offered to poison Arminius.

Adiabeni. XII. 13, 14; XV. 1, 4, 14. Inhabitants of the district about Nineveh, bounded by the Tigris, Lycus, and Armenian mountains. Their king was a Parthian vassal.

Adrana. I. 56. (Eder.) A confluent of the Weser, in Hesse Cassel.

Adrumetum. XI. 21. (Loosa.) A grain shipping town, 75 miles S.E. of Carthage, on the Sinus Neapolitanus. It now possesses 10,000 inhabitants, and interesting antiquities.

Aedul. III. 40, 45, 46; XI. 25. A tribe in Burgundy, near Augustodunum (Autun). They rebelled in A.D. 21. Claudius gave them the jus honorum in 48.

Aeetes. VI. 34. A fabulous king of Colchis. Father of Medea.

Aegæum Mare. V. 10; XV. 71. The Grecian Archipelago.

Aegeatae. Inhabitants of Aegæae in Mysia. II. 47. Their town was injured by an earthquake, A.D. 17.

Aegeae or Aegæae, in Cilicia. XIII. 8 (Kalassy). A port of Cilicia, on the bay of Issus.

Aegium. IV. 13. (Vostitza.) The chief city of Achaia proper, on the Corinthian gulf. It was injured by an earthquake in A.D. 23, and Tiberius proposed to remit its taxes for three years. Vostitza was almost destroyed by another earthquake in 1819.

Aegyptus. II. 59, 60; IV. 5; VI. 28; XI. 14. The valley of the Nile, running 600 miles from its mouth to Syene and the Cataracts. Except at the Delta the strip rescued from the desert by the river is but seven miles broad; but its fertility made the country important, and the excitable character of the population, joined with the natural defences of the country, made the Romans jealous of its control. The governor was an eques, appointed by the emperor; and no senator or eques illustris could enter it without passport. Two legions were stationed there. The Egyptian language and ritual were preserved under the Roman empire.

Aella Paetina. XII. 1. Daughter of a consul. Wife of Claudius, and mother of Antonia. She was divorced for a slight cause, but Narcissus proposed her for Claudius's wife a second time in A.D. 48.

Aelius Gallus. V. 8. The son of Sejanus, whose fate he shared, A.D. 31.

Aelius Gracilis. XIII. 53. Governor of Gallia Belgica, A.D. 55.

L. Aelius Lamia. IV. 13; VI. 27. The friend of Horace (Carm. I. 26; III. 17; Ep. I. 14). Served in Germany and Illyricum; consul A.D. 3; proconsul of Africa. Tiberius made him governor of Syria, but retained him at Rome through jealousy. Praefectus urbi in 32; honoured with a public funeral in 33.

L. Aelius Sejanus. Son of Seius Strabo, an eques and commander of the praetorians. His mother was a Junia, and he was probably adopted by Aelius Gallus. He was associated with his father in A.D. 14, succeeded him in 19, and had great influence with Tiberius. Aspiring to the empire, he divorced his wife Apicata, seduced Livilla, and persuaded her to poison her husband, Drusus Jr. He then asked the emperor for Livilla. Tiberius refused, but without cutting off hope, and Sejanus regained his influence by saving the emperor's life in the fall of a grotto at Fundi. Tiberius retired to Capreae, leaving Sejanus master of Rome, but was warned of his designs by Antonia Minor. He associated Sejanus with himself in the consulship, encouraged him to hope for the tribunician power and the hand of his step-daughter Julia, and surprised him by sending Macro to supersede him with the praetorians and impeach him in the senate. Sejanus was strangled in prison, his images were torn down, and his body torn in pieces by the people, A.D. 31. His family and friends also perished.

Q. Aellius Tubero. XVI. 22. Called the Stoic, from his stern philosophy. A contemporary and opponent of the Gracchi.

Aemilia Lepida. III. 22, 23. Banished for a catalogue of crimes, A.D. 20.

Aemilia Lepida. VI. 40. Daughter of M. Aemilius Lepidus, and wife of Drusus, the son of Germanicus. She betrayed him to her paramour Sejanus. Condemned for servile adultery, A.D. 36.

Aemilia Musa. II. 48. A woman of Greek extraction who died without heirs in A.D. 17.

M. Aemilius Lepidus. II. 67. Appointed with two other commissioners as guardian of Ptolemy V. of Egypt, B.C. 201. He afterwards held high offices at Rome.

M. Aemilius Lepidus. III. 27. Consul in B.C. 78 at Sulla's death. He led an army against the senate and city, but was defeated at the Mulvian Bridge, and died in exile.

M. Aemilius Lepidus. I. 1, 9. A favourite of Julius Caesar, at the time of whose death he commanded the army near Rome. This influence associated him with Octavian and Antony in the first triumvirate. His weaker nature succumbed to theirs, and his troops deserted to Octavian, whom he ventured to oppose in Sicily, B.C. 36. He remained pontifex maximus until his death in B.C. 13, residing at Circeii in honourable confinement. Son of the last.

M. Aemilius Lepidus. II. 48; III.

32, 72 ; VI. 40. A man of the highest rank, connected with the imperial family. Consul in A.D. 6. He was not wealthy, and his disposition was retiring. The senate granted him the proconsulship of Asia in A.D. 21, in spite of the opposition of Sex. Pompeius, and he was encouraged to restore the Basilica Pauli in the following year. He died A.D. 36.

Manius Aemilius Lepidus. I. 13 ; III. 11, 22, 35, 50 ; IV. 20, 56 ; VI. 5, 27. A man of high rank (III. 22, N.) and great ability. He won triumphal honours in the Pannonian war, was consul A.D. 11, and was mentioned by Augustus as a man imperii capax sed aspernans. He guarded himself against the jealousy of Tiberius, but endeavoured to relieve political criminals. In A.D. 21 he declined the province of Africa in favour of Blaesus, Sejanus's uncle. He was proconsul of Asia in 26, and died in 33.

M. Aemilius Lepidus. XIV. 2. Husband of Drusilla (daughter of Germanicus) and paramour of her sisters ; put to death A.D. 40 on charge of conspiring with Lentulus Gaetulicus against Caligula.

Aemilius Mamercus. XI. 22. See L. Valerius Potitus.

L. Aemilius Paulus. XII. 38. Defeated Perseus at Pydna B.C. 168, and enjoyed a three days' triumph over Macedon in 167.

M. Aemilius Scaurus. III. 66. Of a noble but reduced family. He became a great lawyer, statesman, and leader of the optimates. Elected to his second consulship, B.C. 107. On this occasion he and P. Rutilius Rufus brought charges of bribery against each other.

Mamercus Aemilius Scaurus. I. 13 ; III. 23, 31, 66 ; VI. 9, 29. Great-grandson of the last. He offended Tiberius by ironical compliments at his accession. He married Aemilia Lepida (who bore him a daughter), divorced her, and married Sextia, who had been the wife of his half-brother, L. Sulla. He was consul suffectus in A.D. 21 ; defended his stepson (and nephew) Sulla in the same year ; accused Junius Silanus in 22 ; escaped condemnation for treason in 32, and was ruined in 34. He had written a tragedy called Atreus, in which he warned a character to "endure the tyrant's madness." Macro added some words to point the passage against Tiberius, who said "that Scaurus might make an Atreus of him, but he would make an Ajax of Scaurus," i.e. force him to suicide, which he proceeded to do. Sextia shared her husband's fate. Scaurus was a good orator, but neglected his gifts. His works were burned by order of the senate. His wickedness and licentiousness were ineffable.

Aeneas. IV. 9 ; XII. 58. Honoured by the Caesars as father of Iulus, and founder of the Julian line.

Aeol. XI. 24. A mountain tribe on the upper Anio, defeated and almost destroyed by the Romans, B.C. 304.

Aequus. See Considius.

Aerias. III. 62. A mythical king of Cyprus.

Aesculapius. III. 63 ; IV. 14 ; XII. 61 ; XIV. 18. Son of Apollo, and physician of the gods. Especially worshipped at Epidaurus and its colony Cos, where a clan of priest-physicians claimed descent from him, and served his temple. Also worshipped at Pergamum, Cyprus, and Cyrene.

Aethiopia. II. 60. The mountainous country south of Egypt. Its Semitic population has changed little since Roman times.

Afer. See Domitius.

L. Afranius. IV. 34. A legatus of Pompey in Spain. He was defeated by Caesar and dismissed on parole, but rejoined his own party, fought at Pharsalia, and was taken and put to death while flying from Thapsus, B.C. 46.

Afranius Burrus. XII. 42 ; XIII. 2, 6, 20 ; XIV. 7, 15, 51. An honest and good soldier, appointed prefect of the praetorians by Agrippina in A.D. 51. He aided her in enthroning Nero, A.D. 54, but afterwards helped Seneca to oppose her bad influence, though he was accused of conspiring with her in 55. Circumstances obliged him to countenance Nero's matricide, but he was gradually estranged by his vicious course. He died in 62, and Nero probably poisoned him. His death left Seneca without a friend.

Afranius Quintilianus. XV. 49, 56, 70. A roué who joined Piso's conspiracy in A.D. 65. When the plot was discovered he turned state's evidence, but was executed, dying better than he had lived.

Africa. II. 52 ; III. 32, 48 ; IV. 5, 50 ; XI. 21. A Roman province on the south coast of the Mediterranean, between Mauretania and the Great Syrtis. It was divided into Zingitana (the old Carthaginian territory) and Numidia (added in B.C. 25). It was a senatorial province, second in dignity to Asia alone, but possessed a standing army of one legion, which Caligula removed.

L. Agerinus. XIV. 6. A freedman of Agrippina Jr., who bore her last messages to her son.

Agrestis. See Julius.

Agrippa. See Asinius, Fonteius, Haterius, Vipsanius.

Agrippa Postumus. I. 3, 4, 5, 6, 53; III. 30. A posthumous son of M. Vipsanius Agrippa, born B.C. 12, and adopted by Augustus A.D. 4. Livia, who saw in him a rival to Tiberius, had him banished to Planasia on charge of ill manners and brutality; prevented a reconciliation between him and his grandfather; and had him murdered in A.D. 14, as soon as Augustus was dead.

Agrippa Herodes (I.) XII. 23. Grandson of Herod the Great, imprisoned at Capreae by Tiberius, made tetrarch of North Palestine by Caligula, and king of Palestine by Claudius. In 44 A.D. he beheaded the apostle James, and died at Caesarea the same year, being eaten by worms.

Agrippa Herodes (II.) XIII. 7. Son of the last. King of Chalcis in Syria, A.D. 48; of northern Palestine, 54; served against the Parthians in 54, and received more territory. Paul made his defence before him in 60. When Jerusalem fell in 70 he went to Rome with his sister Bernice, the favourite of Titus, and died there at the age of seventy.

Agrippina Sr. I. 33, 42, 69; II. 42, 43, 54, 71, 75; III. 1; IV. 12, 52, 53, 54; V. 3, 4; VI. 25; XIV. 63. Daughter of M. Agrippa by Julia, daughter of Augustus. She was with her husband Germanicus in the camp on the Rhine when Augustus died, and regret at losing her presence checked the mutinous legions. In 15 she saved the routed army of Caecina by refusing to allow the destruction of the Rhine Bridge. In 17 she accompanied her husband to the east, and brought back his ashes. Tiberius and Livia dreaded her and her sons as rivals for the empire, and Sejanus, through policy, inflamed their mutual suspicions. When Livia died in 29, Tiberius, being now lost to shame, accused Agrippina and her children of treason. The hesitation of the senate and riot of the people increased his fears, and he forced the senators to vote a sentence which was held in abeyance a year and more. Then the princess was banished to Pandataria, where she survived her sons Nero and Drusus, and her enemy Sejanus. Finding Tiberius still implacable, she starved herself, A.D. 33.

Julia Agrippina Jr. IV. 53, 75; XI. 12; XII. passim; XIII. 5, 12, 21; XIV. 2, 5, 8. Daughter of Germanicus and Agrippina Sr., born in the Rhine camp, A.D. 15; educated at Rome by her mother, and married in 28 to Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus. On the accession of her brother Caligula she was involved in amours with him and with her sister's husband, Lentulus. Lentulus was put to death; Agrippina was obliged to carry his ashes to Rome in her hands, and was then banished. She was recalled at the accession of her uncle, Claudius; married and poisoned Passienus Crispus for his money; procured the death of the empress Messalina; married her uncle, and became the governess of the empire. She married the emperor's daughter Octavia to Nero (her son by Ahenobarbus), poisoned Claudius, and advanced Nero to the throne in 54. For a time she controlled him, but lost her influence by opposing his mistresses, and made a vain attempt to regain power by supporting Britannicus, the rightful heir, whom Nero poisoned. Agrippina was said after this to have plotted against her son, and then to have sought influence with him by incest. She opposed his desire to divorce Octavia and marry Poppaea Sabina, and he resolved to kill her. After failing to effect it by a pretended shipwreck, he ordered her to be stabbed in her villa at Baiae, A.D. 59. She left an autobiography, which was consulted by Tacitus.

Agrippinus. See Paconius.

Alba Longa. IV. 9; XI. 24. An ancient city of Latium, the metropolis of Rome. When Tullus Hostilius destroyed Alba, B.C. 665, the Julian gens, descendants of Iulus (Ascanius), the founder of the city, emigrated to Rome.

Albania. II. 68; IV. 5; VI. 33; XII. 45; XIII. 41. Now the province of Schirwan in European Russia, on the west shore of the Caspian, between the Caucasus and the river Cyrus. The people were semi-civilised and warlike.

Albinus. See Luceius.

Albis. I. 59; II. 14, 19, 22, 41; IV. 44 (Elbe). The great river of Central Germany, flowing from Bohemia to the North Sea. Domitius Ahenobarbus (B.C. 3) was the only Roman general who crossed it.

Albucilla. VI. 47, 48. A woman of rank, formerly wife of Satrius Secundus, accused in A.D. 37 of treason and profligacy. She stabbed herself, but her judgment and execution were hastened to ensure the confiscation of her goods.

Alesia. XI. 23. (Near Alise Ste. Reine in Côte d'Or.) An ancient hill-city of the Mandubii, where Vercingetorix resisted Caesar, B.C. 52.

Alexander Third of Macedon. II. 73; III. 63; VI. 31; XII. 13. Born B.C. 356, invaded Persia 334, crushed Darius at Arbela 331, invaded Bactria and India, and died at Babylon 323.

Ti. Alexander. XV. 28. An apostate Jew of Alexandria, procurator of Judaea A.D. 46-48, and afterwards praefectus of Egypt. He led forces to aid Corbulo in Armenia in 63, and was the first provincial governor to recognise Vespasian in 69.

Alexandria. II. 59. A city founded by Alexander the Great in Northern Egypt, where it became the emporium of the East. It was the capital of the Ptolemies, and the third city (Gades second) of the Roman empire.

Aliso. II. 7. (Elsen). A fortress built by Drusus Sr. at the confluence of the Lippe and the Alme.

T. Alledius Severus. XII. 7. An eques who married his niece, in imitation of the Emperor Claudius.

Alliaria. I. 53. Wife of Ti. Sempronius Gracchus.

Amanus. II. 83. (Jawur Dagh.) A branch of the Taurus range in Northern Syria.

Amasia. VI. 28. King of Egypt, B.C. 569-525. Rose to the throne by his own abilities, and strengthened himself by Greek alliance.

Amathus. III. 6. A mythical king of Cyprus, founder of a city of the same name (now Limiso) on the south coast. He founded a temple to Venus.

Amazones. III. 61; IV. 56. A fabulous race of archer-women from Scythia; possibly a tradition of beardless Mongolians and a prehistoric invasion of Ionia.

Amisia. I. 60, 63; II. 8, 23. (Ems.) A river of Westphalia and Hanover, flowing into the North Sea between the Rhine and Weser.

Amorgus. IV. 13, 30. (Amurgo.) An island S.E. of Naxos, the birthplace of Simonides, and famous for dye-works. It was fertile, and considered a favourable place of banishment.

Ampsivarii. II. 8, 22; XIII. 55, 56. A people at the mouth of the Ems in Hanover and Gröningen. They were Roman allies, but Germanicus chastised them for an attempted revolt. In 58 A.D. the Chauci had pressed them into the country between the Rhine and Yssel. The Romans expelled them, and they were destroyed by neighbouring tribes.

Amyclanum Mare. IV. 59. The northern part of the Gulf of Caieta, named from Amyclae, a town near Fundi, deserted before the Christian era.

Ancharius Priscus. III. 38, 70. A senator who accused Caesius Cordus, repetundarum in A.D. 21, and secured his conviction in 22.

Ancona. III. 9. (Ancona.) The chief Adriatic port of the Roman merchant-marine.

Ancus Marcius. III. 26. Fourth king of Rome, B.C. 641-616 (Varro's dates).

Andecavi. III. 41. A tribe of the lower Loire. They have left their name to the town of Angers and the province of Anjou.

Anemurium. XII. 55. A town on the southernmost point of Asia Minor, now Cape Anamur, where a castle contains remains of antiquity.

Angrivarii. II. 8, 19, 22, 24, 41. A German tribe in Brunswick and Hanover, north of the Cherusci, whom they aided against Germanicus.

Anicetus. XIV. 3, 7, 8, 62. (Ἀνίκητος.) A Greek tutor of Nero, who put him in command of the fleet of Misenum, and employed him to murder Agrippina in 59, and to ruin Octavia in 62, A.D. To save appearances he was sent into a luxurious exile at Sardinia.

Anicetus Cerialis. XV. 74; XVI. 17. Disclosed a plot against Caligula's life. Compelled to suicide by Nero's suspiciousness in A.D. 66, when consul elect. Founder of the famous Anician family.

M. Annaeus Lucanus. XV. 49, 56, 70; XVI. 17. Author of the Pharsalia. He lived luxuriously at Rome in the reign of Nero, who became jealous of his success as a poet, and would not allow him to recite his verses in public. Lucan joined Piso's conspiracy against the emperor. Upon its discovery he had the cowardice to turn state's evidence against his mother, but, finding there was no hope, died with bravado, reciting a passage of the Pharsalia, April 30th, A.D. 65.

M. Annaeus Mela. XVI. 17. A rich equestrian procurator, brother of Seneca, and father of Lucan. Falsely accused as an accomplice of his son, he committed suicide in A.D. 66.

L. Annaeus Seneca. XII. 8; XIII. 2, 13, 42; XIV. 7, 11, 52, 53, 59, 65; XV. 45, 56, 60, 64, 65. Born of a Spanish father shortly before the Christian era, he followed him in his profession of rhetoric under Tiberius and Caligula. In 41 he was banished to Corsica by Messalina as paramour of Julia, daughter of Germanicus. Agrippina had him recalled in 49, and he became Nero's tutor, until his pupil ascended the throne in 54. When Nero quarrelled with his mother, Seneca took the son's side, and was privy to the murder of Agrippina in 59. Nero was now impatient of control, and Seneca's influence was weakened by the death of Burrus in 62. Seneca had made a fortune of £2,500,000, and feared the cupidity of the emperor; but Nero refused him permission to retire from court and give up his money. He was put to death in 65 as an accomplice of Piso. Seneca was a man of brilliant ability and ordinary morality. His philosophical works are extant. Consul suffectus in 57.

Annaeus Serenus. XIII. 13. The friend (perhaps relative) of Seneca, who dedicated his treatise de Tranquillitate Animi to him. At the philosopher's request he acted as go-between of Nero and Acte. He was praefectus vigilum, and died of the effects of poisonous mushrooms.

Annia Rufilla. III. 36. An impudent criminal who defied justice by claiming protection from the image of Tiberius, A.D. 21.

Annius Pollio. VI. 9. Consul suffectus, A.D. 20. Accused of treason in 32, but apparently pardoned by Tiberius.

L. Annius Vinicianus. VI. 9. Son of the last by his wife Vinicia, shared his father's danger and escape. A candidate for the empire at the death of Caligula, he afterwards joined the conspiracy of Furius Scribonianus against Claudius, and committed suicide in 42.

Annius Pollio. XV. 56, 71; XVI. 30. Son of the last; Nero's intimate friend. Exiled in A.D. 65 for supposed complicity in Piso's plot. He married Servilia, the daughter of Barea Soranus.

Annius Vinicianus. XV. 28. Brother of the last, and son-in-law of Domitius Corbulo, under whom he was legatus of the 5th legion, A.D. 63. He escorted Tiridates to Rome, and was kept there as hostage for Corbulo's fidelity. Corbulo was murdered in 67, and Vinicianus probably fell in an unsuccessful conspiracy, mentioned by Suetonius, Ner. 36.

P. Antelius. XIII. 22; XVI. 14. A consular, appointed legatus of Syria by Nero at Agrippina's instance, in A.D. 55. Nero obliged him to govern his province from Rome, and forced him to suicide on charge of sorcery in 66.

Antenor. XVI. 21. A Trojan chieftain, who founded Patavium in Italy after the fall of Troy.

Anthēmusias. VI. 41. A Greek town in Osrhoene (northern Mesopotamia), between Edessa and the Euphrates.

Antigonus. IV. 43. Called Doson from his reputation as a promiser. He supported the Achaean league, and conquered Cleomenes of Sparta at Sellasia, B.C. 221.

Antiochia. II. 69, 73, 83. (Antakieh.) Capital of Greek and Roman Syria on the Orontes, sixteen miles from the sea. Being on the caravan track from the Euphrates, it held the advantages now possessed by Aleppo. It was a luxurious city, with a population of nearly a million.

Antiochus Third of Commagene. II. 42. Died in A.D. 17, and his kingdom became a Roman province.

Antiochus Fourth. XII. 55; XIII. 7, 37; XIV. 26. Son of the last. Caligula restored his kingdom, then deposed him. Claudius restored him. In 52 he defeated Troxobores; in 54 and 58 aided the Romans against Parthia, and was rewarded with part of Armenia in 60. Assisted Titus in besieging Jerusalem. Deposed by Vespasian in 72 for treasonable correspondence with Parthia, he spent his old age at Rome.

Antiochus Third of Syria. II. 63; III. 62; XII. 62. Reigned B.C. 223-187. Totally defeated by Scipio Asiaticus at Magnesia a Sipylo in 190.

Antistia Pollitta. XIV. 22; XVI. 10. Daughter of Antistius Vetus, and wife of Rubellius Blandus. She shared her husband's exile and her father's death.

M. Antistius Labeo. III. 75. A lawyer, the contemporary and rival of C. Ateius Capito. He upheld republican principles under the empire. See note.

Antistius Sosianus. XIII. 28; XIV. 48; XVI. 14, 21. Tribune of the people in A.D. 56, he abused his power by protecting theatre rioters. In 61 he was banished for libel, his life being saved by Ostorius Scapula and Thrasea. He gained a temporary recall by accusing his benefactor Scapula, and ventured to return from his island when Nero died, but Vespasian sent him back.

C. Antistius Vetus. IV. 1. Mentioned by Velleius Paterculus as a consular and priest in A.D. 30. His grandfather was Augustus's legatus in Spain, and his father consul in B.C. 6. Consul himself in A.D. 23.

C. Antistius Vetus. XII. 25. Probably son of the last. Consul, A.D. 50.

L. Antistius Vetus. XIII. 11, 53; XIV. 58; XVI. 10. Cousin of the last; consul with Nero, A.D. 55, and commander in Germany in 58. He was proconsul of Asia in 63, and was forced to suicide by Nero in 65. Father of Antistia Pollitta.

Antistius Vetus. III. 38. A Macedonian nobleman whose family had assumed a Roman name. Banished to an island in A.D. 21 for treasonable correspondence with Rhescuporis.

C. Antius. II. 6. A consular, appointed commissioner to make the tax-list of Gaul, A.D. 16.

Antium. III. 71; XIV. 3, 4, 27; XV. 23, 39. (Porto d'Anso.) A seaport town thirty-eight miles S.E. of Rome, with a temple and oracle of Fortune. Nero was born there. He was fond of the place, and constructed its artificial harbour. Cicero, Agrippina Jr., and others, had villas there.

Antona. XII. 31. The river Nen in England. See Note.

Antonia Major. IV. 44; XII. 64. Elder daughter of Antony by Octavia, the sister of Augustus, born B.C. 39, and betrothed to L. Domitius Ahenobarbus when two years old. Nero was her grandson. Tacitus erroneously supposed her the younger daughter.

Antonia Minor. III. 3, 18; XI. 3; XIII. 18. Sister of the last; wife of Drusus Sr., and mother of Germanicus, Claudius, and Livilla. She had a residence on the Palatine, was highly honoured by Tiberius, and discovered the plot of Sejanus. She educated her grandson Caligula, who insulted and probably murdered her at his accession.

Antonia. XII. 2, 68; XIII. 23; XV. 53. Daughter of Claudius, and granddaughter of the last. Her first husband, Cn. Pompeius, was put to death by her father, and her second, Faustus Cornelius Sulla Felix, by Nero. When Poppaea died, Nero asked Antonia's hand, and put her to death for refusing.

M. Antonius Creticus. XII. 62. Son of the orator Antonius. Undertook a war against the Cilician pirates. He was not successful, and died in 72 B.C., after failing in an attack on Crete. Called Creticus in derision.

M. Antonius, triumvir. I. 2, 9, 10; II. 2, 3, 43, 53; IV. 34. Son of the last. Born B.C. 83, and educated by his stepfather Lentulus, Catiline's accomplice. He became tribune of the people to support Julius Caesar, and remained his staunch adherent. He organised the opposition to Brutus and Cassius after Caesar's death, and was the chief man in Italy, until Octavian joined the senate and defeated him at Mutina. He fled to Gaul, joined Lepidus, and soon formed the second triumvirate with Octavian. After the triumvirs defeated the republicans at Philippi, Antony received the east as his share, and there fell under the control of Cleopatra. He visited Italy in 40 and 37 B.C., making the treaties of Brundisium and Tarentum. The former was cemented by his alliance with Octavia, the sister of Octavian. On his return to the east, Cleopatra renewed her influence, and Antony relapsed into licentious ease, from which he endeavoured to rouse himself to repulse the Parthians, but was shamefully defeated in 36. He made an Armenian campaign in 34. In 31 the victory of Actium gave Augustus control of the Mediterranean. The next year he appeared at Alexandria, and Antony committed suicide in despair.

Antonius Iulus. I. 10; III. 18; IV. 44. Son of Mark Antony by Fulvia, carefully educated by his stepmother Octavia, who married him to her daughter Marcella, and induced her brother Augustus to advance him to the consulship in B.C. 10. He ungratefully intrigued with Julia, the emperor's daughter, plotted rebellion, and was compelled to suicide by Augustus in B.C. 2.

L. Antonius. IV. 44. Son of Antonius Iulus and Marcella. After his father's execution, he was kept in honourable confinement at Massilia, where he died in A.D. 25.

Antonius Claudius Felix. XII. 54. Freedman of Antonia Minor and Claudius, who made him procurator of Samaria in 48 A.D., and of Palestine in 52 at the request of his brother Pallas. His bad government, with that of Ventidius Cumanus, occasioned a revolt in 52. The blame was thrown on Cumanus, who was recalled. Felix was cruel and licentious. He married Drusilla, daughter of Herod Agrippa, and Paul made his defence before them in 58. Drusilla and her son perished in the destruction of Pompeii.

Antonius Natalis. XV. 50, 54-56, 71. A Roman eques, the confidant of Piso, whose conspiracy against Nero broke down in A.D. 65. Natalis was first to turn informer, and saved his life.

Antonius Primus. XIV. 40. Banished for forgery in A.D. 61, at the age of 20. Pardoned and put over a Pannonian legion by Galba, he led an army against Rome in 69, and stormed it in the interest of Vespasian, who honoured him highly afterwards. Martial addressed an epigram to him on his sixtieth birthday, in A.D. 100, declaring that no day of his past life could give him sorrow in retrospect.

Aorsi. XII. 15-19. Scythian nomads near the mouth of the Don, part of a Tartar horde settled between the Euxine and Caspian. In 49 A.D. they aided the Romans against Mithridates of Bosphorus.

Apamea. XII. 58. (Denair.) A Phrygian city near the source of the Maeander, on the caravan road to Cappadocia. Devastated by earthquakes under Sulla and Claudius. The latter remitted taxes for five years.

Aphrodisias. III. 62. (Keira.) A town of Caria.

Apicata. IV. 3, 11. Wife of Aelius Sejanus, to whom she bore three children. He divorced her to intrigue with Livilla, and her jealousy afterwards discovered his plots. She killed herself from remorse when her children were put to death with him.

M. Gabius Apicius. IV. 1. A bon-vivant under Augustus and Tiberius, scandalously connected with Sejanus. He squandered £830,000, and killed himself to avoid starving on the remaining £83,000. His name was proverbial, and was prefixed to a cookery-book compiled by Coelius at a later period.

Apidius Merula. IV. 42. Expelled from the senate in A.D. 25, for failing to swear in acta Augusti.

Ptolemaeus Apio. XIV. 18. An illegitimate son of Ptolemy Physcon, who made him king of Cyrenaica. Apio governed it B.C. 117-96, and left it by will to the Roman people.

Apollinaris. See Claudius.

Apollo. II. 54; III. 61; IV. 55; XII. 22, 63. God of day, music, medicine, and prophecy, especially worshipped at Delphi, Delos, and Miletus.

Apollonidenses. II. 47. Inhabitants of Apollonia (Abullionte), a town in Mysia, injured by an earthquake in A.D. 17.

L. Aponius. I. 29. A Roman eques on the staff of Drusus Jr. in A.D. 14. He was despatched to Tiberius with the demands of the Pannonian soldiers.

Applius Applianus. II. 48. Expelled by Tiberius from the senate for profligacy and extravagance, in A.D. 17.

Applius Silanus. See App. Junius Silanus.

Appuleia Varilla. II. 50. Banished for adultery, A.D. 17. See Sex. Appuleius.

Sex. Appuleius. I. 7. Son of the younger Marcella, and thus grandson of Octavia Minor, the sister of Augustus. He was brother of Appuleia Varilla, and husband of Numantina. He was consul with Sex. Pompeius for the whole year, A.D. 14. Augustus, in expectation of his own death, appointed his relatives to smooth the way for Tiberius. See II. 51, N.

Apronia. IV. 22. Daughter of L. Apronius, murdered by her husband, Plautius Silvanus, in A.D. 24.

L. Apronius. I. 56, 72; II. 32; III. 21, 64; IV. 13, 22. Officer in the Pannonian war; consul suffectus, A.D. 8; won triumphal honours in Germany, A.D. 15. As proconsul of Africa in 20, he decimated a cohort which had been beaten by Tacfarinas. In 24 he accused his son-in-law, Plautius Silvanus, of murder before the senate.

L. Apronius Caesianus. III. 21; IV. 73; VI. 30; XI. 19. Son of the last, and his legatus in Africa, A.D. 20. Next consul suffectus and governor of Lower Germany, where the Frisii defeated him in 28. Consul with the emperor Caligula in 39. His daughter married Lentulus Gaetulicus.

Apulia. III. 2; IV. 71; XVI. 9. A province in south-eastern Italy, just above the heel (then Calabria). It was united with Calabria and Samnium Hirpinum in the second division of Augustus's Italy.

Aquila. See Julius.

Aquilla. IV. 42. Banished for adultery with Varius Ligur, A.D. 25.

Arabes. VI. 28, 44. The Bedouins of Arabia. Independent of the empire, they served as free lances in eastern armies. The southern parts (Arabia Felix) were famous for spice groves. The tribes on the Euphrates were partially settled under a dynasty of native kings.

Arar. XIII. 53. (Sauconna, Sabne.) Flows 300 miles from the Vosges mountains to the Rhone at Lyons.

Araricus. See Vulcatius.

Araxes. XII. 51; XIII. 39. (Arash or Eras.) Flows eastward from the Armenian mountains. A confluent of the Cyrus.

Arcadia. XI. 14; XII. 53. The central country of the Peloponnesus, to which the primitive Pelasgian population fled after the Achæan and Dorian invasions. The original identity of Greek and Italian stocks was recorded by a tradition that the Arcadian king Evander had settled among the Latian aborigines.

Archelaus. II. 42. Great-great-grandson of Mithridates' general. Made king of Cappadocia by Antony in B.C. 34, and confirmed by Augustus afterwards. Being summoned to Rome on charges of state, he was defended by Tiberius, who thus essayed his forensic powers. When Tiberius afterwards retired to Rhodes, Archelaus neglected him to pay court to young C. Caesar. On his accession in A.D. 14, Tiberius summoned the old king to Rome, neglected his case, and let him die of despair in 17.

Archelaus. VI. 41. Son of the last. King of the Clitæ.

Arduenna Silva. III. 42. (Ardennes.) A forest between the Treveri and Nervii (Treves and Cambrai), 500 miles long in Caesar's time.

Arti. XI. 10. A people near Herat, in Western Afghanistan. Tacitus says that they were separated from the Dahæ (Turkomans) by the (unknown) river Sindes. Yet Margiana (an oasis formed by the Margus or Merv before it is lost in the desert) lay north of Ariana proper. Perhaps an incursion of the Dahæ brought their boundary farther south at this period, or the general term "Arian" may be applied to the Margians, as an Iranian tribe distinct from the Tartars. The river system of the country has changed within historical times.

Ariobarzanes. II. 4. Son of the Median king Artavasdes; appointed king of Armenia by C. Caesar, A.D. 1. He died in A.D. 2, and his son Artavasdes III. was put to death by the Armenians (stirpem haud toleravere).

Aristobulus. XIII. 7; XIV. 26. Cousin of Herod Agrippa II., and husband of the Salome who begged John the Baptist's head. King of Armenia Minor in A.D. 54; granted more territory in 60.

Aided the Romans against Antiochus of Commagene in 73.

Aristonious. IV. 55; XII. 62. Illegitimate brother of Attalus III. of Pergamum, claimed the kingdom after his death, defeated and slew P. Licinius Crassus, consul of B.C. 131, but was taken prisoner by his successor Perperna, and led in triumph by M'. Aquillius in 126. Afterwards beheaded.

Armenia. II. 3, 56, 60, 64, 68; III. 48; VI. 33, 44; XI. 9; XII. 44, 46; XIII. 6, 34; XIV. 23; XV. 17. The mountainous country north of Mesopotamia, source of the Halys, Euphrates, Tigris, and Araxes. The part west of the Euphrates was called Armenia Minor, and had a separate government. The population is Indo-European, semi-civilised from an early period, and the first nation that embraced Christianity. As it lay between Roman and Parthian provinces, Armenia was involved in their quarrels, and its kings enthroned and dethroned by the rival powers. Commanding the valleys of the Euphrates and Tigris, it was an important strategical position, and the traditional object of imperial policy. XII. 48, N.

Arminius. I. 55, 57, 58, 60, 63, 68; II. 9, 17, 21, 44, 46, 88. (German Hermann). A prince of the Cherusci, who served in the Roman army, and became an eques. In A.D. 9, at the age of 27, he led a revolt against Quintilius Varus, under whom he was serving, collected German forces, and overwhelmed the Roman legions among the Hartz mountains. In 14 he was deprived of his wife by his father-in-law Segestes, who carried her with him to the Romans. In 15 he repulsed Germanicus, but in 16 was twice defeated between the Weser and Elbe. Germanicus was recalled to Rome without reducing the country, and in 17 Arminius, as defender of German liberty, overthrew Maroboduus and his Suevian kingdom. Arminius himself was too much elated by success, and was accused of seeking to make himself king. He was slain by his relatives in 19.

Arnus. I. 79. (Arno.) An Etrurian river, liable to freshets.

Arpus. II. 7. Chief of the Chatti, A.D. 16.

Arria Galla. XV. 59. Wife of C. Piso.

Arria. XVI. 34. Wife of Caecina Paetus, who was implicated in the rebellion of Camillus Scribonianus, A.D. 42. Resolved to share her husband's death, she stabbed herself, and handed him the dagger, with the words, Paete non dolet.

Arrius Varus. XIII. 9. Prefect of an auxiliary cohort under Corbulo, A.D. 54. By treachery in Nero's reign, and by good service in Vespasian's army, he rose to be praefectus praetorio and praefectus annonae.

L. Arruntius. I. 8, 13, 76, 79; III. 11; VI. 5, 7, 27, 47; XI. 6, 7. Consul, A.D. 6, and a senatorial leader at Augustus's death; commissioner on inundations of the Tiber in 15; declined to defend Cn. Piso in 20; appointed governor of Hispania Tarraconensis in 25, but kept in Rome by Tiberius's jealousy. In 30 or 31 he was accused of treason, but the accusers were proved false, and punished,—an occasion on which the senate seems to have shown a little independence. (See remarks of Cotta, VI. 5.) In 37 Arruntius was again accused as an accomplice of Albucilla at the instigation of Macro. He committed suicide to avoid the dangers and insults of a trial.

Arruntius Stella. XIII. 22. Aneques, the friend of Agrippina, put in charge of the games celebrated by Nero in A.D. 55.

Arsaces. VI. 31, 33. Made king of Armenia by his father, Artabanus of Parthia, in A.D. 35. Murdered by his servants the same year at the instigation of Mithridates the Hiberian.

Arsacidae, Kings of Parthia. II. 1; VI. 31, 34; XI. 10; XIII. 37; XIV. 26; XV. 1. Their ancestor, a Scythian chief, revolted against Antiochus II. of Syria, B.C. 250. A dynasty of thirty-one kings ruled the East, supported by Tartar alliances, until it was overthrown in A.D. 226 by a revolt of the Iranian population under Artaxerxes the Sassanian.

Arsamosata. XV. 10. (Shimshat). A fortified town of Armenia, north of the Arsanias.

Arsanias. XV. 15. Murad-chai. An eastern affluent of the Euphrates, lat. 38° 55' N. By misunderstanding a passage in Pliny's Natural History, it has sometimes been confused with a smaller river farther south.

Artabanus Third. Arsaces XIX. II. 3, 4, 58; VI. 31, 33, 36, 42, 43. Educated among the Dahae. Originally king of Media, then of Parthia, by expelling Vonones in A.D. 16. He treated Germanicus with much respect, but after his death expelled the Roman claimant from the Armenian throne, and insulted Tiberius, who in 35 sent successively Phraates and Tiridates as opposition candidates for the Parthian crown. The latter succeeded, and was crowned by Vitellius, then governor of Syria. Artabanus recovered his kingdom the next year, and Tiberius stopped the war through jealousy of Vitellius. Under Caligula, Vitellius, by diplomacy, induced Artabanus to do homage to the emperor's image. After this Artabanus lost and regained his crown by another rebellion. Died in June, A.D. 42.

Artabanus. XI. 8. Son of the last, murdered by his brother Gotarzes.

Artavasdes I. of Armenia. II. 3. Ally of Crassus in B.C. 54, and of Antony in 36. He deserted the latter, who in revenge defeated him and carried him captive in 34. After Actium Cleopatra sent his head to his enemy, Phraates of Parthia, whose aid she wished to gain.

Artavasdes Second. II. 4. A straw king of Armenia, set up by Augustus, B.C.

5 (P). Defeated and dead before C. Caesar reached the East (A.D. 1).

Artaxata. II. 56; VI. 33; XII. 50; XIII. 39, 41; XIV. 23. [1st decl. sing. or 2d plur.] One of the capitals of Armenia, on a bend of the river Araxes. Founded and fortified by Artaxias I. of Armenia, with the advice of Hannibal, B.C. 188. Destroyed by Corbulo, A.D. 58, but rebuilt by Tiridates. Its ruins are found near the village Ardaschar.

Artaxias II. of Armenia. II. 3. Son and successor of Artavasdes I. An ally of Parthia, he massacred the Romans in Armenia. Assassinated by the nobility, B.C. 20.

Artaxias III. of Armenia. II. 56, 64; VI. 31. The name assumed by Zeno, son of Polemo of Pontus, crowned at Artaxata by Germanicus, A.D. 18. He reigned until 35.

Artemita. VI. 41. A town in Apoloniatis (Western Assyria), on the Siala (now Diyala).

Artoria Flaccilla. XV. 71. Followed her husband, Novius Priscus, into exile, A.D. 65.

Arulenus Rusticus. See L. Junius Arulenus Rusticus.

Aruseius. VI. 7. Punished for falsely accusing L. Arruntius.

L. Aruseius. VI. 40. A name found in a mutilated passage which seems to relate to his death. He may have been the informer (VI. 7) returned from exile to his old trade. In this case the passage might read, "quod L. Aruseius exul rediret, neque quod eo accusante multi morte affecti forent."

Aecleplodotus. See Cassius.

Asconius Labeo. XIII. 10. Nero's guardian; honoured with a statue, A.D. 54.

Asia. II. 47; III. 7, 32; IV. 15, 37, 55; XII. 63; XIII. 43. A name indefinitely given by the early Greeks to "the land of the East," or "the sunrise," like the modern Anatolia or Levant. The Roman province of this name included the west coast of Asia Minor, with adjacent islands. It was the best senatorial province, and was allotted to the oldest consular. The cities reared a temple to Augustus in his lifetime, and another to Tiberius, who relieved them after an earthquake, A.D. 17.

Asiaticus. See Valerius.

C. Asinius Pollio. I. 12; IV. 34; XI. 6. B.C. 76-A.D. 4. The general of Julius Caesar, the counsellor of Augustus, the patron of Vergil and Horace, and the most distinguished orator of his day. Augustus was fond of him, though he would not serve against Antony, and protected the historian Timagenes, who had insulted the Emperor. "If you want to keep a wild beast in your house, my dear Pollio," said Augustus, "do so, by all means." He spent his life (after a Dalmatian campaign in B.C. 39) in literary retirement, occupied as historian, poet, and critic.

C. Asinius Gallus Saloninus Sr. I. 8, 12, 13, 76, 77; II. 32, 33, 35; III. 11; IV. 20, 30, 71; VI. 23, 25. Son of the last. Tacitus does not use the agnomen. Consul, A.D. 8. An acute, suspicious, restless man. Augustus said that he would like to be emperor, but was not great enough. When Tiberius was forced to divorce Vipsania, Gallus ventured to marry her, and boasted that Drusus Jr., born before the divorce, was his own son. Tiberius said nothing, but hated him. In A.D. 30 he invited him in a friendly way to Capreae, ordered the senate to impeach him, and watched him slowly starve in confinement for three years. Whether he died at last by exhaustion or violence was unknown.

C. Asinius Gallus Saloninus Jr. III. 75. Son of the last. Betrothed to the daughter of Germanicus, but died before his marriage, A.D. 22.

C. Asinius Pollio Jr. IV. 1. Brother of the last. Consul, A.D. 23, and pro-consul of Asia in an uncertain year. His coins represent Drusus Caesar (his own half-brother by his mother Vipsania), sharing a curule chair with Germanicus. The inscription is ΔΡΟΥΣΟΣ ΚΑΙ ΓΕΡΜΑΝΙΚΟΣ ΚΑΙΣΑΡΕΣ, ΝΕΟΙ ΘΕΟΙ, ΦΙΛΑΔΕΛΦΟΙ, and seems to fix the date at A.D. 17 or 18.

M. Asinius Agrippa. IV. 34, 61. Brother of the last. Consul, A.D. 25. He died in 27 with good reputation.

M. Asinius Marcellus. XII. 64; XIV. 40. Great-grandson of Asinius Pollio, perhaps son of the last. Consul, A.D. 54. Convicted of forgery in 61, but pardoned at Nero's request.

L. Asinius Gallus. XIV. 48. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 61. Nipperdey believes the name to be Asinius, judging from an inscription.

Asper. See Sulpicius.

Assyria. XII. 13. The country between the Tigris and Media.

M. Atetius. II. 47. An ex-prætor Commissioner to relieve the Lydian injured by an earthquake in A.D. 17.

C. Atelius Capito. I. 76, 79; III. 70, 75. A great conservative lawyer under Augustus and Tiberius. His rival, Antistius Labeo, was more willing to change law, though less compliant to the emperors. Both founded schools of jurisprudence. Capito was a favourite at court. Consul suffectus A.D. 5, and curator aquarum in 22. Died in 22.

Athenae. II. 53, 55, 63; III. 26; XI. 24; XV. 64. The capital of Attica. Compelled by circumstances to side with Mithridates against Sulla in B.C. 86, and with Antony against Augustus in 31, its commerce was diverted to Corinth, and it became a second-rate provincial town, famous only for its antiquities. The schools of philosophy were still maintained under the empire, but it was a saying that Athens had more statues than citizens.

Atidius Geminus. IV. 43. Praetor of Achaia, probably under Augustus. Established the Messenian boundary.

Atilius. IV. 62. A freedman who exhibited gladiators for pay in a wooden circus, which collapsed with disastrous results. He was exiled.

A. Atilius Calatinus. II. 49. Consul twice and dictator once in the first Punic war, he triumphed in B.C. 257. Dedicated a temple to Spes.

Atimetus. XIII. 19, 21, 22. The freedman of Nero's aunt, Domitia, and her tool in accusing Agrippina, A.D. 55. He failed, and was put to death.

Attianus. See Nonius.

Attious. See Curtius, Julius, Pomponius, Quintius, Vestinus.

Attius. VI. 24. A centurion. The jailor of Drusus, son of Germanicus.

Attus Clausus. IV. 9; XI. 24; XII. 25. A Sabine chieftain, settled with his clan on the land beyond the Anio in B.C. 504. He was the ancestor of the patrician Claudii, who succeeded each other, father and son, without interruption or adoption, until the time of the Emperor Claudius. Attus Clausus was the first to place images of his ancestors in a public temple at Rome.

Atys. IV. 55. A mythical king of Lydia.

Avernus. XV. 42. A lake near Baiae, in the crater of an extinct volcano. Its mephitic exhalations gave it a reputation as the gate of hell. Agrippa made it part of his Julian harbour, and Nero tried to connect it with Ostia by a canal.

Aufidienus Rufus. I. 20. Praefectus castrorum of the Pannonian maniples at Nauportus, A.D. 14.

Augurinus. See Julius.

Augusta. See Livia.

Augustodunum. III. 43, 45. (Autun.) An Aeduan city in Burgundy, near the site of Caesar's Bibracte (Beuvrais).

Augustus. Originally C. Octavius, grandnephew of Julius Caesar, born in B.C. 63; educated by his mother and his stepfather Philippus, and secretly intended by his uncle for his heir. When Julius was assassinated in 44, Octavius was a youth of 19, learning war at Apollonia in Illyricum. He proceeded to Rome, accepted the terms of his uncle's will, promised to pay the people their legacies, and enlisted Cicero with the senate on his side. Antony, who opposed him, was forced to retire with his army to Mutina in Cisalpine Gaul, where he besieged D. Brutus. Octavius, whose legal name was now C. Julius Caesar Octavianus (he received the title of Augustus in 27), was sent as praetor against Antony, under the consuls Hirtius and Pansa. The consuls were killed, perhaps by the connivance of Augustus; he remained in full command, forced Antony over the Alps, and compelled the senate to appoint himself to the vacant consulship. He met Antony, who was returning from Gaul with Lepidus and an army, at Bononia, and formed the second triumvirate. Antony now proceeded with Augustus to defeat Brutus and Cassius at Philippi in 42, and afterwards journeyed to the East, and fell under the control of Cleopatra; while his brother, L. Antonius, and wife, Fulvia, began a revolt at Perusia in Italy, and were subdued by Augustus after a desperate struggle in 41-40. In 40 and 37 he made alliances with M. Antony, cemented by the hand of his sister Octavia, and, after a long struggle, crushed the naval power of Sex. Pompey in 36. After training an army by Illyrian campaigns, he considered himself in a position to fight for the world with Antony, whose power he crushed at Actium in 31. From this time he devoted himself to the administration of the republic, receiving the power but not the title of king, as imperator of the armies, princeps of the senate, with tribunicia potestas to control the people, and proconsulare imperium to rule the provinces. He repressed the Parthians in the East, and held the Rhine against the Germans in spite of the defeats of Lollius and Varus. His stepsons, Tiberius and Drusus, overran Germany and Pannonia. He died at Nola, August 19th, A.D. 14.

His later years were embittered by the intrigues of his wife and the immorality of his daughter.

Aviola. See Acilius.

Avitus. See Dubius.

L. Aurelius Cotta. III. 66. Tried to escape his creditors by his privilege as tribune. When Scipio Africanus Minor returned from Numantia, B.C. 133, he accused him of embezzlement without success.

M. Aurelius Cotta Messalinus. II. 32; IV. 20; V. 3; VI. 5; XII. 22. Son of the orator Valerius Messalla, named from his mother's family. A famous delator, and eager to condemn Agrippina. In A.D. 32 the senate tried to crush him with charges of treason, but Tiberius spared his tool. Persius called him magni Messalae lippa propago, on account of his weak eyes.

M. Aurelius Cotta. III. 2, 17. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 20.

Aurelius Cotta. XIII. 34. Son of the last. Squandered his fortune and received a pension from Nero, A.D. 58.

Aurelius Pius. I. 75. A member of the senate, A.D. 15.

Auzea. IV. 25. A fortified town on the river Audus, destroyed by Tacfarinas, but afterwards rebuilt. Extensive remains were found by Shaw among cliffs and forests.

Bactria. II. 60; XI. 8. (Bokhara.) The region north of the Hindu Kush, watered by the Oxus. The land was fertile; the dense population Indo-European. It was conquered by Egyptians and Assyrians at early periods; afterwards by the Persians and Alexander. It revolted from the Parthians under a Greek dynasty. Its civilisation was finally crushed by Tartar pressure from the north.

Baduhenna. IV. 73. A goddess worshipped in a grove in West Friesland. It is supposed that her name is preserved by Paderborn, and that the grove is the modern wood Holt Pade. Perhaps the termination henna = Hain.

Balae. XI. 1; XIII. 21; XIV. 4; XV. 52. The principal Roman watering place, on the Bay of Naples, celebrated for climate and hot springs. Marius, Lucullus, Nero, and others, had villas there.

Balbillus. See Claudius.

Balbus. See Cornelius Domitius Laelius.

Baleares Insulae. XIII. 43. Under the empire included in the province Hispania Tarraconensis. The climate was delightful, and the islands fertile.

Baron Soranus. See Servilius.

Barium. XVI. 9. (Bari.) A fishing town on the Apulian coast.

Bassus. See Annius Caesellius Lucilius Saleius.

Bastarnae. II. 65. A people of north-western Dacia, now Hungary. Rhescuporis of Thrace pretended fear of their invasion, A.D. 19.

Batavi. II. 6, 8, 11. The ancient Dutch. Good swimmers and cavalymen, they served as auxiliaries of the German legions.

Bathyllus. I. 54. Freedman of Maecenas; founded the school of comic pantomime; his rival, Pylades, invented the tragic variety.

Baull. XIV. 4. The villa of Hortensius on the north of the Bay of Naples. Purchased by Antonia Minor, it descended through Germanicus and Agrippina Jr. to Nero, who chose it as the scene of his mother's murder.

Belgae. I. 34, 43; III. 40. Gallia Belgica was a political division of Gaul, governed by an imperial legatus pro praetore. It extended from Lyons to the German Ocean, including the Low Countries, and part of Germany.

Beneventum. XV. 34. (Benevento.) An important Samnian town on the ridge of the Apennines.

Benignus. See Orfidius.

Bibaculus. See Furius.

O. Bibulus. III. 52. Aedile, A.D. 22.

Bithynia. I. 74; XII. 22; XIV. 46; XVI. 18, 33. The populous south coast of the Euxine, between the Propontis and river Halys, united with Pontus under a senatorial propraetor.

Blaesus. See Junius Pedius.

Blandus. See Rubellius.

Blitius Catullinus. XV. 71. Deported for supposed treason, A.D. 65.

Brucellus. XIII. 55, 56. An old Ampsivarian chief, A.D. 58.

Bononia. XII. 58. (Bologna.) Etruscan city in Cisalpine Gaul. Became a Roman colony, B.C. 189. Relieved by Claudius after a conflagration, A.D. 53.

Bosporus Cimmericus. XII. 15, 63. The strait connecting the sea of Azov with the Caspian. Also a kingdom including the Crimea and part of the Cossack country, governed by Pontic princes under Roman protection. Important for its grain trade.

Boudicca or Boadicea. XIV. 31-37. Queen of the Iceni. Revolted against the Romans, A.D. 61. Her British host was conquered by Suetonius Paulinus, and she took poison. Dion Cassius says that she had a grim face, keen eye, and rough speech. Her golden hair flowed to her waist. She wore a plaid and torques, and carried a spear in her hand.

Bovillae. II. 41; XV. 23. A town of Latium, twelve miles from Rome, once under the protection of Alba Longa, and containing an altar to the genius of the Julian house. Here the body of Augustus rested for a night on the way to Rome. Tiberius built a temple to Augustus, and instituted games in his honour. The circus and the inscriptions of the Sodales Augustales have been found on the spot.

Brigantes. XII. 32. A British tribe in Yorkshire.

Britannia. XI. 3; XIV. 29, 30, 32, 35, 37. (England.) Invaded by Julius Caesar, B.C. 56-54; some of its Celtic chiefs took refuge with Augustus. In 43 A.D. Claudius invaded Britain, leaving his generals to reduce the tribes. Caractacus, prince of the Silures, surrendered in 51; Mona was taken and Boadicea subdued in 61. After this the Roman province extended to the Trent and Mersey.

Claudius Tiberius Germanicus Britannicus. XI. 4, 11, 32; XII. 2, 25, 41; XIII. 16. Son of Claudius and Messalina, born A.D. 41. When his father married Agrippina, he was kept in retirement, while Nero was put forward, and, on the death of Claudius in 54, advanced to the throne. When Agrippina quarrelled with her son, she pretended to adopt the cause of Britannicus, who became an object of suspicion, and was poisoned at an imperial banquet soon after the Saturnalia (Dec. 17th) of 54. He would have been fourteen years old on the ensuing 13th of February.

Bructeri. I. 51, 60; XIII. 56. A German tribe near Hamm in Westphalia. See Chamavi.

Brundisium. I. 10; II. 30; III. 1, 7; IV. 27. (Brindisi.) The chief seaport of south-eastern Italy. Antony here made his treaty with Augustus and Maecenas in B.C. 40, and Agrippina arrived here from the East with the ashes of Germanicus. Now the terminus of the Alexandrian steamship line.

Bruttidius Niger. III. 66. Rhetorician and historian; aedile in A.D. 22. Involved in the conspiracy of Sejanus. Juv. X. 83.

Brutus. See Junius.

Burrus. See Afranius.

Byzantium. II. 54; XII. 62, 63. (Constantinople.) Founded by Megarians, 667 B.C. As port of the Euxine and by its fisheries it became prosperous. Was injured by the Roman wars with Thrace and Bosphorus, and in A.D. 53 received remission of taxes for five years.

Cadius Rufus. XII. 22. Proconsul of Bithynia. A protégé of Messalina, whose head appears on his coins. Agrippina had him removed in A.D. 48, and condemned for extortion in 49. Otho restored his rank in 69.

Cadmus. XI. 14 (𐤇𐤍𐤏𐤍, the man of the East). A mythical Phoenician prince, who founded Boeotian Thebes, and introduced the alphabet in Greece.

Cadra. VI. 41. A prominence of the Taurus range in Cilicia Trachea.

Caecilianus. VI. 7. A senator convicted of false accusation in A.D. 32.

Caecilianus. See Domitius and Magius.

M. Caecilius Cornutus. IV. 28. An ex-praetor. Falsely accused of treason in A.D. 24, he committed suicide. He was a curator locorum publicorum judicandorum.

Q. Caecilius Metellus Creticus Sillanus. II. 4, 43. Consul, A.D. 7. Governor of Syria, A.D. 11. His daughter was betrothed to the son of Germanicus, and Tiberius removed him when Germanicus was sent to the East, lest he should be too friendly.

L. Caecilius Metellus. III. 71. Won the victory of Panormus in the first Punic war, and lost his sight while saving the image of Minerva from a burning temple. He was pontifex maximus for many years, and strictly preserved the discipline of the priesthood.

C. Caecina Largus. XI. 33. (An abbreviation for et was formerly read as P. before his name.) A friend of Claudius, who made him consul for the whole year, 42 A.D.

A. Caecina Severus. I. 31, 37, 48, 56, 64, 65, 66, 72; II. 6; III. 18, 33. Consul suffectus, B.C. 9; propraetor of Moesia, A.D. 6; propraetor of Lower Germany in 14 and 15, earning triumphal honours under Germanicus. Built the North Sea Fleet in 16; active in the senate, 20 and 21.

Caecina Tuscus. XIII. 20. Son of Nero's nurse. He thought of making him prefect of praetorians, A.D. 55. Afterwards made him prefect of Egypt, and banished him on a trifling occasion.

Caedicia. XV. 71. Wife of Scaevipus. Banished after his execution.

Caeeles Vibenna. IV. 65. An Etruscan immigrant who gave his name to the Caelian Hill. Etruscans said that he was the patron of Mastarna, afterwards Servius Tullius.

Caellus Mons. IV. 64, 65. The south-eastern hill of Rome, in the second region of the city.

Caellus Cursor. III. 37. Punished for malicious prosecution, A.D. 31.

Caellus Pollio. XII. 45. A praefectus castrorum, bribed to treason by Radamistus in A.D. 51. Nero cashiered him in 54.

C. Caellus Rufus. II. 41. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 17.

Caepio Crispinus. I. 74. A quaestor who impeached his superior, Governor of Bithynia, for treason.

Calus Caesar. I. 3; II. 4, 42; III. 48; IV. 1, 40; VI. 51. Son of Agrippa and Julia, born B.C. 20. Adopted by his grandfather Augustus, whom he accompanied against the Sigambri. At the age of fifteen he was created princeps juventutis, and destined consul for the fifth year afterwards. He spent his consulship, A.D. 1, in Asia, where he had an interview with Phraates IV. of Parthia, and induced him to resign his claims on Armenia. On going to occupy the country, he was wounded by an arrow in besieging the town Artagera, and died of the wound. His physicians were accused of malpractice at the instigation of Livia. He married Livilla, daughter of Drusus Sr., but left no children.

Lucius Caesar. I. 3, 53; III. 23; VI. 51. Brother of the last. Assumed toga virilis in B.C. 2, when he was made princeps juventutis and destined consul for A.D. 3. Died at Marseilles, A.D. 2, being poisoned, as was said, by Livia's orders. He had been betrothed to Aemilia Lepida.

C. Caesar Caligula. I. 32, 41, 69; V. 1; VI. 3, 9, 20, 45; XII. 22; XV. 72. Son of Germanicus and Agrippina, born A.D. 12, and soon carried to the camp on the Rhine. His mother dressed the boy as a common soldier to acquire popularity, and he was nicknamed Caligula or "Little Boots." He accompanied his father to the East. After his death and his mother's banishment, he lived successively with his grandmothers Livia and Antonia. Sejanus failed to destroy him with his brothers. Tiberius summoned him to Capreae in 32, and married him to Claudia, daughter of Silanus. After her death Caligula formed a criminal connection with Ennia, wife of Macro, the prefect of the praetorians, and formed a plot which secured his (Caligula's) succession to the throne at the death of Tiberius in 37. The four years of his reign were related in the lost books of the Annals, VII. to X. His cruelty, lust, and conceit amounted to insanity. He was despatched by Cassius Chaerea and some praetorian soldiers, Jan. 24th, 41.

Caesellius Bassus. XVI. 1, 3. A half-witted Carthaginian eques.

Caesennius Maximus. XV. 71. A friend of Seneca, of consular rank, banished by Nero. Mentioned by Seneca (Ep. 87, 2), and by Martial (VII. 44, 45).

L. Caesennius Paetus. XIV. 29; XV. 6, 10, 11, 14, 17, 25, 28. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 61. Served under Corbulo in Armenia in 62. By disobedience and foolhardiness he lost an army, and the town Arsamosata, and was recalled in disgrace. He was governor of Syria under Vespasian.

Caesia Silva. I. 50. The Häserwald, near Essen in Düsseldorf. See Latham, Germania, Epilegomena LXIX.

Caesianus. See Apronius.

Caesius Cordus. III. 38, 70. Condemned in A.D. 22 for peculation in his administration of the province of Crete and Cyrene.

Caesius Nasica. XII. 40. Legatus legionis in Britain, A.D. 50.

O. Caetronius. I. 44. Legatus legionis on the Rhine, A.D. 14.

Calabria. III. 1; XII. 65. The heel of Italy, occupied by graziers, who drove the cattle to the Lucanian mountains in summer. The name is now applied to the toe.

Calavius Sabinus. XV. 7. Legatus legionis in Syria, A.D. 62.

Calenus. See Julius.

Cales. VI. 15. (Calvi.) A municipium in Northern Campania.

Caligula. See C. Caesar.

Callistus. XI. 29, 38; XII. 1. (Κάλλιστος.) A favourite freedman of Caligula, under whom he accumulated a fortune, but afterwards conspired for his murder. He continued in favour with Claudius; was too timid to attack Messalina, but after her fall advocated Lollia Paulina for empress.

Calpurnia. XII. 22; XIV. 12. A beautiful noblewoman banished by Agrippina through jealousy, A.D. 49. Nero recalled her in 59.

Calpurnia. XI. 30. Concubine of the Emperor Claudius.

Calpurnius. I. 39. Aquilifer of the first legion in Gaul, A.D. 14.

Calpurnius Fabatus. XVI. 8. An eques, accused in A.D. 65 as accomplice of L. Junius Silanus. He escaped by delaying proceedings. His grand-daughter married Pliny Jr., whose letters to his prosocer are extant. His municipal and military offices are recorded by an inscription found at Como, his native town.

Calpurnius Salvianus. IV. 36. A rich Cordovan, banished for falsely accusing a countryman in A.D. 25.

C. Calpurnius Piso. XIV. 65; XV. 48-59. A nobleman of liberal disposition and attractive manners, but dissolute habits and weak character. Caligula took his wife from him on his wedding-day, and banished him. Claudius recalled him, and gave him a suffect consulship. In 62 he refuted a false accusation of conspiracy against Nero, but the terror which the danger inspired induced him to head a real one, which was discovered in 65. Piso showed little manliness, and committed suicide.

Cn. Calpurnius Piso. II. 43. A nobleman who fought in the republican armies against Julius Caesar at Thapsus, and Augustus at Philippi. Augustus pardoned him and made him consul, though he had proudly retired from public life.

Cn. Calpurnius Piso. I. 13, 74, 79; II. 35, 43, 55, 57, 69, 75, 80; III. 10, 12, 14, 17; VI. 26. Son of the last; consul, B.C. 7, and afterwards governor in Spain. Distinguished himself in the senate by boldness and plain speech at the accession of Tiberius, who afterwards sent him to the East as a check on Germanicus. The quarrels that ensued between the ambitious noble and the young prince embittered the last days of Germanicus and hastened his death, which was even ascribed by friends to poison administered by Piso, who showed unseemly joy at the event, and endeavoured to hold command of the East by force. The legati of Germanicus expelled him, and he was forced to stand trial before the senate for misgovernment and treason. Feeling was so strong against him that Tiberius dared not protect him, and Piso anticipated execution by suicide, A.D. 20.

Cn. Calpurnius Piso Jr. III. 17; IV. 62. Son of the last; commanded by the senate to change his ill-omened praenomen to Lucius after his father's death. Consul, A.D. 27; praefectus urbi, 34; proconsul of Africa, 39. He outlived every person who had been a member of the senate during his consulship.

L. Calpurnius Piso. II. 32, 34; III. 11, 68; IV. 21. Consul, B.C. 1. A brother of Cn. Piso the elder, he displayed the same haughty spirit by a speech against informers in the senate, A.D. 16. Shortly after he insulted Livia by pursuing into the palace her friend Urgulania, whom he had summoned to court, and in 20 defended his brother when on trial. Tiberius waited for several years before he allowed Granius to accuse him of treason. Piso committed suicide.

L. Calpurnius Piso Caesoninus. VI. 10. Caesar's father-in-law, attacked by Cicero in Pisonem. Censor, B.C. 50. His son of the same name was born B.C. 48. Consul, 15, then governor of Pamphylia. Won triumphal honours in Thrace, B.C. 11. He had a hard head for business and for drinking. Tiberius tested him and Pomponius Flaccus by a carouse of two days and nights, and afterwards appointed him praefectus urbi, relying upon his fidelity and secrecy in the most delicate matters. He held the office until his death in A.D. 32, and received a censorial funeral.

L. Calpurnius Piso. IV. 45. Became odious, as governor of Hispania Citerior, by pecuniary exactions, and was murdered by a peasant, A.D. 25. Perhaps son of the last, and the elder of the brothers to whom Horace addressed the Ars Poetica.

L. Calpurnius Piso. XIII. 28, 31; XV. 18. Son of Cn. Piso Jr.; consul, A.D. 57, and appointed commissioner on finance in 63. When proconsul of Africa in 70 he was put to death for conspiracy against Vespasian.

M. Calpurnius Piso. II. 76, 78; III. 16-18. Son of Cn. Piso Sr. Dissuaded his father from violent action after the death of Germanicus, but assisted him against his own judgment. He was banished for ten years, without loss of fortune or rank.

Calvina. See Junia.

Calvisius. XIII. 19, 21, 22; XIV. 12. A fellow client of Iturius, whose fate he shared.

O. Calvisius Sabinus. IV. 46; VI. 9. Consul, A.D. 26, and afterwards in danger as a friend of Sejanus in 32. Legatus of T. Vinus in Pannonia, under Caligula, he was endangered by his wife's wantonness. They were recalled to Rome, and committed suicide.

Calusidius. I. 35, 43. A mutinous soldier in the army of the lower Rhine, A.D. 14.

Camerium. XI. 24. Stood, according to Sir William Gell, on Monte Gennaro, twenty miles N.E. of Rome. Destroyed B.C. 502 for aiding the Tarquins. Tacitus says that the Coruncanii originated there.

Camillus. See Furius.

Campania. III. 31, 47; IV. 57, 67; XIII. 26; XV. 46, 51; XVI. 13. The lowlands between the Apennines and the Tyrrhenian Sea, south of the Liris or Mons Massicus. Its early settlement by the Greeks had studded it with beautiful cities, and its delightful climate recommended it as the pleasure ground of its Roman masters.

Camulodunum. XII. 32; XIV. 31. (Colchester.) A town of the Trinobantes, on the Essex coast, named from Camulus, the British war-god. Cymbeline (Cunobelinus) reigned here in the time of Tiberius. Ostorius colonised it in A.D. 49 with veterans of the sixth (victrix, pia, fidelis) legion. Hence called Colonia Victricensis. Destroyed by Boadicea in 61. Camden placed Camulodunum at Maldon, deriving the name from (Ca)malodon; but Colchester is fifty miles from London (agreeing with the fifty-four Roman miles of the Antonine Itinerary), while Maldon stands fifteen miles nearer. Colchester has more Roman remains than any place in England, its castle, abbey, and many old houses being half built of Roman bricks. Coins of Cymbeline, bearing the names Cunob. and Camulo, are frequently found in the vicinity. See P. Morant's Hist. of Colchester.

L. Caninius Gallus. VI. 12. Triumvir monetalis, B.C. 18; consul suffectus, B.C. 2; and arval priest. In A.D. 32 the old priest urged the adoption of a newly-discovered Sibylline book, but was reprovved by Tiberius.

Caninius Rebilus. XIII. 30. A distinguished noble, jurist, and consular, who ruined himself by debauchery, and committed suicide, A.D. 56.

Canninefates. IV. 73; XI. 18. Batavians from the district of Delft and Rotterdam. Conquered by Tiberius in the reign of Augustus, they served as horsemen in the Roman armies.

Canopus. II. 60. A wealthy and profligate seaport of Egypt, fifteen miles E. of Alexandria, near the Heracleotic mouth of the Nile.

Capito. See Ateius, Cossutianus, Fontei, Insteius, Lucilius, Valerius, Verginius.

Cappadocia. II. 42, 56, 60; XII. 49; XIII. 8; XIV. 26; XV. 12. (Eastern Caramania, with portions of Mabash and Siva.) A large country in the interior of Asia Minor, with an Aramaic population. In A.D. 17 its last king died, and it became an imperial province under a procurator, with several cohorts. It bordered on Armenia, and was involved in its affairs.

Capreae. IV. 67; VI. 2-10. (Capri.) An island twelve miles in circumference, three miles W. of the promontory of Sorrento. It is surrounded by inaccessible limestone cliffs, but the soil is good; the climate and prospect delightful. Augustus purchased it of the city of Naples as a summer resort, and Tiberius buried himself in its recesses. His twelve villas were destroyed after his death by order of the senate, but the ruins remain. The sculptures and medals found there confirm the testimony of ancient writers to the habits of Tiberius.

Capua. IV. 57; XIII. 31. (Santa Maria di Capua.) The capital of the fertile Campanian plain. It lost its freedom by supporting Hannibal, and its territory became ager publicus, on which Caesar settled 20,000 poor Romans in B.C. 59. Augustus and Nero settled veterans there, and Tiberius erected a temple to Jupiter, called the Capitol of Capua.

Caractacus. XII. 33, 36, 37. (Caradoc.) Prince of the Iceni, son of Cymbeline. Lost his brother Togodumus in A.D. 43 while resisting the Roman invasion. Defeated at the head of the Silures in the mountains of North Wales, he was surrendered by the queen of the Brigantes, to whom he fled for refuge, and sent to Rome with his family. Claudius was touched by his heroism, and set him free.

Carbo. See Papirius.

Carenea. XII. 13. Satrap of Mesopotamia; supported Meherdates in A.D. 49.

Carinas Celer. XIII. 10. A senator.

Carinas Secundus. XV. 45. A Stoic philosopher, employed by Nero to plunder Greek temples, A.D. 64. Caligula had banished a Carinas Secundus for philosophic bluster.

Carmanli. VI. 36. An Iranian people in the arid district of modern Kerman and Laristan on the Persian Gulf.

Carsidius Sacerdos. IV. 13; VI. 48.

Acquitted in A.D. 23 of the charge of selling provisions to Tacfarinas; praetor urbanus in 27; deported as an accomplice of Albucilla in 37.

Carthago. XVI. 1. Founded by the Phoenicians in the 9th century B.C.; re-colonised by Julius Caesar and Augustus.

Cartimandua. XII. 36, 40. Queen of the Brigantes, who surrendered Caractacus to the Romans. Deserting her husband for his armour-bearer, she lost her throne in A.D. 69, though the Romans saved her life.

Casperi. XII. 45; XV. 5. A centurion who bravely defended an Armenian fortress against Radamistus, A.D. 51. Ambassador of Corbulo to Vologeses in 62.

Cassius. I. 73. A pantomime of bad character.

Cassius. XV. 66. A strong praetorian guardsman.

Cassius Asclepiodotus. XVI. 33. A nobleman of Nicaea in Bithynia, deported as a friend of Bareas Soranus in A.D. 66. Pardoned by Galba in 69.

C. Cassius Chaerea. I. 32. A centurion of the Rhine legions, who saved his life by his bravery in A.D. 14. In A.D. 41, as tribune of a praetorian cohort, he killed the emperor Caligula, who had insulted him.

O. Cassius Longinus. I. 2, 10; II. 43; III. 76; IV. 34; XVI. 7. Distinguished for his coolness in the Parthian expedition of Crassus. Under Pompey he commanded a fleet, and surrendered it to Caesar after Pharsalia. Though treated with great consideration, he became the ringleader in the assassination of Caesar. He was present at Philippi with legions he had collected in the East. Being defeated by Antony, he ordered a slave to kill him. Brutus lamented his friend as "last of the Romans."

O. Cassius Longinus. XII. 11, 12; XIII. 41, 48; XIV. 43; XV. 52; XVI. 7, 9, 22. Descendant of the last. Consul suffectus, A.D. 30; governor of Syria, 49 to 51; distinguished for his justice and severity. He was the greatest lawyer of his day, and maintained conservative ideas in the senate. Appointed in 58 to quell an insurrection at Puteoli, he failed by over-severity. Nero banished him in 65 for preserving an image of his ancestor, the tyrannicide. Though old and blind, he lived long enough to be recalled by Vespasian.

L. Cassius Longinus. VI. 15, 45. Brother of the last; consul ordinarius of the same year (A.D. 30). Married Drusilla, sister of Caligula, in 33. Caligula, on coming to the throne, took her from him, and sent him to be proconsul of Asia. Fearing an oracle, which bade him "beware of Cassius," he ordered his brother-in-law to be sent home in chains, but was killed by Cassius Chaerea before he arrived.

Cassius Severus. I. 72; IV. 21. A distinguished orator under Augustus, who made himself odious by bitter libels and reckless accusations. He was banished to Crete in A.D. 8, but in 24 had made new enemies there, and was confined on the rock of Seriphus, where he died nine years later.

Catonius Justus. I. 29. Centurio primipilus in Pannonia, A.D. 14. Praefectus praetorio under Claudius, he was executed by Messalina, A.D. 43.

Catualda. II. 62. Chief of the Gtones, revolted against Maroboduus, A.D. 22.

Catullinus. See Blitius.

Caudium. XV. 13. A Samnian town between Beneventum and Capua.

Cecrops. XI. 14. First king and civilizer of Athens, B.C. 1556 (?).

Celendria. II. 80. (Kilindria.) Sea-port town of Cilicia Trachea.

Celer. See Carinas, Domitius, Egnatius, Propertius.

Celer. XV. 42. Architect of Nero's "Golden House." Undertook to engineer a canal from Avernus to Ostia, but did not succeed.

P. Celer. XIII. 1, 33. Equestrian procurator of Claudius and Nero in Asia Minor, employed by Agrippina in A.D. 54 to poison M. Junius Silanus. Being accused of peculation in 57, Nero could not decently acquit him, but reserved judgment, until he died of old age.

Celsus. VI. 9. See Julius Celsus.

Celsus. VI. 14. An eques, executed as accomplice of Sejanus, A.D. 32.

Oenchreus. III. 61. A river near Ephesus. See note.

Cercina. I. 53; IV. 13. A rocky island off the lesser Syrtis. The group is still called Kerkini.

Ceres. II. 49; XV. 44, 53, 74. Creatress and earth-goddess. Her first temple at Rome, built B.C. 498, was burned in B.C. 31, and re-erected by Tiberius, A.D. 17. It stood near the Circus Maximus, where Ludi Cereales were celebrated, April 12th to 19th, inclusive.

Cerialis. See Anicius, Petilius.

Certus. See Quintius.

Cervarius Proculus. XV. 50, 66, 71. An eques engaged in Piso's conspiracy, who turned state's evidence.

O. Cestius Gallus. III. 36; VI. 7, 31. A prudent senator, compelled to undertake a couple of accusations in A.D. 32. Consul in 35.

C. Cestius Gallus. XV. 25. Son of the last; consul, A.D. 42; appointed to the civil government of Syria in 63. In 66, when the rebellion of the Jews broke out against their procurator, Gessius Florus, Gallus marched to Jerusalem, encompassed it with his army, and had it completely in his power, when, for some unexplained reason, he drew off his forces, giving to the city an opportunity to prepare for the siege, and to the Christians time to fly to the mountains. He died soon after, before he could be superseded by Vespasian.

Cestius Proculus. XIII. 30. Praetorian proconsul of Crete and Cyrene. Acquitted of extortion, A.D. 56.

Cethegus. See Cornelius.

Chalcedon. XII. 63. Founded by the Megarians on the Asiatic coast of the Thracian Bosphorus. Subsequently overshadowed by Byzantium, it continued to exist until destroyed by the Turks.

Chaldaei. II. 27; III. 22; VI. 20; XII. 22, 52, 68; XIV. 9; XVI. 14. The Babylonians, famous for their astronomical observations, dating from B.C. 2100. Under the Romans, the name was applied to astrologers and magicians.

Chamavi. XIII. 55. A Westphalian tribe of Germans, near Hamm, which bears their name. They had driven the Bructeri from the vicinity before Tacitus wrote his Germania (§ 33). They came from Friesland.

Charicles. VI. 50. Court physician of Tiberius, whose death he predicted. Quoted by Galen as a medical authority.

Chariovalda. II. 11. Commander of the Batavians, under Germanicus.

Chatti. I. 55; II. 7, 25, 41, 88; XII. 27; XIII. 57. A tribe in Nassau and Hesse, to which they gave their name. Defeated by the elder Drusus and Germanicus, they were strong enough to afford another victory to Pompeius in A.D. 50. In 58 they contended with the Hermunduri for the salt springs of the Saal.

Chauci. I. 38, 60; II. 17, 24; XI. 18, 19; XIII. 55. A tribe on the North Sea, between the Ems and Elbe, divided by the Weser into the Eastern or greater, and Western or lesser, Chauci. Tiberius conquered them, and they were faithful allies of Germanicus. Revolted in 47, and were never again subdued. They infested the Gallic coast with pirate craft, and, as the Hokings, joined in the Frank confederacy.

Cherusci. (Die Herrscher = the rulers?). I. 56, 59, 64; II. 4, 17, 26; XI. 16; XII. 28; XIII. 56. The most celebrated of German tribes, situated between the Weser and Elbe, north of the Hartz mountains. They defeated Varus in A.D. 9; were defeated, but not subdued, by Germanicus, 14-16. In 47 they appealed to Claudius to appoint them a king. By pride and indolence they subsequently lost their power, and were defeated by the Chatti. In later times they appear as Saxons, and invaded England under Hengist. When Charlemagne attacked Saxony in the eighth century, he destroyed the Irminsûl (Hermann's pillar), which commemorated their national hero.

Cibyra. IV. 13. A commercial city of Southern Phrygia; injured by an earthquake, A.D. 23, and granted a remission of taxes for three years. Its remains are found near the village of Horzoom.

Cilicia. II. 42, 58, 68, 80; III. 48; VI. 31; XII. 55; XIII. 8; XVI. 21. The southern coast of Asia Minor between parallel 32 and Mt. Amanus. The western part was called Cilicia Trachea (Aspera), from its mountains; the eastern part was a beautiful plain watered by the Cydnus and Pyramus. Cilicia was an imperial province, governed by a propraetor; but Cilicia Trachea remained under Archelaus of Cappadocia until A.D. 17, and then had local chieftains. The population was Aramaic; the cities, Greek.

Cillo. See Junius.

Cilnius. See Maecenas.

Cingonius Varro. XIV. 45. A senator, mentioned in A.D. 61. Executed by Galba in 69 for composing a seditious oration for Nymphidius Sabinus.

Cinthis. II. 52. A Gaetulian tribe near the lesser Syrtis.

Cinna. See Cornelius.

Cirta. III. 74. (Constantine.) Chief city of Numidia.

Clanis. I. 79. (Chiana.) A confluent of the Tiber. It was proposed to turn it into the Arno to prevent inundations. This has been done in modern times, as the watershed is very slight on either side.

Clarus. II. 54; XII. 22. An Ionian town near Colophon, famous for its oracle.

Its priests were taken from certain second-sighted Milesian families, and inspired by draughts from a mysterious fountain. Strabo says they were short lived, and Tertullian calls it scaturigo daemonica.

Classicianus. See Julius.

Claudia Pulchra. IV. 52, 66. Daughter of the elder Marcella; grand-daughter of Octavia; second cousin and intimate friend of Agrippina. On this account Sejanus procured her accusation and ruin in 26 A.D., in spite of Agrippina's entreaties.

Claudia Quinta. IV. 64. When the statue of Cybele was brought from Pessinus to Rome in B.C. 204, the vessel which bore it was stranded in the Tiber, and could not be towed up-stream. Claudia, who had been accused of unchastity, accepted this ordeal to prove her innocence. She grasped the towing-rope, and without aid drew the ship to the city. She was honoured by a statue in the temple of Cybele.

Claudia Silana. VI. 20, 45. Married to Caligula in A.D. 33 (Dio Cassius says 35), and died in childbirth before 37.

Cl. Claudius Balbillus. XIII. 22. Appointed prefect by Nero at Agrippina's request, A.D. 55, he reached Alexandria by a six days' voyage from Messina, the best time on ancient record.

Claudius Demianus. XVI. 10. Joined in the accusation of L. Vetus, who had imprisoned him for his crimes in Asia Minor two years before (A.D. 63).

Claudius Drusus Caesar. Son of Drusus Sr. and Antonia Jr., born B.C. 10. He was weakly in childhood, and grew up with a want of common sense and an inaptitude for business, which caused him to be despised and disregarded, even in his own family. He was not without literary ability. Augustus was surprised that a youth who could not talk sensibly could declaim with elegance; he spoke Greek, studied under T. Livius, and wrote histories of Etruria and Carthage. He spent his life with low flatterers and freedmen. He divorced his first two wives (Plautia Urgulanilla and Aelia Paetina), and was married to the beautiful and profligate Valeria Messalina. When his nephew Caligula was murdered, A.D. 41, Claudius hid in a corner of the palace, but was seized by the praetorian guards, dragged off to their camp, and declared emperor against his will. His reign was marked by good intention and utter weakness. His freedmen, Pallas and Narcissus, abused their influence with him, but he was chiefly disgraced by his wife Messalina. After her execution in 41, Pallas forced him to marry his niece, Agrippina Jr. She soon established her power completely, obliging him to adopt her son Nero, to the prejudice of his own child Britannicus. He afterwards repented the step, but she poisoned him before he could take action, A.D. 54.

M. Claudius Marcellus. I. 3; II. 41; III. 64; VI. 51. Son of Octavia; born B.C. 43. A favourite with his uncle Augustus, at whose side he rode in the triumph of 29. In 24 he married his cousin Julia, and was admitted to the senate; in 24 was curule aedile. In 23 Augustus, during an illness, handed his signet to Agrippa, the only man of sufficient power and position to inherit the half-formed empire. Marcellus, who considered himself heir-apparent, was angry and jealous. Upon the emperor's recovery, Agrippa, with remarkable loyalty and self-control, retired from Rome, but was recalled within the year by the death of his young rival. Augustus pronounced his nephew's eulogy, and built the Theatrum Marcelli in his memory. Vergil's famous verses (Aen. VI. 861-887) were composed in 22.

M. Claudius Marcellus Aeserninus. III. 11; XI. 6. Son of the consul of B.C. 22, by a daughter of Asinius Pollio, whose eloquence he inherited. He was a leading advocate during the later days of Augustus, and was consul suffectus under Tiberius.

Cl. Claudius Nero. I. 10; V. 1; VI. 51. Quaestor and admiral under Julius Caesar, he sided with the conspirators after his death. Defended Perusia with L. Antony, and at its fall in 40 B.C. fled to Sex. Pompey and M. Antony. On the reconciliation of the latter, Nero returned to Rome, and soon after (38) surrendered his wife Livia to Augustus, who had fallen in love with her. Nero seemed to acquiesce, and was present at the wedding feast. Died in 33.

Cl. Claudius Nero Drusus Germanicus. See Nero.

Claudius Senecio. XIII. 12; XV. 50, 56, 70. A freedman's son, Nero's boon companion. In A.D. 65 an unacknowledged coolness arose between them. Senecio joined Piso's conspiracy. He turned state's evidence, but at the last died with composure.

Clausus. See Attus.

Clemens Julius. See Julius.

Clemens. II. 39, 27. A slave of Agrippa Postumus. He made a plot to rescue his master from Planasia, but, finding him dead, assumed his character and excited a rebellion. He was caught and executed, A.D. 16.

Cleonicus. XV. 45. Seneca's freedman.

Cleopatra. XI. 30. A concubine of the Emperor Claudius.

Clitæ. VI. 41; XII. 55. A hill tribe of Cilicia Trachea. They revolted in A.D. 36 and 52, when their governors tried to introduce the machinery of a Roman province.

P. Clodius Pulcher. XI. 7. Cicero's enemy, killed by Milo, B.C. 52. He was an able orator, and sold his services, or collusion, freely.

Clodius Quirinalis. XIII. 30. Commander of the imperial oarsmen at Ravenna; condemned in A.D. 56 for cruelty and extortion.

Cluvdlenus Quietus. XV. 71. Supposed accomplice of Piso.

M. Cluvius Rufus. XIII. 20; XIV. 2. Served under Galba; was consul A.D. 45; governor of Spain under Galba and Vitellius. He composed a history of his own time, twice quoted by Tacitus.

M. Cocceius Nerva. IV. 58; VI. 26. Consul, A.D. 22; curator aquarum publicarum, 24-33. A jurist of the school of Antistius Labeo, and a legal author; mentioned in the Digest. The intimate of Tiberius, he was the only senator admitted to the privacy of Capreae. In 33 he starved himself to death, weary of the service of such a master.

M. Cocceius Nerva. XV. 72. Grandson of the last; granted triumphal honours by Nero, A.D. 65. Emperor of Rome, 96-98 A.D.

Coeletæ. III. 38. A Thracian tribe in modern Roumelia.

Coeranus. XIV. 59. Etruscan philosopher, quoted as an authority on meteorology by Pliny Sr.

Coeus. XII. 61. A Titan. Begat Leto or Latona by his sister Phoebe.

Colchi. VI. 34. A barbarous tribe on the east coast of the Euxine, connected by tradition with the voyage of the Argonauts.

Colophon. II. 54. A flourishing seaport of Ionia.

O. Cominius. IV. 31. A Roman eques, pardoned for lampooning Tiberius, at the request of his brother, a senator, B.D. 24.

Commageni. II. 42, 56; XV. 12. A tribe (mentioned in the inscriptions of Tiglath Pileser I., B.C. 1130) between the Euphrates and Cappadocian mountains. Their capital, Samosata (Sumeisat), was an important city. They were governed by a line of Antiochi, descended from the kings of Syria; put under a procurator from A.D. 17 to 38; governed by the fourth and last Antiochus until 72, when Vespasian established them as a Roman province.

Concordia. II. 32. When the patricians and plebeians settled their controversies by the Licinian laws in 367 B.C., Camillus dedicated a temple to Concord at the foot of the Capitol. Tiberius restored it. The substructions still exist.

Consus. XII. 24. God of secret counsel and horses. His subterranean altar in the Circus Maximus at the south corner of the Palatine was uncovered each year on August 1st. Sacrifices were offered, and horses had a holiday.

Considius Aequus. III. 37. An eques, punished for malicious prosecution, A.D. 21.

Considius Proculus. VI. 18. Executed for treason, A.D. 33.

Corbulo. See Domitius.

Corcyra. III. 1. (Corfu.) An island on the Epirote coast, 100 miles from Brundisium.

Cordus. See Caesius, Cremutius, Julius.

Corinthus. V. 10. (Gorho.) Capital of Achaia. Colonised by Julius Caesar in B.C. 46, 100 years after its overthrow by Mummius.

Corma. XII. 14. An unknown river of Assyria.

Cornelia. IV. 16. Chosen vestal, A.D. 23.

Cornelia Coesa. XV. 22. Chosen vestal, A.D. 62.

Cornelius. VI. 29, sq. A delator who ruined Mam. Aemilius Scaurus in A.D. 34. He and his accomplice Servilius were afterwards deported for blackmailing Varius Ligur.

L. Cornelius Balbus Sr. and Jr. III. 72; XI. 24; XII. 60. The elder was a native of Gades; naturalised at Rome by special Act, B.C. 72; the follower of Pompey, Caesar, and Augustus, choosing the winning side with great sagacity. The first foreigner who obtained a consulship (B.C. 40). Balbus Jr., his nephew, served under Julius and Augustus. Like his uncle, was a correspondent of Cicero. Conquered the Garamantes, and was the first foreigner to enjoy a triumph, B.C. 19. Built a theatre with four onyx pillars.

dedicating it when Augustus returned to Rome, B.C. 13.

Serv. Cornelius Cethegus. IV. 17. Consul, A.D. 24.

Cornelius Cethegus Labeo. IV. 73. Legatus of the fifth legion in Friesland, A.D. 28.

L. Cornelius Cinna. I. 1. Successor of Marius in control of the popular party. He governed Rome by successive illegal consulships from 87 to 84 B.C., when he fell in a mutiny.

P. Cornelius Dolabella. III. 47, 69; IV. 23, 26, 66; XI. 22. Grandson of Cicero's son-in-law. Consul, A.D. 10; governor of Dalmatia, 14; proconsul of Africa, 24. He defeated and killed Tacfarinas, but was refused triumphal honours by Tiberius for personal reasons. Carried a decree of the senate in 47, requiring quaestors to exhibit games at their own expense.

Cornelius Flaccus. XIII. 39. Legatus legionis of Corbulo in Armenia, A.D. 58.

Cn. Cornelius Lentulus Gaetulicus. IV. 42, 46; VI. 30. A younger son of Lentulus Cossus, from whose exploits in Gaetulia the son derived his name. Consul A.D. 26, and for ten years commander of the legions on the upper Rhine. Married the daughter of Apronius Caesianus, and betrothed his own daughter to the son of Sejanus. When Sejanus fell in 34, Tiberius did not venture to attack the German commander, but Caligula had him executed in 39.

Cossus Cornelius Lentulus. IV. 34. Elder brother of the last. Consul, A.D. 25.

Cossus Cornelius Lentulus. XIV. 20. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 60.

Cn. Cornelius Lentulus. I. 27; II. 32; III. 68; IV. 29, 44. Obtained triumphal honours, B.C. 25, for defeating the Dacian king, Cotiso. Consul, B.C. 18. Sent as counsellor of Drusus Jr. to the Pannonian legions, A.D. 14. In A.D. 24 Vibius Serenus accused him of treason; but the old man only laughed, and Tiberius said that if Lentulus hated him he considered himself worthy of death. Died A.D. 25. He made a large fortune, and used it well.

Cn. Cornelius Lentulus. III. 59. Consul, B.C. 14. Augustus found him poor, proud, and stupid; drew him from retirement and made him one of the richest men in Rome (worth £3,300,000). Lentulus complained that the emperor had interrupted his literary pursuits. Tiberius, when in want of money, scared the old augur into committing suicide, leaving a will in the emperor's favour.

Cornelius Lupus. XIII. 43. Governor of Crete under Tiberius; consul suffectus, A.D. 32; accused and ruined by P. Suillius.

L. Cornelius Marcellus. XVI. 8. A senator accused as accomplice of Junius Silanus, A.D. 65. He escaped by deferring his trial. Afterwards proconsul of Sicily, and executed by Galba in Spain.

Cornelius Martialis. XV. 71. Tribune of a praetorian cohort, A.D. 65.

L. Cornelius Merula. III. 58. Flamen dialis, B.C. 58. See note.

Servius Cornelius Orfitus. XII. 41; XVI. 12. Consul with Claudius, A.D. 51. Proposed in 66 to change the names of the months. Accused and convicted of treason by the efforts of Aquilius Regulus, in Nero's last years.

P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus Major. II. 59; XII. 38. Hero of the second Punic War, serving in Spain B.C. 210-206; Sicily, 205-204; Africa, 203-202. He was a broad-minded and noble man; treated Hannibal with generosity, and appreciated Greek civilisation.

L. Cornelius Scipio Asiaticus. III. 62. Brother of the last. Won his agnomen by conquering Antiochus Third at Magnesia, B.C. 190.

P. Cornelius Scipio Africanus Minor. III. 66. Destroyed Carthage, B.C. 146. A good soldier and respectable statesman, of incorruptible honour and patriotism in an evil age.

P. Cornelius Lentulus Scipio. III. 74. Legatus legionis in Africa A.D. 22. Afterwards praetor aerarii and consul.

P. Cornelius Scipio. XI. 2, 4; XII. 53; XIII. 25. Son of the last. Obligated to vote for the condemnation of his wife Poppaea, A.D. 47. Disgraced himself by flattering Pallas. Consul, A.D. 56. (Nipperdey thinks that the father was Poppaea's husband.)

Cornelius Sulla. II. 48. A spendthrift, expelled from the senate by Tiberius, A.D. 17.

L. Cornelius Sulla, dictator. I. 1; II. 55; III. 27, 62; IV. 56; VI. 46; XI. 22; XII. 23, 60, 62. Born B.C. 138 of a noble but impoverished family; spent his youth in profligacy. Marius, his commander in the Jugurthan and Cimbric wars, conceived a jealousy of his success in the Social War (90-89). Marius was appointed over Sulla's head to the command of the Mithridatic war by the popular party (88). Sulla, favourite of the legions, took control of Rome, expelled his enemies, and proceeded to the East. Marius recovered Rome, but Sulla wisely continued in the East until he had conquered Mithridates, and returned with a victorious army to crush his rivals. He was elected perpetual dictator, B.C. 82. By active and intelligent legislation, for which he employed the terror-stricken comitia as his tool, he re-established aristocratic government, deprived the tribunes of their power, and bestowed all judicial functions on the senate. He resigned his dictatorship in 79, and retired to an estate at Puteoli, where he devoted himself to literature and debauchery. Died in 78, being eaten by worms.

L. Cornelius Sulla Felix. III. 31; VI. 15. Descendant of the last; consul, A.D. 33. His father, L. Sulla, consul in B.C. 5, was half-brother of Mamercus Scaurus, who afterwards married his sister-in-law, and was thus both uncle and stepfather of Felix.

Faustus Cornelius Sulla Felix. XII. 52; XIII. 23, 47; XIV. 57. Nephew of the last. Consul suffectus, A.D. 31; ordinarius, 52. Married Antonia, the daughter of Claudius. In 55 an absurd charge of treason was brought against him, which was easily refuted, but left a suspicion in Nero's mind that Sulla's careless life was a mask for ambitious designs. He exiled him to Marseilles in A.D. 58, and had him murdered in 62.

Cornelius Tacitus. IV. 32; XI. 11. Roman statesman and historian of the first and second centuries A.D.

Cornutus. See Caecilius.

Corvinus. See Valerius.

Coruncani. XI. 24. Ti. Coruncanius, born of a Camerian family settled at Tusculum, was a great jurist of the third century B.C. Though not Roman born, he became consul, censor, dictator, and pontifex maximus.

Cos. II. 75; IV. 14; XII. 61. (Stanchio = Ἰς τῆς Κῶ.) One of the Sporades, celebrated for a temple of Aesculapius, with rights of asylum. Made free by Claudius, A.D. 53.

Cosa. II. 39. (Ansedonia.) Seaport of Etruria, opposite Planasia.

Cossus. See Cornelius.

Cossutianus Capito. XI. 6; XIII. 33; XIV. 48; XVI. 17, 21, 28, 33. Opposed the restriction of lawyers' fees in A.D. 47. Expelled from the senate in 57, by the influence of Thræsea, for extortion while governor of Cilicia. Restored by the influence of his father-in-law, Tigellinus, in 61, he became a notorious delator.

Cotta. See Aurelius.

Cotys First. II. 64-67; III. 38; IV. 5. King of the Thracian coast, A.D. 7-19. Protector of the poet Ovid at Tomi. After the death of Augustus, his uncle, Rhescuporis, king of the interior highlands, tried to provoke his nephew to war, seized him by treachery, and murdered him in spite of representations from Rome.

Cotys Second. XI. 9. Son and heir of the last. In A.D. 39 Caligula gave the whole of Thrace to Rhoemetalces, and transferred Cotys to Armenia Minor. In 47 he made an attempt upon Armenia Proper, but was warned by Claudius to desist.

Cotys. XII. 15, 18. King of Bosphorus, 46-83 A.D.

Crassus. See Licinius.

Cremutius Cordus. IV. 34, sq. Historian of the civil wars and reign of Augustus, under whom, and with whose approval, he published his work. He offended Sejanus by bold remarks (III. 72, N.), and was accused of treason in 25, for having called C. Cassius "last of the Romans." Finding his case prejudged, he appealed to posterity, retired to his house, and starved himself. The senate ordered his books to be burned, but his daughter Marcia saved copies of most of them.

Creperius Gallus. XIV. 5. Attendant of Agrippina Jr.

Creseus. See Tarquinius.

Creta. III. 26, 38, 63; IV. 21; XIII. 30; XV. 20. (Candia.) Celebrated for early civilisation and the laws of Minos. Under the empire formed one senatorial province with Cyrene.

Creticus. See Caecilius.

Curtilius Mancius. XIII. 56. Consul suffectus, probably in A.D. 55. Legatus of Upper Germany, 56-58.

T. Curtisius. A praetorian veteran. Incited a servile insurrection at Brundisium, A.D. 24.

Curtius Atticus. IV. 58; VI. 10. An eques illustris. A friend of Ovid and literary critic. Followed Tiberius to Capreae in 26. Executed at the desire of Sejanus.

Curtius Montanus. XVI. 28, 29, 33. A young nobleman who wrote verses. Nero banished him, A.D. 66, from literary jealousy, or because he was offended by some witticism. He was recalled after Nero's death.

Curtius Rufus. XI. 20. A quaestor's clerk in Africa, roused to ambition by the prophecy of a spectre. He became consul; governor of Upper Germany, A.D. 47; died proconsul of Africa in fulfilment of the prophecy.

Curtius Severus. XII. 55. Commander of Syrian cavalry.

Cutius Lupus. IV. 27. Quaestor of woods and forests, A.D. 24. Crushed an attempted conspiracy, with the aid of the coastguard.

Cusus. II. 63. Perhaps the Waag, a confluent of the Danube, from North-western Hungary.

Cyclades. II. 55; V. 10. The islands of the Aegean which circle about Delos, opposed to the Sporades, scattered over the sea near Crete and Rhodes.

Cyclopes. III. 61. Fabulous giants, the servants of Vulcan.

Cyme. II. 47. An Aeolian seaport, injured by an earthquake, A.D. 17.

Cyprus. III. 62. Its Semitic population was devoted to the worship of a nature-goddess, identified by the Greeks with Aphrodite.

Cyrene. III. 70; XIV. 18. A Greek colony west of Egypt. Became subject to the Ptolemies, passed to Apion, natural son of Ptolemy Physcon, and was bequeathed by him in 96 to the senate. Under the empire it became a senatorial province in connection with Crete.

Cyrrhus. II. 57. (Corus.) Eighty miles N.E. of Antioch, capital of its district.

Cyrus. III. 62; VI. 31. (Khoros, the Sun.) Founder of the Persian empire. He defeated his grandfather, Astyages, and consolidated the Medes with the Persians, B.C. 559. Conquered Lydia and Babylon, and fell in an expedition against the tribes of Central Asia, B.C. 529.

Cythnus. III. 69. One of the Cyclades, now called Thermia, from its warm springs.

Cyzicus. IV. 36. (Balkiz = παλαιά Κύζικος.) A Greek colony, south of the Propontis. Besieged by Mithridates in B.C. 74, it held out until relieved by Lucullus, who made it free in consequence. It lost and regained its freedom under Augustus, and was again deprived of it by Tiberius, A.D. 25.

Dahae. II. 3; XI. 8, 10. The Tartars between the Caspian and Herat, connected with the Arsacid kings by blood and policy.

Dandaridae. XII. 15, 16. A Slavonian race on the river Hypanis (Kuban) in Circassia. They were partly civilised by Pontic influence.

Danuvius. II. 63; IV. 5; XII. 30. (Donau.) The north-eastern boundary of the Roman empire, from the Alps to the Black Sea. Two fleets (Classis Pannonica and Moesica) were maintained on it by the Government.

Darius Codomannus. III. 63; XII. 13. (Dāryavush.) Last king of Persia, B.C. 336-330, defeated by Alexander at Arbela, 331.

Davara. VI. 41. A prominence in the Taurus range.

Decangi. XII. 32. A British tribe. Perhaps near the Ordovices in North Wales.

Decianus Catus. XIV. 32. A procurator rationalis in Britain, A.D. 61.

Decrius. III. 20. An officer who died bravely in the African campaign, A.D. 20.

Decrius Calpurnianus. XI. 35. Prefect of the vigiles.

Delmatia. II. 53; III. 9; IV. 5; VI. 37. (Dalmatia and Herzegovina.) A portion of Illyricum which joined the Pannonian revolt, and was conquered by Tiberius, who enjoyed a Dalmatian triumph in A.D. 9. Two legions were stationed among the people.

Delphi. II. 54. A town in Phocis, seat of the oracle of Apollo.

Delos. III. 61. (Dhiles.) Centre of the Cyclades. The birthplace of Apollo.

Demaratus. XI. 14. Of the Bacchiad family, driven from Corinth by the revolution of Cypselus, B.C. 658. He settled in Etruria, and his son, Tarquinius Priscus, became king of Rome.

Demetrius. XVI. 34. A cynic philosopher, highly praised by Seneca, and the companion of Thræsea's last hours. The theatrical taste of the age led him to remarks which forced Vespasian to banish him.

Demianus. See Claudius.

Demonax. XI. 9. An Armenian noble, easily overcome by Mithridates, A.D. 47.

Densus. See Julius.

Denter. See Romulus.

Denthellates ager. IV. 43. A part of the western slope of Mt. Taygetus. The Spartan king Teclus was slain there in 743 B.C., while sacrificing at the altar of Artemis Limnatis, and the district became the source of endless controversy between Messenia and Lacedaemon. An inscription recording the alternate success of the claimants to 140 B.C. was found at Olympia during the German excavations (Edinburgh Review, CCCV.) In A.D. 25 Tiberius finally awarded it to Messenia.

Diana. XII. 8; Ephesia. III. 61; IV. 55; Leucophryene. III. 62; Limnatis. IV. 43; Persica. III. 62. Diana or Jana, the sister of Janus, worshipped by the early Latins as queen of the night at Aricia and elsewhere, was identified, for no good reason, with Artemis. Artemis, in turn, was confused with Anaitis and other oriental nature-goddesses, worshipped at Ephesus, Magnesia, Hierocaesarea, etc.

A. Didius Gallus. XII. 15, 40; XIV 29. Consul suffectus; governor of Moesia (expelling Mithridates from Bosphorus, A.D. 46); curator aquarum from his return to Rome until 59; governor of Britain, 52 or 53 to 59. He worked energetically to secure the office, but affected to accept it with reluctance.

Dido. XVI. 1. Phoenician princess, founder of Carthage.

Didymus. VI. 24. A Greek freedman, a spy on Drusus.

Dil. III. 38. A tribe of Balkan mountaineers.

Dinla. IV. 50. A Thracian chief. Surrendered to the Romans, A.D. 26.

Dolabella. See Cornelius.

Domitia Lepida. XI. 37; XII. 64. Daughter of Antonia Major, and grand-niece of Augustus. Her brother was Nero's father. Her daughter Messalina, the wife of Claudius, procured the death of her mother's second husband, Appius Silanus, but Lepida pardoned her daughter and comforted her last hours. In 54 Lepida became the rival of Agrippina in the control of her nephew, Nero. Agrippina had long hated her sister-in-law (she had been accused of incest with her brother), and procured her condemnation for treason.

Domitia. XIII. 19-21. Sister of the last. Her husband, Passienus Crispus, deserted her to marry her sister-in-law, Agrippina Jr., whom she consequently tried to ruin in 55 A.D. Domitia was finally murdered by her nephew, Nero.

Domitius Afer. IV. 52, 66; XIV. 19. A native of Nîmes, distinguished for eloquence. Praetor in A.D. 25. In 26 he accused Claudia Pulchra, Agrippina's cousin, to please Tiberius. Meeting Agrippina soon after, he slunk aside; but she cried out that he need not fear—it was not he, but Agamemnon, that had wronged her. In 27 he accused Claudia's son, Quintilius. When Caligula succeeded, he intended to avenge his mother upon Afer, and delivered a violent speech against him in the senate. He escaped by making no defence, but affecting unbounded admiration for the emperor's eloquence. He was consul suffectus in 39, and curator aquarum from 49 until he died in 59, at the table, by overfeeding.

L. Domitius Ahenobarbus. IV. 44. Consul, B.C. 54. A determined adversary of Julius Caesar. Fell at Pharsalia.

Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus. IV. 44. Son of the last. Was pardoned by Caesar after Pharsalia, but was privy to his murder, and commanded a fleet for Brutus and Cassius. Two years after Philippi, he surrendered to Antony on favourable terms, and became his intimate adviser. Went over to Augustus shortly before Actium, and died soon after. Consul, B.C. 32.

L. Domitius Ahenobarbus. I. 63; IV. 44. Son of the last. At the peace of Tarentum, B.C. 37, he was betrothed to Antonia Major, a child two years old. Was consul, B.C. 16, and commanded in Germany, penetrating farther than any other Roman. An arrogant, cruel man, generally disliked.

Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus. IV. 75; VI. 1, 45, 47; XIII. 10. Son of the last, Consul, A.D. 32. Narrowly escaped punishment as a paramour of Albucilla. He was an evil man, and found his match in Agrippina. When their son Nero was born, and his friends congratulated him, he told them that a child born of himself and Agrippina must be a curse to the human race.

Domitius Balbus. XIV. 40. A rich ex-praetor.

Domitius Caecilianus. XVI. 34. A friend of Thræsea Paetus.

Domitius Celer. II. 77, 78, 79. A friend who accompanied Cn. Piso to the East.

Cn. Domitius Corbulo. III. 31. An ex-praetor in A.D. 21. Afterwards commissioner of high roads, and employed by Caligula to extract money from contractors. Consul suffectus in 39.

Cn. Domitius Corbulo. XI. 18, 20; XIII. 8, 34-41; XIV. 24; XV. 3, 9, 12, 17, 25, 30. Probably son of the last. Served against the Chauci in A.D. 47. The timid Claudius recalled him, but allowed him triumphal honours. "Happy," said Corbulo, "were the generals of olden times." In 54 he checked the attempts of the Parthians on Armenia, and after severe campaigns, from 58 to 63, forced Tiridates to acknowledge himself the vassal of Rome. Corbulo was a noble man, and a great general. He was steadily faithful to Nero. The latter recalled him in 67. Corbulo landed at Cenchreae, to present himself to the emperor at Corinth, and was met by his death warrant. He exclaimed, "Well deserved!" and plunged his sword in his heart. He was a man of gigantic size, and shared every hardship with the common soldiers.

Domitius Silus. XV. 59. First husband of Arria Galla.

Domitius Statius. XV. 71. Tribune of a praetorian cohort; cashiered for suspected complicity with Piso, A.D. 65.

Donusa. IV. 30. (Heraklia). One of the Cyclades, six miles S.W. of Naxos.

Doryphorus. XIV. 65. Nero's freedman. Nero made him a present of £83,000, and Agrippina had it counted out in her son's presence to show him how much it was. Nero pretended to consider it less than he expected, and doubled it. In A.D. 62, when in want of money, he poisoned Doryphorus and took his property.

Drusilla. VI. 15. Daughter of Germanicus, probably born A.D. 17. Educated by her grandmother Antonia, and married in 33 to L. Cassius Longinus. Caligula, when emperor, took her from her husband, and lived in incest with her. He was mad with grief when she died in 38, and honoured her as a goddess, with the name Panthea.

Drusus Nero Claudius. I. 3, 33, 41; II. 7, 8, 41, 82; III. 5; IV. 72; XIII. 53. Second son of Ti. Claudius Nero and Livia, born after his mother's marriage to Augustus, who was reported to be his real father. In B.C. 15 he was sent with his brother Tiberius against the Rhaeti and Vindelici; in 13 pacified Gaul; in 12 conquered Friesland, and sailed the North Sea to the mouth of the Ems. In subsequent campaigns he advanced to the Elbe, erected fortifications, and changed the course of the Lower Rhine by dykes and a canal. In 9 B.C. he was fatally injured by the fall of a horse. His brother Tiberius hastened to him from Italy, arrived at the moment of his death, and accompanied the funeral cortège to Rome on foot. Drusus was a handsome, intelligent, princely Roman of the best type. It was reported that he intended to restore the republic, and that Tiberius brought him into disfavour with Augustus by disclosing his plans. He married Antonia Jr.

Drusus Caesar. I. 24, 29, 30, 55, 76; II. 43, 44, 62, 64; III. 7, 8, 11, 19, 31, 56; IV. 3, 8; XII. 29. Called Drusus Jr. Son of Tiberius by Vipsania, born B.C. 13; married Livilla, the sister of Germanicus. On the death of Augustus, A.D. 14, he quelled the mutiny of the Pannonian legions with energy and dignity. He was consul in 15, and gained bad repute in the city by drunkenness, and inordinate interest in gladiatorial fights. He was nicknamed Castor for knocking down an eques. He was honourable however, and showed himself a generous friend to Germanicus, his natural rival. In 16 he returned to Illyricum, and ruined Maroboduus by diplomacy with German tribes. After the death of Germanicus, whom he sincerely mourned, he returned to Rome, enjoyed an ovation and another consulship, and was granted the tribunician power in 22. Sejanus, whom he had offended by an angry blow, and who was scheming for the empire, seduced his wife Livilla, who poisoned her husband in 23.

Drusus. IV. 4, 8, 17, 36, 60; V. 10; VI. 23. Second son of Germanicus. Received a pontificate with the toga virilis in A.D. 23; was afterwards appointed augur, and in 25 praefectus urbi. Drusus was violent and licentious. His mother's preference for his elder brother Nero roused his jealousy, and made him the tool of Sejanus for his brother's destruction. His own passionate words, repeated by his worthless wife, Aemilia Lepida, occasioned his arrest for treason in 30. Tiberius kept him in the Palatine dungeons for three years as a counterpoise to the influence of Sejanus in case of necessity, but, after the fall of the latter, starved the young prince to death.

Drusus. See Livius, Scribonius.

Dubius Avitus. XIII. 54, 56. Governor of Lower Germany in A.D. 58. He had been governor of Aquitania before his consulship.

Ducennius Geminus. XV. 18. Consular commissioner of taxes, A.D. 62; praefectus urbi, 69.

O. Duilius. II. 49. Defeated the Carthaginians at sea, B.C. 260. On his return erected the Columna Duilia and a temple of Janus.

Ecbatana. XV. 31. (Cuneiform, Hagmatana; modern, Hamadan.) Capital of ancient Media, at the foot of Mt. Orontes (Elwand). It was a summer resort of the Parthian kings.

Edessa. XII. 12. (Urfah.) A Mesopotamian town, forty miles N.E. of Zeugma, governed by a native dynasty of Acbari.

Egnatia Maximilla. XV. 71. In A.D. 65 followed her husband, Glitius Gallus, into exile at Andros, where inscriptions attest their liberality to the little island.

P. Egnatius Celer. XVI. 32. A Stoic philosopher from Berytus in Syria, who accused his pupil Bareas Soranus of treason in A.D. 66. He was executed for false witness in the reign of Vespasian.

M. Egnatius Rufus. I. 10. A young demagogue. Disappointed of the consulship, he plotted unsuccessfully against Augustus, and was put to death in prison, B.C. 19.

Elephantine. II. 61. An island just below the first rapids of the Nile, more than a hundred miles south of Thebes. Boundary of Egypt and Nubia.

Elymaei. VI. 44. Turanian hill-tribes in the mountains east of Babylonia. They had their own kings, but served in the Parthian army.

Ennia Thrasylla. VI. 45. Wife of Macro. By her husband's advice she prostituted herself to Caligula, who gave her a written promise to make her his empress. On reaching the throne, however, he put them to death on charge of corrupting his innocent boyhood.

L. Ennius. III. 70. Eques. Pardoned for melting the emperor's image, A.D. 22.

M'. Ennius. I. 38. Praefectus castrorum. Had served in Pannonia in A.D. 8.

Epaphroditus. XV. 55. A Greek freedman, Nero's master of petitions. He aided Nero in committing suicide, and was subsequently executed for this by Domitian, who was unwilling that any form of tyrannicide should go unpunished.

Ephesus. III. 61; IV. 55; XVI. 23. (Ayasuluk.) Originally a barbarous town at the mouth of the Cayster, was afterwards resettled by Ionians. It was a great trading city, and its temple of Diana Multimammaea the most magnificent in the world. Its harbour was partly choked in Nero's time, and Bareas Soranus cleared it.

Epicharis. XV. 51, 57. A Greek courtesan imprisoned on suspicion in the reign of Nero. When Piso's conspiracy, with which she had been connected, was discovered in A.D. 65, she was tortured to make her confess the names of her accomplices. She refused heroically, and contrived to strangle herself, lest she should yield to temptation.

Epidaphne. II. 83. A suburb of Antioch, celebrated for the temple and grove of Apollo. The ancient historians never wearied in describing its delights. Milton speaks of it as "that sweet grove of Daphne by Orontes" (Paradise Lost, IV. 273), and it is the occasion of one of Gibbon's most eloquent descriptions (Decline and Fall, XXIII.)

T. Clodius Eprius Marcellus. XII. 4; XIII. 33; XVI. 22, 28, 33. Appointed to a vacancy of one day in the praetorship, A.D. 48. Accused of malversation as legatus propraetore of Lycia in 57, he escaped by private influence, and afterwards was consul suffectus. In 66 he accused Thrasea Paetus by Nero's direction, and was rewarded with £42,500. He was proconsul of Asia, and consul a second time under Vespasian, but fell in a conspiracy against him in 79.

Erato. II. 4. Sister and wife of Tigranes III. of Armenia. She abdicated the throne at his death in A.D. 1, but after the reigns of Artavasdes III. and Tigranes IV., was appointed queen of the country, about A.D. 14.

Erindes. XI. 10. Called Charindas by Ptolemy. Flows from the Elburz Mountains to the Caspian, between Media and Hyrcania.

Erycus. IV. 43. (S. Giuliano.) A town and mountain near Panormus in Sicily. The mountain was famous for a temple of Venus.

Erythrae. VI. 12. (Ritri.) A town on a promontory of Asia Minor, opposite Chios.

Etruria. IV. 5, 55; XI. 14, 15. The Etruscans or Rasena seem to have been a small Turanian aristocracy (like the Ottomans in Europe), controlling a primitive Umbrian population, which readily melted back into the Italian stock when conquered by Rome. The district furnished men for the praetorian guards. The Emperor Claudius wrote a history of Etruria, and tried to preserve its traditions of augury when they began to die out.

Evander. XI. 14; XV. 41. (εὖ ἀνὴρ, the Goodman.) A mythical Arcadian king of Rome.

Euboea. II. 54; V. 10. (Negropont.) An island ninety miles long, off the coast of Attica and Boeotia.

Eucaerus. XIV. 60. (Εὐκαίρος.) An Egyptian piper.

Eudemus. IV. 3, 11. The physician of Livia, the confidant of her amour with Sejanus. He poisoned Drusus Jr. On the discovery of the crime in A.D. 31 he was tortured and executed. His medical works are quoted by ancient authors.

Eunones. XII. 15, 18, 19. King of the Aorsi.

Euodius. XI. 37. (Εὐόδος.) A freedman, employed by Narcissus to superintend the death of Messalina.

Euphrates. II. 58; IV. 5; VI. 37; XII. 11; XIII. 7; XIV. 25; XV. 3, 7. Flows 1780 miles S.E. from the Armenian highlands to the Persian Gulf. Boundary of Roman empire.

Paulus Fabius Maximus. I. 5. Consul, B.C. 11, and proconsul of Asia. In A.D. 14, just before the death of Augustus (it occurred Aug. 19, and Fabius is mentioned in the Arval tables on May 14), he accompanied the emperor on a visit to Agrippa Postumus, and soon after died under suspicious circumstances, which pointed to the ill will of Livia. Ovid addressed him in his epistles from Pontus, and Merivale ascribes Ovid's misfortunes also to Livia's persecution.

Paulus Fabius Persicus. VI. 28. Son of the last; consul, A.D. 34. His abominable wickedness did not prevent his election as priest in several colleges.

Fabius Romanus. XVI. 17. Accuser of Annaeus Mela, A.D. 66.

Fabius Rusticus. XIII. 20; XIV. 2; XV. 61. Historian of Nero's reign, and possibly of Claudius's. Quoted three times by Tacitus, who says he was biassed by friendship to Seneca. He calls him (in the Dialogus de Oratoribus) the most eloquent of recent writers, and compares him to Livy. He was alive in Trajan's time. (Clason, Tacitus und Sueton, pp. 17 and 39.)

Fabricius Velento. XIV. 50. Banished from Italy in A.D. 62 for libel, and for selling his influence with the emperor. Domitian recalled him, used him as delator, and made him consul. His talents secured him the protection of Nerva.

Faenius Rufus. XIII. 22; XIV. 51, 57; XV. 50, 53, 61, 66, 68; XVI. 12. Praefectus annonae, A.D. 55. To please the people Nero made him praefectus praetorio in 62, but gave the real power to Tigellinus. Rufus joined Piso's conspiracy in 65, but showed little coolness or good sense. He was convicted and executed.

Falantius. I. 73. An eques, convicted of treason, A.D. 15.

Faustus. See Sulla.

M. Favonius. XVI. 22. One of the most obstinate of Pompey's adherents. He copied Cato's stoicism with exaggeration. Taken prisoner at Philippi, he openly insulted Octavian, and was put to death for it.

Fecunditas. XV. 23. Represented on coins as a woman surrounded by young children, leaning on a vase, from which springs a fruitful vine.

Felix. See Antonius.

Ferentinum. XV. 53. (Ferento.) A municipium in Etruria, near the Vulsinian lake. It was celebrated for an ancient shrine of Salus or Fortuna (probably Latin equivalents for Nortia, the Nemesis of Etruria). From hence Scaevinus, whose family belonged to the place, took an ancient dagger, which he consecrated to the assassination of Nero. When the plot failed, the senate honoured Nortia, who had thus turned the destruction back upon her votary, by erecting in the same place a temple to the Roman Salus.

Festus. See Marcius.

Fidena. IV. 62. (Castel Giubileo.) An ancient Latin town on the left bank of the Tiber, five miles north of Rome.

Firminus Catus. II. 27, 30; IV. 31. Delator of Scribonius Libo, A.D. 16. Expelled from the senate in 24, for falsely accusing his sister. The influence of Tiberius saved him from banishment.

Flaccilla. See Artoria.

Flavius Nepos. XV. 71. Tribune of a praetorian cohort, A.D. 65.

Flavius Scaevinus. XV. 49, 54, 55, 70. A dissolute nobleman who joined Piso's conspiracy in A.D. 65. The plot was discovered by his braggadocio. On being accused, he defended himself with the skill and composure of a man of the world, but, when he despaired of escape, he lacked the constancy to shield his companions. He died, however, bravely.

Flavus. II. 9; XI. 16. Brother of Arminius, named from his yellow hair. He served in the legions from boyhood.

Flevum. IV. 72. Before the irruption of the North Sea, which formed the Zuyder Zee (South Sea), in the 13th century, the river Yssel, which was connected with the Rhine by the Fossae Drusianae, spread into a large lake or chain of lakes in Friesland, called Flevo. The name is preserved by Vlieland and Vlietstroom at the mouth of the Zuyder Zee, where the castle Flevum once stood.

Flora. II. 49. Her temple was built near that of Ceres, at the west end of the Circus Maximus. Her festival was April 28th to May 1st.

Florentia. I. 79. (Firenze.) An Etrurian city on the Arnus.

Fontelus Agrippa. II. 30, 86. Accused Libo, A.D. 16; offered his daughter as vestal, 19.

C. Fontelus Capito. IV. 36. Son of Antony's friend (Hor. Sat. I. 5, 32). Consul with Germanicus, A.D. 12, and afterwards proconsul of Asia. Falsely accused of maladministration in 25.

Fontelus Capito. XIV. 1. Son of the last; consul, A.D. 59.

Formiae. XV. 46; XVI. 10. (Mola di Gaeta.) Seaport and watering-place of Southern Latium.

Forum Julii. II. 63; IV. 5. (Fréjus.) Seaport of Southern Gaul, 75 miles E. of Marseilles. Augustus stationed a war-fleet there. The river Argens has filled the harbour, and left the town inland.

(Fors) Fortuna. II. 41; III. 71; XV. 23, 53. Represented with a horn of plenty, and the rudder which guides the world.

Fortunatus. XVI. 10. A dishonest freedman, who accused L. Antistius Vetus (his patron) of treason, A.D. 65.

Fregellanus. See Pontius.

Frisii. I. 60; IV. 72; XI. 19; XIII. 54. A sea-coast tribe between Lake Flevo (Zuyder Zee) and the Amisia. Conquered by Drusus Sr. in B.C. 12, they revolted against the exactions of the commandant Olennius in A.D. 28. Corbulo was recalled in 47 before he could reduce them, and in 58 they invaded Roman territory. Their descendants resisted the Spanish in the 16th century with the same indomitable spirit.

Frontinus. See Julius.

Fronto. See Octavius, Vibius.

Fucinus Lacus. XII. 56. A lake in the Marsian mountains. It has no visible outlet, and in rainy seasons overflows the adjoining district. Julius Caesar had formed a design for draining it by a tunnel through a mountain to the Liris, and the work was carried out by Claudius, who employed 30,000 men from 41 to 52 A.D. at an estimated cost of £14,600,000. The tunnel was 18,536 feet long, and communicated with the surface by forty perpendicular shafts (one of which was 400 feet deep), and numerous oblique cuttings. Some defects in the original construction were corrected by Trajan and Hadrian, under whose reigns the lake diminished from 37,050 to 17,000 acres. The works were kept in order until the 4th century, but fell into decay during the middle ages. The tunnel was cleared and repaired by Prince Torlonia, between 1854 and 1876 A.D., with complete success. His engineers, Messrs. Brisse and Rotrou, praise the original design, and the skilful levelling of the sections, but observe the slovenly and dishonest execution of the contract, which was given to the freedman Narcissus.

O. Fufius Geminus. V. 1, 2; VI. 10. Advanced by Livia to the consulship in A.D. 29, he gained the ill will of Tiberius by sarcastic remarks, and was accused of debauchery and treason in 31. He committed suicide together with his wife, Mutilia Prisca. Like him she had belonged to Livia's coterie, which Tiberius regarded as an opposition court, and persecuted after her death.

L. Fulcinius Trio. II. 28, 30; III. 10, 19; V. 11; VI. 4, 38. A delator. Accused Scribonius Libo in A.D. 16, and tried to join the attack on Piso in 20. When Sejanus fell he was endangered, having been advanced by him to a suffect consulship, and endeavoured to escape by accusing his colleague, Regulus. Being threatened with counter-accusation he tried to let the matter drop, but was never allowed to rest in peace, and committed suicide in 35.

Fundani montes. IV. 59. A range of hills near the Volscian town of Fundi (Fondi), five miles from the sea, between Terracina and Formiae.

L. Funisulanus Vettonianus. XV. 7. A soldier whose career, preserved by inscriptions, gives the steps of a Roman public life at this period. He was triumvir monetalis, tribunus legionis sextae (in Syria), quaestor provinciae Siciliae, tribunus plebis, praetor, legatus legionis quartae (in Syria), praefectus aerarii, consul, curator viae Aemiliae, septemvir epulonum, sodalis Augustalis, legatus propraetore provinciae Delmatis, item Pannoniae, item Moesiae superioris, proconsule provinciae Africae.

M. Furius Bibaculus. IV. 34. A poet whose bitter iambics were directed against Julius and Augustus. His life was spared by Augustus, but he was no favourite with the courtly Horace, who describes him as the "turgid Alpinus" "murdering Memnon." As Horace also decried Catullus for the same reasons, we must take such criticism cautiously.

M. Furius Camillus. II. 52. Drove the Gauls from the city, B.C. 390.

M. Furius Camillus. II. 52; III. 20. Descendant of the last. Consul, A.D. 8. Won triumphal honours from Tacfarinas when proconsul of Africa in 17.

M. Furius Camillus Arruntius Scribonianus. VI. 1; XII. 52. Son of the last, adopted by L. Arruntius (or of Arruntius and adopted by the last). Gained his agnomen by a second adoption. Consul, 32 A.D. Governor of Dalmatia in 42, he perished in an unsuccessful revolt against Claudius.

M. Furius Camillus Scribonianus. XII. 52. Son of the last. Banished for sorcery, A.D. 52; died soon after.

Furnius. IV. 52. Condemned as paramour of Claudia Pulchra, A.D. 26.

Fuscus. See Cornelius.

Gabil. XV. 43. Thirteen miles E. of Rome on the Praenestine Road.

Gabolus. See Licinius.

Gaetulicus. See Cornelius.

Galus. See C. Caesar.

Galatia. XIII. 35; XV. 6. Western Central Asia Minor, colonised by Celts in 3d century B.C. The province was governed by an imperial legatus propraetore, and included parts of Cappadocia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia.

Galba. See Sulpicius.

Galerianus. See Calpurnius.

Gallilaei. XII. 54. The Jews dwelling near the Lake of Gennesareth, north of Samaria. Governed by Herodes Magnus (B.C. 40-4); Herodes Antipas, who killed

John Baptist (B.C. 4-A.D. 38); Herodes Agrippa (38-44); procuratores of Judaea (44-70).

Galla. See Arria, Sosia.

Gallia. Divided by the Romans into Transalpina and Cisalpina; the latter into Transpadana and Cispadana. The Cispadane Gauls received the Roman franchise at the time of the Social war (B.C. 89); the Transpadane from Julius Caesar (B.C. 49). Transalpine Gaul was divided into the Roman province (Narbonnese Gaul), and Gallia Comata, including the Belgians, Celts, and Aquitanians. The provinces of Augustus (Narbonnensis, Aquitanica, Lugdunensis, and Belgica) corresponded to these divisions, and had imperial legati propraetore. The Gauls, after his time, were peaceful and wealthy provincials, with a taste for literature. The chief Aeduans were admitted to the Roman senate, A.D. 48.

Gallo. See Junius.

Gallus. See Aelius, Asinius, Caninius, Cestius, Crepereius, Didius, Glitius, Publius, Togonius, Vipstanus.

P. Gallus. XVI. 12. Eques. Banished A.D. 66.

Gannascus. XI. 18. A Canninesatian. Deserter and pirate. Assassinated by Corbulo's orders, A.D. 47. Tacitus defends the action.

Garamantes. III. 74; IV. 23, 26. Desert tribe of Fezzan, south of the Syrtes. Defeated by Cornelius Balbus, B.C. 19. The Sahara protected their liberty.

L. Gavius Silvanus. XV. 50, 60, 71. A native of Turin, who served in Pannonia, and became tribune of a praetorian cohort. Accused of complicity in Piso's plot, he was acquitted, but afterwards committed suicide, A.D. 65.

Gellius Publicola. III. 67. Grand-nephew of Messalla Corvinus. A quaestor of Junius Silanus, he joined in the attack upon him, A.D. 22; consul suffectus in 40.

Geminus. VI. 14. A dissolute eques. Put to death in A.D. 32 for intimacy with Sejanus, though innocent of his plots.

Geminus. See Atidius, Ducenius, Fufius, Rubellius.

Gemonias. III. 14; V. 9; VI. 25. See III. 14, N.

Gerellanus. XV. 69. Tribune of a praetorian cohort.

Germania. The country between the Rhine and Vistula, inhabited in its eastern parts by Slavonian as well as Teutonic tribes. The Romans controlled the sea-coast and Rhine districts, including Holland, Westphalia, Hesse, and Bavaria.

The imperial provinces of Upper (southern) and Lower Germany, on the left bank of the Rhine, were governed by legati propraetore of consular rank, and garrisoned with eight legions.

Germanicus Caesar. (Praenomen unknown. Freinsheim, ad Tac. Ann. XIV. 64, calls it Caius.) Son of Drusus Sr. and Antonia Minor, married Agrippina Jr., and was adopted by Tiberius. When Augustus died in A.D. 14, Germanicus had been consul, had served with distinction in Pannonia, and commanded eight devoted legions on the Rhine. With generosity and loyalty he repressed their desire to place him on the throne instead of Tiberius, and led them against Arminius and his Germans, pressing as far as the Elbe in A.D. 16. Tiberius, jealous of his young rival, and convinced of the fruitlessness of campaigns in the German forests, recalled him in 16, granted him a triumph, and in 18 despatched him with extraordinary proconsular powers to the East. At the same time Cn. Calpurnius Piso was made governor of Syria, with secret instructions, it was thought, to thwart the young prince. Germanicus, after a tour in Greece and Asia Minor, regulated the affairs of Armenia, Commagene, and Cappadocia, and visited Egypt in 19. On returning to Syria he found that Piso had systematically disobeyed orders, and directed him to leave the province. Soon after he was seized by a mysterious illness, ascribed by some to the poisons, by others to the sorceries of Piso, and died at Epidaphne, near Antioch, Oct. 9th, A.D. 19, at the age of 33. Germanicus was a generous and chivalrous prince, whose popular tendencies were brought into greater relief by the moroseness of Tiberius. He lacked decision in action, and astuteness in encountering his enemies.

Geta. See Lusius.

Getae. IV. 44. Dacian tribe near the mouths of the Danube. They attacked Thrace in B.C. 10, and Cornelius Lentulus was sent to chastise them.

Glitius Gallus. XV. 56, 71. A nobleman of Turin, implicated in Piso's conspiracy, and banished, A.D. 65. His son, a contemporary of Tacitus, attained to the consulship.

Gornae. XII. 45. An Armenian fortress N. of Artaxata. Perhaps Khorfen.

Gotarzes. XI. 8, 10; XII. 10, 14. Son of Artabanus III. of Parthia, whom he succeeded in A.D. 42. Disgraced by cruelty, he fled from his brother Vardanes to the eastern shore of the Caspian. He made an attempt for the crown in 46, which was defeated, but was brought to the throne soon after by the assassination of Vardanes. In 49 he defeated an invasion planned by his nobles, supported by the Romans, and headed by Mithridates. The victory is commemorated by a bas-relief at Behistun. Died in 51.

Gotones. II. 62. A tribe on the Baltic between Dantzic and Königsberg, where they belonged to the Suevian confederacy of Maroboduus. By a migration in the 3d century they carried their low-German language to the banks of the Danube.

Gracchus. See Sempronius.

Gracilis. See Aelius.

Graecinus. See Julius.

Q. Granus. IV. 21. A name which was formed by a conjecture of Lipsius, reading Pisonem Q. Granus for Pisonem-que gravius. He was a delator.

Granus Marcellus. I. 74. Accused of treason as proconsul of Bithynia, A.D. 15. Tiberius allowed him to escape on this charge, but condemned him for extortion by a committee of investigation.

Granus Marcellus. VI. 38. Accused of treason, A.D. 35. Killed himself.

Graptus. XIII. 47. (Γραπτός.) Freedman of Claudius and Nero.

Gratianus. See Tarius.

Gratus. See Munatius.

Gyarus. III. 68; IV. 30. (Or Gyara, plural, now Gioura.) An island between Andros and Ceos. A place of exile. Now uninhabited.

Hadria Mare. II. 53; XV. 34. Poetical form for M. Hadriaticum.

Haemus. III. 38; IV. 51. The Balkan range between Thrace and Moesia, 5000 feet high, inhabited by wild tribes. Snow lies on the tops until July.

Halicarnassus. IV. 55. (Boodroom.) A Doric port in Caria. Its site on a great sloping rock protected it from earthquakes, and it desired to be the seat of a temple to Tiberius in A.D. 26.

Halotus. (Ἀλωτός.) XII. 66. A eunuch; cup-bearer of Claudius, whom he poisoned by Agrippina's command in A.D. 54. Galba saved him from the popular resentment when Nero died in 68.

Halus. VI. 41. (Galoula.) A Parthian town in Assyria.

Q. Haterius. I. 13; II. 33; III. 57; IV. 61. A senator who offended Tiberius at the beginning of his reign by indiscreet flattery, which sounded like satire, and an awkward attempt to apologise for it. He was an energetic orator, but lacked good sense and application. Augustus said, "Our friend Haterius needs the brake." Died A.D. 27, aged 89.

D. Haterius Agrippa. I. 77; II. 51; III. 49, 52; VI. 4. Son of the last. Tribunus plebeius, A.D. 15; praetor extraordinary through the influence of his kinsman, Germanicus (II. 51, N.), in 17; consul in 22. In 32 he was an exhausted roué, only energetic in persecuting his betters.

Q. Haterius Antoninus. XII. 58; XIII. 34. Son of the last, deriving his name from his great-grand-aunt, Antonia Minor. Consul, 53 A.D. An allowance was made him in 58 to repair his dissipated fortune.

Heliopolis. VI. 28. A city of Egypt in the south of the Delta, towards Arabia. Its sun-worship connected it with the phoenix myth. The temple where Potiphera was priest still exists.

Hellus. (Ἡλῑος.) XIII. 1. A Greek freedman; fiscal procurator in Asia Minor. Poisoned Julius Silanus in A.D. 54. Served as governor of Italy with intolerable insolence and cruelty when Nero visited Greece in 66 and 67. Put to death by Galba in 68.

Helvidius Priscus. XII. 49; XIII. 28; XVI. 28, 35. Served in the East under Claudius; quaestor of Achaia under Nero; tribunus plebeius in 56. When his father-in-law, Thrasea, was executed in 66, Priscus was banished, but returned under Galba, and became praetor. An affected bluntness and visionary republicanism made him so troublesome that Vespasian had him put to death, though he regretted it afterwards.

Helvius Rufus. III. 21. A private soldier who won a civic crown in a battle with Tacfarinas in A.D. 20. According to an inscription, he became a tribune of the first rank, and rich enough to build a bath for the people of Varia, the town near Horace's farm. (De Chaupy, Découverte de la Maison d'Horace, III. 254.)

Heniochi. II. 68. A Colchian tribe in modern Mingrelia.

Herculeius. XIV. 8. Captain of a trireme; employed to assassinate Agrippina Jr., A.D. 59.

• Hercules. II. 12, 60; III. 61; IV. 38; XII. 13, 24; XV. 41. The Greek hero, Heracles, who conquered Asia Minor, and whose descendants overran the Peloponnesus with the Dorians, was confused with the sun-god who stole the cloud-cows of Geryon in the west, and whose great altar King Evander built on the spot which afterwards became the Forum Boarium. As sun-god and representative of deified humanity, he was identified with the Egyptian Son, the Assyrian Sandan, and the Persian Verethragna. The German Hercules was perhaps Thor, the personification of force, and the great wanderer.

Hercynia Sylva. II. 45. A term given to German forests, from Hartz = a wooded height. Tacitus applies it to the Böhmerwald and Erzgebirge, on the frontiers of Bohemia.

Hermunduri. II. 63; XII. 29-30. XIII. 57. A Suevian tribe in Thuringia and Franconia, friendly to the Romans. Their king, Vibilius, reigned A.D. 17-50; a proof of comparative peace and discipline.

Hiberia. IV. 5; VI. 33-35; XII. 44. XIV. 23. (Georgia.) Between Colchis and Iberia, N. of Armenia. Its warlike mountaineers were the same race as the modern Georgians (Turanian). They dwelt in towns, and were divided into castes. They frequently attacked the Armenians and Parthians.

Hiero. VI. 42. A Parthian satrap, A.D. 35.

Hierocaesarea. II. 47; III. 62. A Lydian city, injured by an earthquake, A.D. 17; claimed asylum rights, A.D. 22.

A. Hirtius. I. 10. Consul in B.C. 43. Killed in battle against Antony before Mutina. It was believed that his own soldiers killed him at Octavian's instigation.

Hispania. I. 71, 78; IV. 5, 13, 45; VI. 19; XI. 24. Usually mentioned in the plural by Tacitus, in reference to the three provinces, Tarraconensis, Baetica, and Lusitania. The first was Hispania Citerior; the two last constituted Hispania Ulterior. Baetica was a senatorial province, the richest of the empire; the others were imperial.

Hispo Romanus. I. 74. The first delator at Rome, A.D. 15.

Hister. See Palpelius.

Homonadenses. III. 48. Mountaineers of interior Cilicia, conquered by Sulpicius Quirinius when governor of Syria the first time, B.C. 4 or 3.

Q. Hortensius. II. 37. 38. The generous rival of Cicero in oratory, B.C. 114-50.

M. Hortensius Hortalus. II. 37. Grandson of the last.

Hostilius. See Tullus.

Hypaepa. IV. 55. (Plu. neut. Now Beriki.) A Lydian town 35 miles N.E. of Ephesus.

Hyrcania. II. 47; VI. 36, 43; XI. 8, 9; XIII. 37; XIV. 25; XV. 1. A nation between the north slope of the Elburz Mountains and the Caspian Sea. The melting snows produce a belt of beautiful country, the summer resort of the Parthian kings. The name of the Hyrcanians is preserved by the modern town, Gurkan. They protected Artabanus III. and Gotarzes, who fled to them in 35 and 47 A.D. In 58 and 60 they rebelled against Vologaesces I., and sent an embassy to pray for Roman aid.

Iasyges Sarmatae. XII. 29. A Slavonian people. In 80 B.C., they were near the sea of Azov; in 8 B.C., at the mouths of the Danube; in 58 A.D., between the Theiss and Danube in Western Hungary.

Iconi. XII. 31; XIV. 31. A British tribe in Norfolk and Suffolk. Rebelled against Rome under their queen, Boadicea, A.D. 61. Their name is preserved by places in the east of England.

Idistaviso. II. 16. See note.

Ilium. II. 54; IV. 55; VI. 12; XII. 58. (Hissarlik.) A city which arose on the site of ancient Troy, probably in the 7th century B.C. The Romans regarded it as their metropolis, and treated it with especial favour.

Illyrioum. I. 5, 46; II. 44, 53; XVI. 13. A province on the east coast of the Adriatic transferred from the senate to the emperor in B.C. 11, on account of disturbances among the tribes. The word was used to cover Pannonia and Moesia, though they had governors of their own. The people (the Albanians) were hardy and made good soldiers. In the coast towns there was more wealth and civilisation.

Indus. See Julius.

Ingulomerus. (Ingemar.) I. 60, 68; II. 17, 21, 45. Uncle of Arminius, whom he aided against the Romans in A.D. 15-16. Deserted to Maroboduus in 17.

Insteius Capito. XIII. 9, 39. A centurion, ambassador to Vologaesces in A.D. 55. Praefectus castrorum in 58.

Insubres. XI. 23. Transpadane Gauls near Milan. They received Roman franchise in 49 B.C., but all courts of Cisalpine Gaul were conducted by Roman officials.

Interamna. I. 79. (Terni.) A town on the river Nera, in Umbria. The emperors Tacitus and Florianus (A.D. 275-276), who were of the same family as the historian Tacitus, had their ancestral burying-place there. A statue of the historian was erected by the people of Terni, A.D. 1514.

Ionium mare. II. 53. The waters on the west of Greece.

Italia. I. 79; III. 54; XI. 22; XII. 43; XVI. 5. Included the whole of Gallia Cisalpina, which, under the empire, was the most prosperous part of the peninsula. The population of the central and southern districts had been much exhausted by the civil wars, nor do the regulations of Augustus appear to have replenished them. Large parks, grazing farms, and slave labour, were the ruin of the nation whose teeming population had conquered the world; and whose administrative genius retained the supremacy for three centuries after the real strength was gone.

Italcus. XI. 16, 17. Son of Flavus, educated at Rome. Sent by Claudius in A.D. 47, at the request of the Cherusci, to be their king. He quieted a first rebellion against his authority, but was subsequently expelled, and only restored to his throne by the aid of the Lombards.

Ituraea. XII. 23. The country between Galilee and Damascus, inhabited by wandering Arabs, descendants of Jetur, the son of Ishmael.

Iturius. XIII. 19, 22; XIV. 12. Client of Junia Silana. Banished in A.D. 55 for falsely accusing Agrippina. Nero recalled him after Agrippina's death.

Izates. XII. 13. Vassal king of Adiabene. He was a Jewish proselyte, and his life is given at length by Josephus. Died about A.D. 52.

Janus. (Dianus.) II. 49. God of day and time. His ancient temple on the Forum Holitorium (near the Theatre of Marcellus) was rebuilt by C. Duillius, B.C. 260, and Tiberius, A.D. 17.

Jaso. VI. 34. Captain of the Argonauts. According to Justin (XLII. 2, 3), he returned to Colchis with Medea and a Thessalian colony.

Juba Second. IV. 5, 23. King of Numidia. Appeared in Julius Caesar's triumph over his father after the battle of Thapsus. Augustus educated him, married him in B.C. 30 to Cleopatra Selene Antony's daughter, and restored him his father's kingdom. This was exchange five years later, for Mauretania, where he reigned until A.D. 18 or 19. A voluminous writer.

Judaea. II. 42; XII. 23. Palestine, south of Samaria. It was included in the kingdom of Herod the Great, inherited by his son Archelaus (B.C. 4 to A.D. 7), and, after his deposition for bad government, left in the hands of procurators. In A.D. 17 it petitioned for a remission of taxes, and from 41 to 44 belonged to the kingdom of Herod Agrippa I. After 49 it formed a part of the Syrian province, but had a procurator of its own, who included Samaria in his jurisdiction.

Julia. I. 53; III. 24; IV. 44; VI. 51. Daughter of Augustus by his first wife, Scribonia, from whom he was divorced a few days after the child's birth, B.C. 39. She was carefully educated, and married—1st, to Marcellus, who died in 23, leaving no children; 2d, to Agrippa, who died in 12, leaving six children; 3d, to Tiberius. The last match was made by Livia. Augustus had hesitated to marry his daughter at all after Agrippa's death, or thought of giving her to a plain Roman knight, who might fill a husband's place without meddling in affairs of state. She bore no children to Tiberius, whom she disliked and despised, and her amours were known to all at court except her father. Not daring to complain, nor able to bear the shame, Tiberius retired to Rhodes in B.C. 6. Three years after Augustus learned his daughter's disgrace. She was banished to Pandataria, and afterwards to Rhegium, where she died in A.D. 14, shortly after her husband's accession.

Julia. III. 24; IV. 71. Daughter of the last, and wife of M. Aemilius Lepidus. Banished to Trimerus, A.D. 9, and supported by the contemptuous bounty of Livia, who had plotted her ruin. Died A.D. 28.

Julia. II. 54; VI. 15; XIV. 63. Daughter of Germanicus, born A.D. 18. Married M. Vinicius in 33. Her brother, Caligula, treated her as a concubine, but banished her in 37. Recalled by Claudius, she was again exiled, and finally executed through the jealousy of Messalina, who accused her of adultery with Seneca, A.D. 41.

Julia. III. 29; IV. 60; VI. 27; XIII. 32, 43. Daughter of Drusus and Livilla, married in A.D. 20 to her cousin, Nero, son of Germanicus, whom she watched, by her mother's orders, in Sejanus's interests. After Nero's death she was betrothed in 31 to Sejanus, whose fall anticipated their union. Married in 34 to Rubellius Blandus. Put to death by Messalina in 44.

Julianus. See Claudius, Tettius.

Julius Africanus. VI. 7. A Gaul condemned in A.D. 32 as accomplice of Sejanus. His son was the orator, Julius Afer.

Julius Agrippa. XV. 71. Deported as accomplice of Piso, A.D. 65.

Julius Altinus. XV. 71. Deported as accomplice of Piso, A.D. 65.

C. Julius Aquila. XII. 15, 21. An eques, who, with a garrison of a few cohorts and the aid of the Aorsi, defended Bosphorus against Mithridates, A.D. 49. He received praetorian ornaments, was procurator of Bithynia in 58, and held municipal offices at Naples.

Julius Augurinus. XV. 50. Implicated in Piso's conspiracy, A.D. 65.

C. Julius Caesar. I. 8, 42; II. 41; III. 6; IV. 34, 43; VI. 16; XI. 23, 25; XIV. 9. B.C. 100-44. In B.C. 60 he formed the first triumvirate with Pompey and Crassus, giving Pompey his daughter in marriage. Her death and that of Crassus, in 54, broke up the arrangement. Caesar remained in Gaul, 58-49, disciplining an army. Meantime the aristocratic faction, headed by Pompey, ordered him to lay down his command, and assailed the tribunes of the people, who acted on his side. This gave him an excuse for interference. Crossing the Rubicon, he marched the length of Italy, driving all before him. He then returned to clear Spain of his enemies, and pursued Pompey to Illyricum and Thessaly, finally defeating him at Pharsalia, B.C. 48. The remainder of the aristocratic party was defeated at Thapsus in Africa, in 46, and Munda in Spain, in 45. On his return to Rome the dictatorial power which had already been granted him from time to time was settled upon him for life, and he began the work of legislation and reformation in which he was interrupted by the daggers of his assassins, March 15th, B.C. 44.

Julius Celsus. VI. 9, 14. Tribune of an urban cohort, and a delator. He sometimes spared the men he had attacked, for personal reasons. Imprisoned in A.D. 32, he strangled himself with the slack of his chain.

Julius Classicianus. XIV. 38. Procurator rationalis of Britain, A.D. 61. He made trouble for the governor, Suetonius, at Rome.

Julius Clemens. I. 23, 26, 28. Centurion in Pannonia, A.D. 14.

Julius Densus. XIII. 10. An eques accused of favouring Britannicus, A.D. 54.

Julius Florus. III. 40, 42. A Gallic nobleman who headed a rebellion, A.D. 21. He was defeated, and committed suicide.

Julius Indus. III. 42. One of the Treviri. Praefectus of an ala of Gallic cavalry, A.D. 21.

Julius Marinus. VI. 10. Companion of Tiberius at Capreae, executed as a friend of Sejanus (whom he had helped to destroy Curtius Atticus), A.D. 32.

Julius Montanus. XIII. 25. A senator who thrashed Nero when he broke into his house incognito, and tried to violate his wife. A few days after he learned who it was, and begged forgiveness. This sealed his fate. "Does he presume to live," said Nero, "after beating the emperor?" Montanus committed suicide. This is the account of Xiphilinus.

Julius Pellignus. XII. 49. A rascal whom Claudius appointed procurator of Cappadocia. In 51 he accepted a bribe from the usurper Radamistus, to support him as prince of Cappadocia.

Julius Pollio. XIII. 15. Tribune of a praetorian cohort, privy to the murder of Britannicus. A man of the same name was praefectus praetorio under Otho.

Sex. Julius Postumus. IV. 12. A paramour of Mutilia Prisca, and tool of Sejanus.

Julius Sacrovir. III. 40, 44, 46; IV. 18. An Aeduan nobleman who joined a Gallic revolt in A.D. 21. Defeated by Silius near Augustodunum, he retired with a few friends to a country house, where they died by their own swords.

C. Julius Vindex. XV. 74. A Gallic nobleman and Roman senator. When propraetor of Gallia Lugdunensis in A.D. 68, he rebelled against Nero, and offered the empire to Galba. Though defeated and compelled to suicide by Verginius Rufus, Vindex began the motion which destroyed Nero.

Iulus. See Antonius.

Juncus Vergilianus. XI. 35. An ex-praetor, put to death in A.D. 48 as an accomplice of Messalina.

Junia Calvina. XII. 4, 8; XIV. 12. Sister of L. Junius Silanus; falsely accused of incest with him, at Agrippina's instigation. She was banished, but probably survived until the reign of Vespasian, when a Calvina of the blood of Augustus was still alive.

Junia Lepida. XVI. 8. Sister of the last, aunt of L. Silanus Torquatus, and wife of Cassius Longinus. Accused of incest with her nephew (connection with a niece was allowed since Claudius's example), and of sorcery, she was condemned, but her punishment left to the emperor's discretion.

Junia Silana. XI. 12; XIII. 19, 22; XIV. 12. Wife of C. Silius, whom he was obliged to divorce to marry Messalina. Agrippina, who was intimate with her, and expected to be her heir, dissuaded a young noble from marrying her. Junia learned it, and retaliated by an accusation of treason in A.D. 55. Agrippina, however, succeeded in refuting it, and in banishing Junia, who died at Tarentum in 59.

Junia Tertila. III. 76. Half-sister of M. Brutus, and wife of Cassius. She survived until 22 A.D.

Junia Torquata. III. 69. A vestal.

Junius. II. 28. A sorcerer who betrayed Scribonius Libo, A.D. 16.

L. Junius Arulenus Rusticus. XVI. 26. Tribunus plebeius in A.D. 66, he proposed to veto the condemnation of Thrasea, who would not allow the sacrifice. Executed by Domitian for eulogising Thrasea.

Q. Junius Blaesus. I. 16; III. 35, 58, 72, 74; IV. 23; V. 7; VI. 40. Influential with Tiberius as uncle of Sejanus. Successively proconsul of Sicily, legatus of Pannonia (during the mutiny of A.D. 14), and proconsul of Africa. He conquered Tacfarinas in 22, receiving triumphal ornaments and the title imperator. Consul suffectus in 28. When Sejanus fell in 31 he became suspected. In 36 Tiberius conferred upon others priesthoods which had been promised him. He considered this a death-warrant, and committed suicide.

Junius Blaesus. I. 19, 29; III. 74;

VI. 40. Son of the last. Shared his campaigns in Pannonia and Africa, and his death in 36.

L. Junius Brutus. I. 1; XI. 22, 25. Led the movement to expel the Tarquins in B.C. 509. Organised the new republic.

M. Junius Brutus. I. 2; III. 76; IV. 34. B.C. 85-42. His mother was a mistress of Julius Caesar. He admired Cato Uticensis, and followed Pompey (his personal enemy) in the civil war. After Pharsalia he asked and accepted pardon from Caesar, who showed him the greatest regard and confidence. Persuaded by Cassius to join in Caesar's murder, he became a chief among the republicans, and fell upon his sword after the defeat at Philippi.

Decimus Junius Brutus. I. 10. One of the assassins of Julius Caesar. In the confused wars which followed he was cornered with an army in Cisalpine Gaul, between Antony and Octavian, tried to fly, but was caught and put to death by Antony, B.C. 43.

Junius Olo. XII. 21. Governor of Bithynia, A.D. 49, and received consular ornaments for forwarding Mithridates to Rome. He was afterwards accused before the emperor for extortion in office. Claudius could not hear very well on account of the noise in court, and asked Narcissus what it was all about. He was a friend of Cilo, and said the Bithynians were eulogising his good government. "Very well," said the emperor, "send him back for two years more."

L. Junius Gallio. VI. 3. A literary man, patron of Ovid and the elder Seneca. Confined in the houses of the magistrates for some time in A.D. 32, for meddling with the discipline of the praetorians.

L. Annaeus Junius Gallio. XV. 73. Brother of the philosopher Seneca, adopted by the last. He was proconsul of Achaia, and the apostle Paul was brought before him (Acts of the Apostles, XVIII. 12). He lost influence after his brother's death, and was forced to commit suicide.

Junius Lupus. XII. 42. A senator who ventured in A.D. 51 to accuse L. Vitellius, then protégé of Agrippina. Lupus was banished for it.

Q. Junius Marullus. XIV. 48. Consul suffectus, Oct. 27th, A.D. 61.

Junius Otho. III. 66. A rhetorician, mentioned by Seneca Sr. When praetor in A.D. 22, through Sejanus's influence, he impeached C. Silanus, proconsul of Asia.

Junius Otho. VI. 47. Tribunus plebeius. A.D. 37.

Junius Rusticus. V. 4. Secretary of the senate, A.D. 29.

Appius Junius Silanus. IV. 68; VI. 9; XI. 29. Consul, A.D. 28. Acquitted of treason in 32. Recalled from a Spanish governorship by Claudius, who married him to Lepida, Messalina's mother. Messalina fell in love with her stepfather, and when he refused her, plotted his destruction with Narcissus. By agreement they told the emperor one morning that they had dreamed of Silanus murdering him. As they finished the story an attendant rushed in to announce that Silanus, who had called by appointment, was breaking into the palace. Claudius was convinced of the truth of the dream, and had him executed, A.D. 42.

C. Junius Silanus. III. 66, 68, 69; IV. 15. Consul, A.D. 10, and proconsul of Asia. Deported in 22 for malversation in office.

D. Junius Silanus. III. 24. Banished by Augustus in A.D. 9 for adultery with Julia Jr. Restored to Rome, but not to civil honours, by Tiberius in A.D. 20.

M. Junius Silanus, Cail filius. III. 24, 57; V. 10; VI. 20. Brother of the last; consul suffectus, A.D. 15; obtained his brother's recall, A.D. 20. In 33 his daughter was married to Caligula, who, upon his accession, conceived an ill will against his father-in-law for not following him on a dangerous sea-voyage, and forced him to commit suicide.

M. Junius Silanus, Marci filius. II. 59. Married Aemilia Lepida, great-grand-daughter of Augustus. Consul, A.D. 19. Caligula directed the senate to make him proconsul of Africa, but became jealous, and deprived him of the command of the African legion.

M. Junius Silanus. XIII. 1. Son of the last, and great-great-grandson of Augustus, just before whose death he was born in A.D. 14. He was rich and gentle. Caligula called him a golden sheep. Exempted from the lex annalis by his peculiar nobility, he was consul in 46, and proconsul of Asia in 54. Agrippina poisoned him lest he should be a rival to her son.

L. Junius Silanus Torquatus. XV. 52; XVI. 7. Son of the last, educated by Cassius Longinus. Murdered by Nero through jealousy, A.D. 65. The last of his race.

L. Junius Silanus Torquatus. XII. 3, 4, 8. Uncle of the last, born A.D.

24. Betrothed in 41 to Octavia, infant daughter of Claudius, whom he accompanied to Britain in 44. In 48 Messalina died, and Agrippina assumed control of Claudius, destining Octavia for her son, Nero. Silanus was accused of incest with his sister, and deprived of his praetorship. He committed suicide on the wedding day of Claudius and Agrippina.

D. Junius Silanus Torquatus. XII. 58; XV. 35; XVI. 8. Brother of the last; consul, A.D. 53; executed for boasting of his descent from Augustus in 64.

Juno. IV. 14; XV. 44. Shared Jove's temple in the Capitol. Her temple at Samos ranked next in magnificence to those of Diana at Ephesus, and Jupiter at Agrigentum.

Jupiter. III. 62; XIII. 24; XV. 23, 41, 64, 74; XVI. 35. The supreme god of Latium, worshipped under various titles. Nero addressed him as Jupiter Vindex, after the analogy of Mars Ultor. The temple of Jupiter Stator recorded the staying of the Roman flight before the Sabines, on the north slope of the Palatine Hill. Jupiter Liberator had a temple at Rome, repaired by Augustus (Mon. Ancyr. Col. VII. ad fin.) (VI. 25, N.). The Greeks adored Zeus Soter with libations at the close of their meals.

Justus. See Catonius.

Labeo. See Antistius, Asconius, Cethegus, Pompeius, Titidius.

Lacedaemon. IV. 43; XI. 24. Under the Romans a subdivision of the province of Achaia, occupying the valley of the Eurotas.

Laco. See Cornelius.

Laco. VI. 18. A Greek nobleman, executed by Tiberius.

C. Laecanius Bassus. XV. 33. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 64. Died of a carbuncle in Vespasian's reign.

Laella. XV. 22. A vestal; died A.D. 62.

Laelius Balbus. VI. 47, 48. Accused Acutia of treason, but lost his blood-money by the veto of Junius Otho. He was banished the same year (A.D. 37) as paramour of Albucilla. The senators hated him as a delator.

Laenas. See Vipsanius.

Lamia. See Aelius.

Langobardi. II. 45; XI. 17. A Suevian tribe, in Brandenburg, east of the Elbe. They gave Arminius no help against the Romans, but subsequently aided him against Maroboduus. They supported Italicus in A.D. 47 (?).

Lanuvium. III. 48. A Latin town, twenty miles S.W. of Rome.

Laodicea. IV. 55. (Laodicea ad Lycum; Eski Hissar.) In Phrygia, 100 miles E. of Ephesus. Near Colosse, with which it is connected in Paul's epistles. Many superb ruins mark its site.

Laodicea. II. 79; XIV. 27. (Laodicea ad Mare; Ladakiyeh.) On the Syrian coast. Now famous for Latakia tobacco.

O. Largus Caecina. XI. 33. Claudius's colleague in the consulship, A.D. 42; continued in office the whole year. Prominent as an Arval priest.

Larunda. XII. 24. Mother of the lares of Rome. It is assumed that the temple of Larunda was the same as that of the Lares, which stood on the Velia at the top of the Sacred Way.

Latinius Latialis. IV. 68; VI. 4. Sought the consulship in 28 A.D., and tried to gain the favour of Sejanus by betraying his friend, Titius Sabinus. After Sejanus fell Tiberius allowed the senate to condemn Latialis for treason.

Latinius Pandusa. II. 66. Legatus propraetore of Moesia, A.D. 15. Died in his province before the year 19.

Latium. IV. 5; XI. 23; XV. 32. See IV. 36, XV. 32, NN.

Latona. III. 61; XII. 61. Daughter of Coeus; mother of Phoebus and Artemis.

Legerda. XIV. 25. An Armenian fortress, probably W. of Tigranocerta.

Lentinius. See Terentius.

Lentulus. See Cornelius.

Lepida. See Aemilia, Domitia, Junia.

Lepidus. See Aemilius.

Leptis. III. 74. (Lemta.) A seaport in Africa, a few miles S. of Hadrumetum.

Lesbos. II. 54; VI. 3. (Mitylene.) An Aeolian island. Its chief city, Mytilene, was made free by Pompey. The visit of Germanicus and Agrippina in A.D. 18 is commemorated by coins.

Liber. II. 49; III. 61; IV. 38. The Latin god Liber and his sister Libera, children of Ceres, were originally Latin deities quite distinct from Bacchus or Dionysus, with whom they were afterwards confused. Dionysus, on account of his wanderings, and semi-divine nature, was connected with Herakles, as a type of deified humanity.

Libo. See Scribonius.

Libya. II. 60; The Semitic name for the north coast of Africa.

M. Licinius Crassus Dives. I. 1. Member of the first triumvirate. Fell in a Parthian expedition, B.C. 55.

M. Licinius Crassus. IV. 62. Praetor urbanus, A.D. 24; consul, 27. His son Piso Licinianus was adopted by the emperor Galba, and shared his fall.

M. Licinius Crassus Frugi. XV. 33; Son of the last. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 64. Put to death by Nero.

L. Licinius Gaius. XIV. 12. An ex-praetor banished by Claudius to please Agrippina. Nero restored him in 59.

L. Licinius Lucullus. IV. 36; VI. 50; XI. 1; XII. 62; XIII. 34; XV. 14, 27. Succeeded Sulla as head of the aristocratic party. Directed the second Mithridatic war, B.C. 74-66, and overran Pontus and Armenia. He was checked by mutinies in his army, and was obliged to resign the command to his popular rival, Pompey. Returning to Rome, he occupied himself with his luxurious villas and gardens. The first triumvirate opposed him, and kept him in constant dread. He was dead in 56.

Limnatis. See Diana.

Linus. XI. 14. Son of Apollo and Calliope; regarded as an ancient poet, and especially worshipped at Thebes.

Liris. XII. 56. (Garigliano.) A stream of Latium, connected with Lake Fucinus by Claudius's tunnel.

Livia Drusilla Augusta. Born of a Claudius who had been adopted into the Livian gens, B.C. 56. In 38 Augustus married her, taking her from her first husband, Ti. Claudius Nero, to whom she had borne two sons, Tiberius and Drusus Jr. To Augustus she bore no sons, but maintained her ascendancy over him with great tact and ceaseless vigilance. Herself pure, she connived at her husband's amours, and spent her life in schemes for the advancement of her sons. She is reported to have procured the death of the emperor's grandsons, C. and L. Caesars, and even to have poisoned Augustus himself, on whose death she made the arrangements which secured the throne for Tiberius, through whom she hoped to reign. His jealous temper thwarted her ambition; he excluded her from public life, avoided her presence, and embittered her old age with unkindness. He refused to visit her in her last illness, and showed no sorrow at her death, which occurred in A.D. 29.

Livia. II. 43, 84; IV. 3, 39, 40; VI. 2. Called Livilla; daughter of Drusus Sr. by Antonia Jr., and sister of Germanicus. Born B.C. 11. Widowed in A.D. 4 by the death of C. Caesar, she married her cousin Drusus Jr., and bore him two sons and a daughter. Seduced by Sejanus, she poisoned her husband in 23. Eight years after the crime was discovered, and Livilla was starved to death by her mother Antonia. In 32 the senate passed a vote of infamy against her memory.

Livineius Regulus. III. 11. Aided the defence of Cn. Piso in A.D. 20.

Livineius Regulus. XIV. 17. An exile from the city, he gave a gladiatorial show at Pompeii, during which a riot arose. He was exiled from Italy.

M. Livius Drusus Libo. III. 27. Tribunus plebeius, B.C. 122; opposed C. Gracchus by bidding against him for popular favour, in the interest of the senate. His son, of the same name, became a popular despot of Rome by proposing agrarian and corn laws, and was assassinated B.C. 91.

T. Livius Patavinus. IV. 34. B.C. 59-A.D. 17. Historian of the Roman republic. Augustus laughingly called him a "Pompeian," in allusion to his republican theories. Cremutius Cordus praised his command of language and impartial judgment.

Locusta. XII. 66; XIII. 15. A woman saved by Agrippina when under death sentence. She supplied her and Nero with poisons for Claudius, Britannicus, and others, and was granted large estates for her services. Galba put her to death in A.D. 68.

Lollia Paulina. XII. 1, 22; XIV. 12. Wife of Memmius Regulus. Caligula took her from him, married and divorced her. In 48 A.D. she was a candidate for the hand of Claudius. Her successful rival, Agrippina, banished her the next year, and forced her to suicide. The head was brought her, but was unrecognisable. Agrippina opened the mouth and examined the teeth to make sure of her enemy's death. Pliny Sr. once saw Lollia at a betrothal wearing gems worth £333,000, a part of the ill-gotten gains of her grandfather, M. Lollius.

M. Lollius. I. 10. Governor of Germany in B.C. 16, he was defeated on the Rhine by the Germans, a disaster which called Augustus in person to Gaul. Lollius was pardoned, and sent to the east as counsellor of young C. Caesar, whom he instigated against his stepfather Tiberius, then at Rhodes. He was accused of taking bribes from the King of Parthia, and certainly accumulated an immense fortune. He fell into disgrace and died, probably by suicide, A.D. 3 or 4. His memory may have been blackened by the enmity of Tiberius.

M. Lollius Paulinus. III. 48; XII. 1. Son of the last, and father of Lollia Paulina. Consul in an uncertain year. Inheriting his father's fortune, it was to him that Horace addressed Epistles I. 1 and 18, with the observation that "collected money is either a man's master or servant."

Londinium. XIV. 33. (London.) A flourishing commercial town on the Thames, sacked by Boadicea.

Longinus. See Cassius.

Longus. See Lucilius.

Lucania. XI. 24. A province on the instep of Italy, inhabited by a primitive race of mountaineers. Its cities were Greek seaport colonies, admitted to the Roman franchise after the Social war, B.C. 88.

O. Lucretius Telesinus. XVI. 14. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 66. A man of merit, and a philosopher. Banished by Domitian.

Lucilius. I. 23. A centurion murdered in the Pannonian mutiny, A.D. 14.

Lucilius Capito. IV. 15. A praecuratore rationalis in Asia. Banished by the senate with consent of the emperor for usurping authority and using soldiers, A.D. 23.

Lucilius Longus. IV. 15. Consul suffectus, A.D. 7. Received a public funeral in 23. The only senator that accompanied Tiberius to Rhodes.

Sp. Lucretius Tricipitinus. VI. 11. Appointed praefectus urbi by Tarquinius Superbus, against whom he rebelled in B.C. 509, to avenge the violation of his daughter Lucretia by Sex. Tarquinius.

Lucrinus lacus. XIV. 5. A salt-water lake between Avernus and the gulf of Baiae. Agrippa connected it with both to make his Julian harbour.

Lucullus. See Licinius.

Lugdunum. III. 41; XVI. 13. (Lyon.) A Roman colony founded at the confluence of the Rhone and Saône by Munatius Plancus in B.C. 43. In B.C. 10 an altar of Augustus was erected there, and its annual games were attended by delegates from every state of Gaul, of which Lugdunum thus became the religious head. Gallia Lugdunensis proper included the Seine and Loire valleys, and the country between.

Lugli. XII. 29, 30, 31. Lekhs or Poles; eastern neighbours of the Suevians.

Lupia. I. 60; II. 7. A stream of Westphalia, emptying into the Rhine at Wesel after a course of 110 miles.

Lupus. See Cornelius, Curtius, Junius.

Lurinus Varus. XIII. 32. Expelled from the senate, probably under Caligula, for extortion while proconsul. Nero restored him.

Lusitania. XIII. 46. The south-western part of the Spanish peninsula, governed by an imperial legatus of praetorian rank. When Nero appointed the quaestorian Otho to the position, he acted unconstitutionally.

Lusius Geta. XI. 31, 33; XII. 42. Associate praefect of the praetorians in A.D. 48, when Messalina's excesses became known. He was a weak man, and the freedman, Narcissus, practically took the reins during the emergency. He was superseded by Burrus in 51.

Lusius Saturninus. XIII. 43. An ex-consul. P. Suillius accused and condemned him, at Messalina's direction.

O. Lutorius Priscus. III. 49. A clever nobleman, who, when Drusus Jr. was ill, composed an obituary poem upon him. Drusus recovered, but Priscus was vain enough to read the verses to some ladies of his acquaintance. For this he was condemned and put to death.

Lycia. II. 60, 79; XIII. 33. South-western Asia Minor, inhabited by a brave and civilised Semitic race, which worshipped Apollo at Patara and Xanthus. They were ruined by the extortions of M. Brutus when preparing for Philippi. Claudius united them in one imperial province with Pamphylia. The Mare Lycium was the Carpathian Sea between Lycia and Crete.

Lyourgus. III. 26. Lawgiver of the Lacedaemonian Dorians. Placed by Aristotle in the 9th century B.C.

Lydia. III. 61; IV. 55. Western central sea-board of Asia Minor, inhabited in Homer's time by Pelasgian Maeonians, reported to have sent colonies to Greece and Italy. Afterwards conquered by the Lydians (a Semitic race from the east), whose kingdom in the 7th century B.C. embraced most of Asia Minor. The Lydians preserved their primitive language and religion under Persian and Roman rule.

Lydia. IV. 55. Myr eponymus of Lydia.

Lydia. IV. 8, 10. (6) Jr.'s eunuch. Poisoned.

A.D. by Sejanus's orders. In 31 the plot was discovered. Lygdus was tortured and executed.

Macedones Hyrcani. II. 47. A settlement of Hyrcanians in Lydia, established by the Persians, and afterwards mingled with Macedonians.

Macedonia. I. 76, 80; II. 55; III. 38, 61; IV. 55; V. 10; VI. 28, 31; XII. 62. A powerful kingdom, north-east of Greece. Philip V. was defeated by the Roman consul, Flamininus, in B.C. 197, and Perseus by Paulus Aemilius in 168. After this Macedon became a Roman province. Augustus assigned it to the senate, but the people, at their own request, were transferred to the emperor's government from A.D. 15 to the time of Claudius.

Macer. See Pompeius.

Macrina. See Pompeia.

Naevius Sertorius Macro. VI. 15, 23, 29, 38, 45, 48, 50. A low-born but audacious attendant of Tiberius at Capreae. When Tiberius learned Sejanus's designs in Oct. A.D. 31, Macro proceeded to Rome, drew Sejanus to the senate-house under pretext of conferring the tribunician power upon him, and had him arrested there while he was himself securing the allegiance of the praetorians without. He became their prefect after the fall of Sejanus, and abused his influence with the emperor to ruin Scaurus, Arruntius, and other nobles. He prostituted his wife Ennia to Caligula, and plotted to raise him to the throne. He is said to have hastened the end of Tiberius. Caligula favoured his accomplices for some time after his accession, and made Macro prefect of Egypt, but, growing weary of them, put them to death.

C. Cilnius Maecenas. I. 54; III. 30; VI. 11; XIV. 53, 55; XV. 39. An eques of Etruscan family, the prime minister of Augustus, who left him in command of the city and all Italy (an office far exceeding that of a constitutional praefectus urbi) while he campaigned at Sicily and Actium. Wealthy and distinguished, Maecenas, whether from policy or choice, never accepted a higher position than that of eques. He seems to have been a consistent Epicurean, and to have despised the ordinary ambitions of men, while he enjoyed his practical luxury and power. He made a display of indolence and foppery, caressing actors and scribbling amorous verses, while he displayed in private consummate business ability.

When Agrippa married Julia in B.C. 21, Maecenas fell into the shade. He had arranged the match himself, but appears to have miscalculated his power to renounce station, and felt bitterly that he was now but third in the state. An amour between his wife, Terentia, and Augustus widened the breach between emperor and minister, leaving but a shadow of their former friendship. Maecenas died B.C. 8, and was buried in his superb Esquiline Gardens.

Magius Caecilianus. III. 37. Falsely and unsuccessfully accused of treason during his praetorship, A.D. 21.

Magnesia ad Maeandrum. III. 62. (Inek Bazar.) Six miles north of the river Maeander, and not far from Ephesus. The ruins of the temple of Artemis Leucophryene, considered the best proportioned in the world, have been discovered and examined.

Magnesia a Siplylo. II. 47. (Manissa.) At the foot of Mt. Sipylus, fifteen miles N.E. of Smyrna, where Antiochus was defeated by Scipio Asiaticus, B.C. 20.

Mallovendus. II. 25. A Marsian chieftain. Submitted to the Romans, A.D. 16.

Malorix. XIII. 54. (Malarich.) Friesian ambassador to Rome, A.D. 58.

Maluginensis. See Servius.

Mamercus. See Aemilius.

Mancia. See Curtilius.

Manlius. II. 50. Banished as paramour of Appuleia Varilla, A.D. 17.

T. Manlius Valens. XII. 40. Legatus legionis in Britain, A.D. 50. Died consul at the age of 90, A.D. 96.

Marcellus. See Asinius, Claudius, Cornelius, Eprius, Granius.

L. Marcius Philippus. III. 72. Step-brother of Augustus, at whose request he built a temple to Hercules and the Muses, and a portico bearing his own name.

Marcia. I. 5. Daughter of the last by Augustus's aunt, Atia Minor. Her father-in-law married her sister as a second wife. Marcia married Paulus Fabius Maximus, and, by disclosing to Livia his visit to Planasia, occasioned his death.

Marclanus. See Granius.

Marcius Festus. XV. 50. An eques connected with Piso's conspiracy.

P. Marcius. II. 32. Executed as sorcerer, A.D. 16.

Marcomanni. II. 46, 62. (The March or Border men.) A Suevian tribe in Bohemia; the clan of Maroboduus, who resided among them.

Mardi. XIV. 23. Warlike hill tribes in Persia and Armenia. One clan attacked Corbulo in A.D. 60, apparently in the vicinity of Lake Van.

Marinus. See Julius.

P. Marius Celsus. XIV. 48. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 62; curator aquarum, 64-66.

Marius Celsus. XV. 25. Son of the last. Legatus legionis under Corbulo in 63. He supported Galba and Otho, and was consul suffectus in 69.

Marius Nepos. II. 48. An ex-prætor of dissolute habits. Tiberius relieved his poverty, but expelled him from the senate.

C. Marius. I. 9; XII. 6. B.C. 157-86. Leader of the popular party. Conqueror of Jugurtha and the Cimbri; general in the Social war. Opposing Sulla's appointment to the command of the Mithridatic war in 88, he was expelled from Rome, but returned with an army to hold eighteen days of a seventh consulship which had been promised him by a Syrian prophetess. Died of exhaustion from his efforts and trials.

Sex. Marius. IV. 36; VI. 19. A native of Spain, where he owned large gold mines. Accused by Calpurnius Salvianus in A.D. 25, he was protected by Tiberius, but afterwards gained the old emperor's ill will by removing his beautiful daughter from his advances. Tiberius accused him of incest, had him executed, and seized his property.

Maroboduus. (Marbod.) II. 26, 44, 46, 62, 63; III. 11. A Suevian chief, who learned Roman ideas while a hostage, and formed a German confederation, over which he ruled, from the Danube to the Baltic, east of the Elbe. His jealousy of the Cheruskans prevented him from aiding them against Germanicus. Arminius attacked and broke up his kingdom in A.D. 17, and in 19 Maroboduus fled to Tiberius for protection, and was allowed to reside at Ravenna until his death in 35.

Mars. II. 64; III. 18; XIII. 8, 57. Augustus erected a temple to Mars Ultor in the Forum Augusti, in commemoration of his vengeance upon the assassins of Julius Caesar. Here the statues of victorious generals were placed. The German war-god Tiu was considered the same deity.

Marsi. I. 50, 56; II. 25. A confederation of tribes between the Ruhr and Lippe, in Rhenish Prussia.

Martialis. See Cornelius.

Martina. II. 74; III. 7. A Syrian witch, supposed to have poisoned Germanicus at Piso's command. Brought to Italy as a witness, she contrived to kill herself.

Marullus. See Junius.

Marus. II. 63. (Morava or March.) Confluent of the Danube between Vienna and Pressburg, giving its name to Moravia.

Massilla. IV. 43, 44; XIII. 47; XIV. 57. (Marseille.) A Greek colony in Southern Gaul, retaining its original language under the empire, and considered an advantageous place for residence or education.

Mater Deum. IV. 64. A title of Cybele, whose worship was introduced in Rome B.C. 204. Her temple was on the Palatine.

C. Matius Calvena. XII. 60. A rich equus, friend of Julius Caesar and Augustus. An amiable and learned man, with a taste for gardening.

Mattiaci. XI. 20. (Matte ach = meadow-spring.) A German tribe near the hot-springs of Wiesbaden.

Mattium. I. 56. Capital of the Chatti in Hesse Cassel.

Mauri. II. 52; IV. 5, 23; XIV. 28. The primitive Berber tribes of the Atlas region and coast, distinguishable from the Numidians, who lived farther east. There were two imperial provinces, Mauritania Tingitana, and M. Caesariensis.

Maximilla. See Egnatia.

Maximus. See Caesennius, Fabius, Sanquinus, Trebellius.

Maxippa. II. 52. Chief of the Mauri, and ally of Tacfarinas.

Medea. VI. 34. Wife of Jason, and traditional ancestress of the Medes.

Medi. II. 60; VI. 34. A warlike Indo-European race, south of the Caspian. A part of the Persian empire, they became notorious for effeminacy, and submitted without a struggle to Alexander and the Parthians.

Media Atropatene. II. 4, 56; XIII. 41; XIV. 26; XV. 2, 31. A region of Media near Armenia, where the inhabitants retained their hardihood. The satrap Atropates established himself as king at the time of Alexander. About the time of Augustus the kingdom became an appanage of the Parthian crown, and was held by the heir-apparent, Armenia being reserved for the king's second son, or brother.

Meherdates (or Mithridates). XI. 10; XII. 10, 11, 14. A grandson of Phraates, despatched by Claudius in A.D. 49 as a rival claimant of the Parthian throne. He was captured by Gotarzes, who cut off his ears.

Mela. See Annaeus.

Melitene. XV. 26. (Malattia.) A city near the Euphrates, in eastern Capadocia.

L. Memmius Pollio. XII. 9. A tool of Agrippina. Consul suffectus, A.D. 49.

P. Memmius Regulus. V. 11; VI. 4; XII. 22; XIV. 47. As consul suffectus in A.D. 31 he aided in the overthrow of Sejanus; was governor of Moesia and Achaia in 35. Caligula fell in love with his wife, Lollia Paulina, by hearsay, and took her from him, but he remained unharmed under the reigns of Claudius and Nero, dying in 61.

C. Memmius Regulus. XV. 23. Son of the last. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 63.

Memnon. II. 61. A traditional hero of the east, called the son of the morning (Aurora), who fought and fell, as an ally of Troy, in the days of King Priam. When the Greeks in Egypt observed the statues of Amenophis III., they ascribed them, on account of the resemblance of name, to the Homeric hero, and claimed that a sound like a breaking harp-string, which proceeded from the statue at sunrise, was his salutation to his mother.

Menelaus. II. 60. King of Sparta, and husband of Helen. After the fall of Troy in 1184 B.C., he wandered for eight years in the east, and was long wind-bound on the Egyptian coast.

Mercurius. XIII. 57. The name applied by the Romans, as is supposed, to the German Woden. See Latham's Germania, § 9.

Merula. See Apidius, Cornelius.

Mesopotamia. VI. 36-44; XII. 12. The district between the Euphrates and Tigris, north of the Median Wall (or its ruins), which separated it from Babylonia. As Trajan conquered it and made it one province with Babylonia, Tacitus, who lived in his reign, probably used the word in its wider sense.

Messala, Messalina. See Valerius, Valeria.

Messenia. IV. 43. The south-western district of the Peloponnesus. The people's independence of Sparta was established by Epaminondas, B.C. 369. The Messenians offered no resistance to Philip of Macedon after the battle of Chaeronea, in 338, and supported Antigonus Doson at Sellasia in 221. On both occasions they were rewarded by an extension of their boundaries.

Metellus. See Caecilius.

Miletus. II. 54; III. 63; IV. 43, 55. A Carian city, devoted to the worship of Apollo. It lost its original importance when taken by Alexander the Great in B.C. 334.

Milichus. XV. 54, 55, 71. (Μελίχος.) A treacherous freedman, who divulged the secret of Piso's conspiracy.

Minerva. XIII. 24; XIV. 12. The Italian goddess of thought and design. She occupied one of the cellae of the Capitol. Her image or palladium, ensuring the luck of Rome, was kept in Vesta's temple. Her festival, the Quinquatrus, began March 19th, and lasted five days. She had a temple near the Pantheon on the Campus Martius.

Minos. III. 26. Lawgiver of Crete; grandson of the elder Minos (Europa's child).

Minucius Thermus. VI. 7. An eques, executed as a friend of Sejanus, A.D. 32.

Minucius Thermus. XVI. 20. Perhaps son of the last. Executed in A.D. 66 as an enemy of Tigellinus. He was an ex-praetor.

Misenum. IV. 5; VI. 50; XIV. 3; XV. 46, 51. (Capo di Miseno.) The headland north of the Bay of Naples; a precipitous mountain, connected with the mainland by a strip of soil. Post of the Tyrrhene squadron, and site of Lucullus's villa, where Tiberius died.

Mithridates Sixth. II. 55; III. 62, 73; IV. 14, 36. King of Pontus, who waged two wars against Rome. At the beginning of the first (B.C. 88-84) he ordered a massacre of the 150,000 Romans in Asia Minor. It was ended by Sulla. The second was a desperate struggle, maintained while Rome was fighting Sertorius in Spain, and Spartacus in Italy (B.C. 74-63). Defeated by Lucullus and Pompey, Mithridates committed suicide.

Mithridates. XII. 15, 21. A descendant of the Pontic kings, and through them of the Achaemenian line of Persia. Appointed king of Bosporus by Claudius in A.D. 41, he was accused, and replaced by his brother Cotys. He led a barbarian army against his former kingdom in 49, but was defeated and sent to Rome, where he was executed in 69 for conspiring against Galba.

Mithridates. VI. 33; XI. 8, 9; XII. 45, 47. Brother of Pharasmanes of Hiberia. In 35 A.D. he became king of Armenia, by murdering Arsaces I. at the instigation of Tiberius. Summoned to Rome by Caligula, he was restored to his throne in 42-43 by Claudius, with the aid of Pharasmanes, who afterwards repented of his generosity, and, by the agency and treachery of his (Pharasmanes's) son Radamistus, dethroned and murdered Mithridates in 51.

Mnester. XIV. 9. Freedman of Agrippina Jr.

Mnester. XI. 4, 36. A Greek actor. Messalina forced him to act as her paramour, taking him from his former mistress, Poppaea. When Messalina fell in A.D. 48, Mnester was executed, though he had only served her by compulsion.

Moesia. I. 80; II. 66; IV. 5, 47; VI. 29. (Servia and Bulgaria.) The country between the Danube and the Balkans, organized in the reign of Augustus as an imperial province, with an army of two legions. The barbarous inhabitants were akin to the Thracians.

Mona. XIV. 29. (Anglesey.) An island 17 x 20 miles in size, separated from the coast of North Wales by the Menai Straits. It was frequented by the Druids, and their groves gave the island (now unusually bare) its Celtic name, Ynis Dowyll, "the isle of shade." Druidical remains are found there.

Monaeses. XV. 2, 4. Satrap of Vologaeses.

Monobazus. XV. 1, 14. Brother and successor of Izates of Adiabene. He shared the Parthian campaigns against Corbulo, and his sons accompanied Tiridates to Rome.

Montanus. See Curtius, Julius, Traullus, Votienus.

Mosa. II. 6, 47; XI. 20. (Maas or Meuse.) Flows 500 miles N.W. through Belgium to the sea at Rotterdam. It is connected with the Rhine by the Vahalis, but Corbulo made a shorter cut by digging a canal along the coast between the two rivers.

Moschi. XIII. 37. A tribe on the S.E. of the Euxine.

Mosella. XIII. 53. (Moselle.) Flows 300 miles from the Vosges Mountains, past Metz and Trèves, to the Rhine at Coblenz (Confluentes).

Mosteni. II. 47. The people of a Lydian town between Thyatira and Sardis.

L. Mummius Achaicus. IV. 43; XIV. 21. Took Corinth in B.C. 146, and fixed the boundaries of the Peloponnesian states in 145. He was the first to exhibit plays in connection with his triumph.

Munatius Gratus. XV. 50. An eques. Conspired with Piso, A.D. 65.

Munatia Plancia. II. 43, 55, 75; III. 9, 15, 17; VI. 26. Daughter of Horace's friend Plancus, the wife of Cn. Piso, and the confidant of Livia. She accompanied her husband to the east, and shared in his attacks upon Germanicus and Agrippina. When Piso fell in A.D. 20, she was spared to please Livia and annoy Agrippina, but was forced to suicide in A.D. 33, after the deaths of her friend and her enemy.

L. Munatius Plancus. I. 39. Brother of the last; consul in A.D. 13; sent on a complimentary delegation to Germanicus on the Rhine in 14.

Musa. See Aemilia.

C. Musonius Rufus. XIV. 59; XV. 71. An eques from Volsinii, and a Stoic philosopher; the counsellor of Rubellius Plautus, and the teacher of Epictetus. Banished by Nero in A.D. 65 as an accomplice of Piso, he returned in 69, and tried to preach philosophy to the troops of Antonius Natalis.

Musulami. II. 52; IV. 24. A tribe of Moors on the north slope of Mt. Aurasi; conquered by Lentulus Gaetulicus, A.D. 6. Revolted with Tacfarinas, A.D. 17-24, and again under Claudius.

Mutilla Prisca. IV. 12. A confidential friend of Livia Augusta.

Mutilus. See Papius.

Myrina. II. 47. A Lydian seaport.

Mytilene. VI. 18; XIV. 53. (Now Mitylene.) The capital of Lesbos, celebrated for its good harbour, delicate wine, and delightful climate.

Nabataei. II. 57. Bedouins, the descendants of Nebaioth, son of Ishmael. They maintained an Indian trade between the Gulf of Akaba and Palestine, accumulating great treasures in the rock city of Petra, their capital.

Nar. I. 79; III. 9. (Nera.) An Umbrian confluent of the Tiber.

Ti. Claudius Narcissus. XI. 29, 30, 33, 34, 37, 38; XII. 1, 57, 65; XIII. 1. The freedman and chancellor of Claudius; accumulated £3,300,000. At first the tool of Messalina, he overthrew her when she married Silius. He tried to persuade the emperor to marry Aelia Paetina, and he increased the ill will of Agrippina, which he had thus incurred, by protecting Junia Silana. She failed to convict him of his peculation in draining Lake Fucinus, and put him to death in A.D. 54, as soon as Claudius was dead.

Narnia. III. 9. (Narni.) On the Nar, in Southern Umbria.

Nasica. See Caesius.

Naso. See Valerius.

Natta. See Pinarius.

Nauportus. I. 20. (Ober Laybach.)

A town of Pannonia, on a river of the same name, by which the Argonauts are said to have reached the Adriatic, after carrying their ship from the Danube.

Naxos. XVI. 9. (Naxia.) Largest of the Cyclades. A fertile and pleasing island.

Neapolis. XIV. 10; XV. 33; XVI. 10. (Naples.) A Campanian seaport, colonised from Chalcis in Euboea at an early period. It retained its Greek character, language, theatres, and games, under the emperors. Nero there appeared on the stage. Claudius made it a colony, but it was far less important than the modern Naples, which is the largest city in Italy.

Nemetes. XII. 27. Suevian allies of Ariovistus, subsequently settled under Roman protection on the west of the Rhine. Their capital, Noviomagus, is now Spire, in the Palatinate of the Rhine.

Nepos. See Flavius, Marius.

Neptunus. III. 63. Poseidon; especially worshipped at Tenos.

Nero Claudius Caesar Drusus Germanicus. Son of Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus by Agrippina Jr. Born at Antium, Dec. 15th, A.D. 37. His mother married as a third husband her uncle Claudius in A.D. 49, forced him to adopt her son in 50, and poisoned him in 54. The praetorians had been prepared. Nero at once ascended the throne, having the year before married Octavia, the daughter of Claudius. He was willing to let his mother manage his state affairs, but when she tried to interfere with his amours he showed a spirit of weak and selfish obstinacy. Agrippina tried to frighten him by petting Britannicus, the lawful heir of the throne, but Nero had the boy poisoned. From this time there was no peace between the domineering mother and cowardly son. In 59 he murdered her, and in 62 married his mistress, Poppaea, putting Octavia to death. In 64 he was accused of spreading the conflagration at Rome, and persecuted the Christians. In 65 an unsuccessful conspiracy against his life fanned his timidity into burning cruelty, and from this time his government was a reign of terror. In 67 he made a tour of Greece to display his talents as a musician and horse-driver. On his return in 68, Rome submitted as usual to his insane conceit, but the western provinces rebelled. Galba advanced from Spain; Nero was utterly helpless, and proposed to soften the hearts of the soldiers by playing his lyre for them. Every one deserted him; the senate condemned him; he lacked the nerve to kill himself, and a freedman helped him to cut his throat.

Nero. II. 43; III. 29; IV. 8, 17, 59, 67; V. 3, 4. Eldest son of Germanicus and Agrippina, born about A.D. 6. Betrothed as a boy to the daughter of Silanus Creticus, but not married. In 20, a year after his father's death, Tiberius commended him to the senate, granted him a priesthood, and married him to his grand-daughter, Julia, daughter of Drusus Jr., after whose death he became heir to the throne. Sejanus proceeded to ruin him; instigated his wife and his brother Drusus against him; caught his rash words by spies, and in 29 induced Tiberius to complain of him and Agrippina to the senate, which condemned them for treason on a second vote. Nero was banished to Pontia, and soon murdered.

Nerulinus. See Suillius.

Nerva. See Cocceius, Silius.

Nicephorium. VI. 41. A city on the Euphrates, built by Alexander the Great to commemorate his victories. Now Rakka, in a pashalic of the same name.

Nicephorius. XV. 4. (Bitlis Chai.) A confluent of the Tigris in Armenia.

Nicopolis. II. 53; V. 10. A city of Epirus, built by Augustus to commemorate the victory of Actium. It occupied the site of his camp, was endowed with the privileges of a colony, and was the site of quinquennial games, called Actia.

Niger. See Brutteditus, Veianus.

Noricum. II. 63. Modern Styria, Carinthia, etc., in Southern Austria. Its kings were conquered after a hard fight in 13 B.C., and it became a second-class imperial province, under an equestrian procurator.

Cn. Novius. XI. 22. Executed in A.D. 47 for attempting the life of Claudius.

Novius Priscus. XV. 71. Banished as friend of Seneca in A.D. 65. Consul in 78.

Nuceria. XIII. 31; XIV. 17. (Nocera.) A town of Campania, eight miles from Pompeii, with whose inhabitants its people maintained a feud, referred to in street scrawlings found at Pompeii.

Numa Pompilius. III. 26; XV. 41. Second king of Rome, B.C. 715-672.

Numa Marcius. VI. 11. Son of the first pontifex maximus, son-in-law of Numa Pompilius, and father of Ancus Marcius. Appointed praefectus urbi by Tullus Hostilius.

Numantia. XV. 13. A Spanish town near the modern Soria. In B.C. 136 the inhabitants besieged C. Hostilius Mancinus and his legions in an entrenched camp, and forced them to surrender.

Numantina. IV. 22. Divorced from Plautius Silvanus and married to Sex. Appuleius. In 24 A.D. Silvanus murdered a second wife, and Numantina was accused of having maddened him by philtres, but was acquitted. Her story is known from an inscription by which she commemorated her son, Sex. Appuleius, "the last of his race."

Numidae. II. 52; III. 21. (Numádes.) The Greek name for the Berber tribes of North Africa. They were partly civilised under the Romans, and produced much grain, but returned to their wandering habits on the slightest occasion, like the Cossacks of Southern Russia. They have maintained their language and customs unaffected by successive conquests of Carthaginians, Romans, Vandals, and Saracens.

Nymphidius Sabinus. XV. 72. A freedwoman's bastard, made colleague of Tigellinus in the praetorium, A.D. 65. Killed in an attempt for the throne in 68.

Obaritus. XIV. 8. A centurion of the marines.

Obultronius Sabinus. XIII. 28. Treasury quaestor, accused of extortion.

Oocia. II. 86. Vestalis maxima; died A.D. 19.

Oceanus septemtrionalis. I. 70; II. 24. (North Sea.) Remarkable for high tides.

Octavia. IV. 44, 75. Sister of Augustus. Her husband, M. Marcellus, left her a widow in B.C. 40, with a son and two daughters. In 39 she married Mark Antony, and bore him two daughters. In 36 he returned to Cleopatra, a woman as inferior to his wife in beauty as in every virtue. Octavia was persistently faithful, supplied him with money and troops for his Armenian expedition, and after his death in 30 educated his son by Fulvia and his children by Cleopatra. She died in B.C. 11 universally regretted.

See the table of her daughters' descendants (II. 51, N.).

Octavia. XI. 32; XII. 2, 3, 9, 58, 68; XIII. 12; XIV. 60, 63, 64. Daughter of Claudius and Messalina, probably born in A.D. 39. In 48 her stepmother, Agrippina, broke her childish betrothal to L. Junius Silanus, and married her in 53 to Nero, with whom Octavia ascended the throne in 54. He never loved her; divorced her in 62, and married Poppaea sixteen days after. He banished her at Poppaea's desire, was frightened into recalling her by a mob, but banished her again as soon as he dared, and murdered her. Her head was brought to Poppaea.

Octavius Fronto. II. 33. Ex-praetor. Proposed a sumptuary law, A.D. 16.

O. Octavius Rufus. I. 9. Governor of Macedonia, where he was proclaimed imperator for defeating the Bessi. Died at Nola in Campania, while expecting the consulship, B.C. 58. His wife, Atia, niece of Julius Caesar, and his children, Octavius (Augustus) and Octavia, survived him.

Octavius Sagitta. XIII. 44. Deported in A.D. 58 for murdering his mistress, and sent back to his island by Vespasian, when he ventured to return to Rome in 70.

Odrusae. III. 38. A ferocious tribe of Thracian mountaineers.

Olennius. IV. 72. A centurio primipilaris who received the tribute of the Frieslanders. His exactions caused a revolt, from which he fled in 28 A.D.

T. Ollius. XIII. 45. A senator executed as accomplice of Sejanus in A.D. 31. He was the husband of one Poppaea Sabina, and father of the other.

O. Oppius. XII. 60. An eques, the friend and confidant of Julius Caesar, who showed him the greatest personal regard. Niebuhr considered him author of the work de Bello Alexandrino.

M. Opsius Navius. IV. 68, 71. Accuser of Titius Sabinus, A.D. 28. Afterwards executed by Tiberius.

Ordovices. XII. 33. A tribe in North Wales. Their capital was Conovium (Conway).

Orfitus. See Cornelius, Paccius.

Ornospades. VI. 37. A Parthian exile, who became a Roman citizen, and served under Tiberius in Dalmatia, A.D. 6-9. He was afterwards pardoned by his king, and became satrap of Mesopotamia. Supported Tiridates in A.D. 35.

Orodes. VI. 33, 35. Son of Artab.

banus III. of Parthia. Defeated by the Hiberians and Sarmatians in A.D. 35.

Ortygia. III. 61. A grove near Ephesus. See Note.

Ostia. II. 40; XI. 26; XV. 39, 43; XVI. 9. The port of Rome. The mouth of the Tiber became choked with sand, and Claudius built a new port two miles north, connecting it with the river by a canal, which is now the only navigable channel. Ostia and the Portus Ostiensis are now two miles inland, on account of alluvial deposits; but their ruins, and the quays of Claudius and Trajan, are distinctly visible.

Ostorius Sabinus. XVI. 23, 30, 33. An eques, rewarded with £10,000 and insignia quaestoria for accusing Bareas Soranus in A.D. 66.

P. Ostorius Scapula. XII. 31, 35, 38, 39. Consul suffectus under Claudius, and governor of Britain, A.D. 47-52. He drew a chain of forts from the Severn to the Wash, and won triumphal honours by capturing Caractacus. His death in 52 was caused by the weariness and vexation of barbarian warfare.

M. Ostorius Scapula. XII. 31; XIV. 48; XVI. 14, 15. Son of the last. Won a civic crown in a battle with the Iceni. Executed in 64 on charge of inquiring the length of Nero's life by sorcery. His accuser was a man whose life he had saved two years before by refusing to give evidence against him.

Otho. See Salvius.

Paocius Orfitus. XIII. 36; XV. 12. A primipilaris on Corbulo's staff, who was defeated by rashly engaging the enemy in 58, and was reduced to his former position as primipilus. He was in the army of Paetus in 62, and ran away.

Paconianus. See Sextius.

M. Paconius. III. 67. Legatus of C. Junius Silanus in Asia, he joined in prosecuting him for embezzlement, A.D. 22. Afterwards executed by Tiberius for treason.

O. Paconius Agrippinus. XVI. 28, 33. Son of the last, banished by Nero in A.D. 66 on suspicion of treason. When the senate was consulting, he was in the gymnasium. A friend came to announce his condemnation. "To death or banishment?" "Banishment." "And my property?" "Is left you." "Very well," said Paconius, "we will lunch at Aricia."

Pacorus. XV. 2, 14, 31. Appointed king of Media Atropatene by his brother, Vologeses.

Pacuvius. II. 79. A legatus legionis who aided Sentius to check Cn. Piso after the death of Germanicus, and subsequently governed Syria as the legatus of Aelius Lamia, who was appointed governor in A.D. 20, but kept at Rome by the jealous policy of Tiberius. Pacuvius batted on the province. Every night he celebrated his own funeral feast, and was carried to bed drunk in a mock procession, while his pimps sang in chorus, βεβλωται, βεβλωται!

Paetina. See Aelia.

Paetus. XIII. 23. A treasury spy, banished in A.D. 55 for false accusation.

Paetus. See Thræsea.

Pagyda. III. 20. A Numidian river. Possibly the Abiad, which runs south of the Atlas range, and is lost in the sands of the Sahara.

Palamedes. XI. 14. Prince of Argos, one of the wisest Greeks at the siege of Troy. He was said to have added four letters to the alphabet.

Palatinus Mons. XII. 24; XV. 38. The square hill in the middle of Rome where Romulus founded his primitive city (XII. 24, N.). Augustus inhabited the house of the orator Hortensius, at the north corner, above the forum, and the senate added to it reception rooms for public purposes. Livia, Tiberius, and Caligula annexed palaces of their own. Finally, when Nero rebuilt the region after the fire of A.D. 64, the whole hill-top became a magnificent mass of glittering colonnades and towering domes, while the ground was mined by subterranean passages and the secret dungeons of Tiberius. Caligula erected bridges, or viaducts, from the Palatine to the Capitol and Esquiline, but these were probably removed by Claudius. Nero again connected the Palatine and Esquiline.

Pallas. XI. 29, 38; XII. 2, 25, 53, 65; XIII. 2, 14, 23; XIV. 2, 65. Freedman of Antonia Minor, by whom he was intrusted with the letter to Tiberius which ruined Sejanus. He was the treasurer of Claudius. Too timid to join the attack on Messalina, he afterwards made his fortune by supporting Agrippina and Nero. On the accession of the latter Pallas expected to control the state as before, but was compelled to retire into private life with a property of £2,500,000. In 62 A.D. Nero poisoned him, and seized his money.

Sex. Palpellus Hister. XII. 29. Began life on the staff of Tiberius in the reign of Augustus. Rose by degrees to be consul suffectus in A.D. 43, and was governor of Pannonia in 50.

Pammenes. XVI. 14. An astrologer, banished for sorcery.

Pamphylia. II. 79. A strip of the southern coast of Asia Minor, between Lycia and Cilicia.

Panda. XII. 16. A river of the Dandaridae.

Pandateria. I. 53; XIV. 63. (Vandotena.) A small island, forty miles south of Circeii. Julia Jr. and Octavia Jr. were banished to it.

Pandusa. See Latinus.

Pannonia. I. 16, 31, 47; III. 9; IV. 5; XII. 29; XV. 10. Western Hungary, with part of Austria. Densely populated by Celts and Slavonians under Augustus. They were subjugated B.C. 35, but rose in two formidable insurrections, B.C. 12-10, and A.D. 6-9, repressed with difficulty by Tiberius. In the latter the Pannonians raised an army of 208,000 men. Three legions were stationed to pacify the country, which was rapidly civilized, and organized as an imperial province.

Pansa. See Vibius.

Paphos. III. 62. (Baffa.) A town at the west end of Cyprus, celebrated for the worship of Venus. The spawn of certain mollusca, forming a scum on the sea, is heaped on this coast by the wind in spring, and originated the story of the birth of Venus from sea-foam.

Sex. Papinius Allenus. VI. 40. Consul, A.D. 36. His life is recorded by an extant inscription.

Sex. Papinius Allenus. VI. 49. Son of the last. His mother, after several attempts, induced him to commit incest. He killed himself out of shame, A.D. 37.

M. Papius Mutilus. II. 32. Consul suffectus A.D. 9, and gave his name to the Lex Papia Poppaea.

Paris. XIII. 19, 22, 27. A slave of Domitia, Nero's aunt, from whom he purchased his freedom for 10,000 sesterces, and became a famous pantomime. He served his mistress in bringing an unsuccessful accusation against Agrippina in A.D. 55. His life was spared by Nero's favour. He afterwards brought a suit to establish his ingenuitas, and forced Domitia to refund the money he had paid her. His admirer, Nero, began to take lessons in acting from him, and put him to death through jealousy of his superiority.

Parraces. XII. 14. A vassal who induced Meherdates to surrender to Gotarzes, A.D. 50.

Parthi. A Tartar tribe on the frontiers of Persia, where they mingled with the Iranians. Their royal Scythian line (the Arsacidae) held the throne from 256 B.C. to 226 A.D., when a national revolt restored Persian supremacy. The empire of the Parthians extended from the Euphrates to the Indus, and their mail-clad archers shared with the Germans the honour of stopping the march of the Roman legions. Their provinces were in some cases governed by vassal kings, as in Persia, Elymais, Adiabene, Orshoëne, and Media Atropatene. The peoples were only held in control by Parthian pressure, and readily fell away from the Arsacidae when threatened with war from without.

C. Passienus Crispus. VI. 20. A Roman noble and consul, famous for his wit and eloquence. His first wife was Domitia, Nero's aunt; his second, Agrippina Jr., who married and poisoned him for his money.

Patavium. XVI. 21. (Padua.) Capital of the Veneti in Cisalpine Gaul, thirty miles from the mouth of the Medoacus (Brenta). In the first century A.D. it was the richest city in Italy after Rome.

Patuleius. II. 48. A rich eques, died A.D. 7.

Paulina. See Lollia, Pompeia.

Paulinus. See Lollius, Pompeius.

Paulus Venetus. XV. 50. A centurion in Piso's conspiracy.

Paxaea. VI. 29. Wife of Pomponius Labeo, governor of Moesia. She joined him in accepting bribes, and in committing suicide when detected.

L. Pedanius Secundus. XIV. 42. Consul suffectus, A.D. 43; afterwards praefectus urbis; murdered by his own slave in 61.

Pedius Blaesus. XIV. 18. Praetorian proconsul of Crete and Cyrene, expelled from the senate in 59 for sacrilege and corruption; reinstated by Otho in 69.

O. Peto Albinovanus. I. 60. Cavalry officer in Germany. A friend of Ovid. Author of a poetical fragment preserved by the elder Seneca, relating the voyage of Germanicus down the Ems and through the North Sea, A.D. 16.

Pelago. XIV. 59. A eunuch sent by Nero to superintend the murder of Rubellius Plautus, A.D. 62.

Pellignus. See Julius.

Peloponnesus. IV. 43, 55. Tacitus gives a tradition of its settlement by the Lydian race, which afterwards, as Tyrrians, settled in Italy. The Peloponn was successively occupied by Ach and Dorians.

Pelops. IV. 55. Son of Tantalus and king of Elis, to which he led a colony from Phrygia or Lydia, giving his name to the Peloponnesus.

Percennius. I. 16, 17, 28, 29. A mutineer in Pannonia, executed by Drusus Jr., A.D. 14.

Pergamum. III. 63; IV. 37, 55; XVI. 23. (Bergama.) Capital of Eumenes and the Attali, in Mysia. The chief city of that region under the emperors, adorned with a temple of Augustus, and one of Aesculapius. Ruins of the latter still exist. The Pergameni resisted Nero's attempt to remove their pictures and statues.

Perinthus. II. 54. (Eski Eregli.) A Thracian city, N. of the Sea of Marmora.

M. Perperna. III. 62. Consul in 130 B.C., when he defeated Aristonicus.

Persae. II. 60; III. 61; VI. 31. An Indo-European people, originally living in the mountains of southern Persia. Under the leadership of Cyrus they conquered Media, Lydia, and Babylonia, between 559 and 538 B.C. The empire thus consolidated was governed by kings of the Achaemenian race, until the defeat of Darius Codomannus at Arbela, B.C. 331.

Perses or Perseus. IV. 55; XII. 38, 62. Last king of Macedon, B.C. 179-168. Defeated at Pydna by L. Aemilius Paulus, who led him in triumph.

Perusia. V. 1. (Perugia.) An Etruscan city, between Lake Thrasymene and the Tiber, where L. Antonius was besieged by Augustus, B.C. 41 and 40.

Petillius Rufus. IV. 68. An accuser of Titius Sabinus, A.D. 28. Executed by Tiberius or Caligula.

Q. Petillius Cerealis Caesius Rufus. XIV. 32. Defeated by Boadicea in A.D. 61, when legatus legionis in Britain. Deserted from Vitellius to Vespasian in 69, and enjoyed suffect consulships in 70 and 74. Between them he crushed the rebellion of Cerealis in Holland, and was governor of Britain.

Petrae. XI. 4. Equites illustres, ruined by Messalina because their house had been the rendezvous of Paris with her rival, Poppaea Sabina. She alleged the reason that they had had unlucky dreams about Claudius.

Petronius Priscus. XV. 71. Deported as accomplice of Piso.

C. Petronius Arbiter. XVI. 18, 19. A Roman senator who had won distinction as governor of a province, but afterwards devoted his powerful mind to the invention and refinement of such sensual pleasures as gained him the title of Arbiter, or Master of Good Taste, at Nero's court. Tigellinus, who envied his influence, ruined him, and Petronius committed suicide calmly and peacefully. His Satyricon, an extant romance, describes the worst abominations of Roman life with well-bred simplicity.

P. Petronius Turpilianus. III. 49; VI. 45; consul suffectus, A.D. 19; pro-consul of Asia, 26-30; legatus propraetore of Syria, 39-42. At this time he was directed to set up the emperor Caligula's image in the temple of Jehovah at Jerusalem. The Jews thereupon ceased sowing their fields, declaring that they would rather perish than suffer their law to be broken. Petronius prayed the emperor to reverse the order. Caligula threatened him with death, but was himself slain about that time, and Petronius survived to be the friend and fellow-student of Claudius.

P. Petronius Turpilianus. XIV. 29, 39; XV. 72. Consul in A.D. 61 from Jan. 1st to March 1st, after which he was sent to Britain, where he quelled a sedition by weak concessions, and was rewarded by triumphal ornaments in 65. Executed by Galba in 68 as an abettor of Nero's misgovernment.

Pharasmanes. VI. 32; XI. 8; XII. 44, 47, 48; XIII. 37. King of Hiberia. Put his brother, Mithridates, on the Armenian throne, A.D. 35, in opposition to Orodes of Parthia, and enabled him to recover it in 47. Finding his own son, Radamistus, restless and dangerous, he encouraged him to make war upon and kill Mithridates in 51. He put Radamistus to death in 58.

Philadelphia. II. 47. A Lydian city built by Attalus Philadelphus.

Philippi. III. 76; IV. 35. (Felipedjik.) On the confines of Macedon and Thrace, opposite the island of Thasos. The two battles between the republicans under Brutus and Cassius, and the forces of Antony and Augustus, took place two miles from the town in the autumn of 42. Augustus made it a colony.

Philippopolis. III. 38. A town of Thrace. Philip the Great established a convict colony there, and gave it his own name, which it still preserves. It is on the Hebrus (Maritza), 120 miles from its mouth.

Philippus Second. II. 63; III. 38; IV. 43. B.C. 382-336. King of Macedon and father of Alexander. He consolidated his ancestral kingdom, conquered the Thracian tribes which surrounded it, and destroyed the liberties of Greece in the battle of Chaeronea, B.C. 338.

Philippus. See Marcius.

Philopator Second. II. 42. Prince of Amanus in Eastern Cilicia. Died about A.D. 17.

Phoebus. XVI. 5. A freedman, Nero's doorkeeper. When Vespasian was banished from Nero's court for falling asleep at a concert, Phoebus shut the door in his face, and told him to go to "Morbonia" ("Bath"). He came to beg Vespasian's pardon on his accession, and was answered in the same words.

Phoenices. XI. 14. The Semitic people of Tyre. Their merchantmen spread their alphabet through Cyprus, Greece, Libya, and Italy, between 1000 and 700 years B.C.

Phraates Fourth, Arsaces Fifteenth. II. 1, 2; VI. 31. King of Parthia, B.C. 38-2. Defeated Antony in 36, and expelled the kings of Armenia and Atropatene who favoured Rome. In 20, Augustus, by firmness and policy, induced him to restore the standards lost by Crassus, and to make an alliance with Rome. Between 11 and 7 B.C. he sent his four eldest sons to be educated at Rome.

Phraates. VI. 31, 32; XI. 10. Son of the last; educated at Rome, and despatched by Tiberius in A.D. 35 to provoke a rebellion against the reigning king of Parthia. He was unused to the climate and habits of the East; sickened, and died.

Phraates. VI. 42. A Parthian satrap, A.D. 35.

Phrixus. VI. 34. A mythological character who rode the golden-fleeced ram to Colchis. Here the golden fleece was confiscated by king Aeëtes. Phrixus was deified, and had an oracle in Colchis.

Picenum. III. 9. A region of Central Italy, between Umbria and the Adriatic.

Pilatus. See Pontius.

Pinarius Natta. IV. 34. A tool of Sejanus to accuse Cremutius Cordus, A.D. 25.

Piræus. V. 10. (Πειραιεύς.) Harbour of Athens on a promontory five miles from the city. Ruined by Sulla, B.C. 86.

L. Pituanus. II. 32. Executed as a sorcerer, A.D. 16.

Aurelius Pius. I. 75. A senator who brought suit against the state for damage done to his house, A.D. 15.

Planasia. I. 3, 5; II. 39. (Pianosa.)

A small Etruscan island, ten miles S. of Elba. Agrippa Postumus was confined there.

Plancia. See Munatia.

Plancus. See Munatius.

A. Plautius. XIII. 32. Consul suffectus, A.D. 29. Governor of Britain, 43-47. Received an ovation for conquering the south of the island.

Q. Plautius. VI. 40. Brother of Plautius Silvanus. Consul, A.D. 36.

Plautius Lateranus. XI. 30, 36; XIII. 11; XV. 49, 60. A paramour of Messalina. When she fell in 48 his life was spared for the sake of his uncle, A. Plautius, but he was expelled from the senate. Nero restored him in 55, and in 66 appointed him consul for the next year. Plautius, notwithstanding, joined Piso's conspiracy. When it was detected he died bravely.

Plautius Silvanus. IV. 22. Praetor, A.D. 24. Compelled to commit suicide for murdering his wife.

Plautus. See Rubellius.

C. Plinius Secundus. I. 69; XIII. 20; XV. 53. A.D. 23-79. Served in Germany, and wrote histories of the German wars and of his own times. These works have been lost, though his Natural History is extant.

Poeni. II. 49, 59. The Roman name for the Phoenicians of Carthage.

Poenius Postumius. XIV. 37. Praefectus castrorum of the second legion. He displayed cowardice in the war with Boadicea, and killed himself through shame.

Polemo First. II. 56. Son of the rhetorician Zeno, appointed by Antony and afterwards by Augustus to various oriental governments, dying about B.C. 2 as king of Armenia Minor and Bosporus.

Polemo Second. XIV. 26. Son of the last. Appointed to different governments by Caligula and Claudius. In 62 he resigned his territory of Pontus, which became a Roman province.

Pollio. See Annius, Asinius, Caelius, Julius, Memmius, Vedius.

Pollitta. See Antistia.

Polycellus. XIV. 39. A rich and rascally freedman of Nero, sent to Britain in A.D. 61.

Pompela Macrina. VI. 18. Daughter of Pompeius Macer Third. Banished, A.D. 33.

Pompela Paulina. XV. 60, 63, 64. Daughter of Pompeius Paulinus, and wife of the philosopher Seneca, who mentions her with much affection in his epistles.

Pompeii. XIV. 17; XV. 22. A seaport near the southern slope of Vesuvius, of about 20,000 inhabitants. Sulla made it a colony. The people were half Greek, half Oscan, and of an inferior type. At a gladiatorial show in A.D. 59 many Nucerians were killed in a Pompeian riot. The city was injured by an earthquake in 63, and totally destroyed by the great eruption of Vesuvius in 79.

Pompeopolis. II. 58. Pompey settled a colony of pirates at Soli, a Greek town on the Cilician coast, and called it by his own name.

Pompeius. VI. 14. An eques, executed in A.D. 32 for complicity with Sejanus.

Pompeius. XV. 71. A praetorian tribune, cashiered in A.D. 65 on suspicion of complicity with Piso's plot.

Pompeius Aelianus. XIV. 41. A Spanish senator, banished from Italy and Spain in A.D. 61 for abetting a forgery.

Sex. Pompeius. I. 7; III. 11, 32. Kinsman of Augustus; consul in A.D. 14; proconsul of Asia in 27; patron of Ovid and Valerius Maximus.

O. Pompeius Gallus. XII. 5. Perhaps grandson of the last; consul suffectus, A.D. 49.

Pompeius Macer First. Son of Theophanes of Mytilene, named for his father's patron; appointed procurator in Asia and superintendent of Roman libraries by Augustus.

Pompeius Macer Second. VI. 18. Son of the last; eques illustris; forced to suicide by Tiberius, A.D. 33.

Pompeius Macer Third. I. 72. Son of the last; shared his father's death.

On. Pompeius Magnus. I. 1; III. 28; IV. 34; VI. 18; XII. 62; XIII. 6, 34; XIV. 20; XV. 14, 25. Born B.C. 106. At the age of eighteen he engaged in the civil wars, and was one of Sulla's best generals. As consul in B.C. 70 he gained favour by popular legislation, and in 67 was given command of the Mediterranean to subdue Cilician pirates. He succeeded Lucullus in the Mithridatic war, and in 63 had conquered Asia Minor, Armenia, and Judaea. The first triumvirate (a secret compact) was formed by Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus, in 60. Pompey married Caesar's daughter, who died in 54. When their interest brought them into collision, Pompey headed the senatorial party, was driven by Caesar from Italy, defeated at Pharsalia in 48, and soon after murdered in Egypt. He erected a stone theatre (the first of its kind) on the Campus Mar-tius. Tacitus says of him (Histt. ii. 38) that he concealed his aims better than Sulla or Marius, but was not a better man.

Sex. Pompeius Magnus. I. 2, 10; V. 1. Son of the last. Maintained a partisan warfare in Spain after the overthrow of his father's party, and seized Sicily with his fleet during the dissensions of the second triumvirate, cutting off the grain supply of Rome. Augustus was forced to make peace with him, but renewed war on the first occasion. Agrippa defeated Pompey off Mylae on the Sicilian coast; he fled to the east, and was put to death by Antony's officers, B.C. 35.

Pompeius Paulinus. XIII. 53; XV. 18. Repaired Drusus's Rhine dyke while governor of Lower Germany. Appointed on a finance committee in 62 by Nero.

Pompeius Silvanus. XIII. 52. Accused in 58 A.D. of extortion in Africa. Though old he survived the men who acquitted him in hope of becoming his heirs, and enjoyed a second consulship under Vespasian.

Pompeius Urbicus. XI. 35. Executed as accomplice of Messalina, A.D. 48.

Pomponia Graecina. XIII. 32. Wife of A. Plautius. In consequence of the murder of her friend, the Princess Julia, by Messalina in 44 A.D., she wore mourning until her death in 84. In 57 she was accused as convert to a foreign superstition (possibly Christianity), but was acquitted by a family council convened for the purpose.

Pomponius. VI. 8. An obscure informer involved in the ruin of Sejanus.

T. Pomponius Atticus. II. 43. Friend and correspondent of Cicero; father-in-law of M. Vipsanius Agrippa.

L. Pomponius Flaccus. II. 32, 41, 66; VI. 27. Legatus legionis in Moesia under Augustus; consul, A.D. 17; afterwards governor of Moesia. He checked its disturbances, and imprisoned Rhescuporis. He gained the favour of Tiberius by sharing his debauch with Calpurnius Piso Caesoninus. Governor of Syria in 32; died in 33.

Pomponius Labeo. IV. 47; VI. 29. As governor of Moesia in A.D. 26, he aided Poppaeus Sabinus to check the Thracian revolt. Being accused of corruption in 34, Tiberius renounced his friendship. He committed suicide with his wife Paxaea.

P. Pomponius Secundus. V. 8; VI. 18; XI. 13; XII. 27, 28. Accused in A.D. 31 as accomplice of Sejanus, and placed in libera custodia with his brother Sextus. Caligula released him. Consul in 44; conquered the Chatti in 50. His friend, Pliny the elder, wrote his life in two books. Quintilian praised his tragedies.

Q. Pomponius Secundus. VI. 18; XIII. 43. Brother of the last. Consul, A.D. 41. An outrageous flatterer of Caligula; he was so eager for liberty after Caligula's death that Claudius could hardly save him from the soldiers. He finally rebelled against Claudius (probably with Furius Scribonianus), and was put to death.

Pomptinae Paludes. XV. 42. The marshes between Rome and the Volscian mountains.

Pontes Longi. I. 63. Dykes of logs and earth in the province of Drenthe, Holland (I. 64, N.).

Pontia Postumia. XIII. 44. Murdered by her paramour, A.D. 58.

Ponticum Mare. II. 54; XII. 63; XIII. 39. The Euxine.

Ponticus. See Valerius.

Pontius Fregellanus. VI. 48. Expelled from the senate in A.D. 37.

Pontius Pilatus. XV. 44. A Roman eques, probably from Southern Italy; procurator of Judaea, A.D. 26-36. Was recalled for maladministration shortly before the death of Tiberius, and committed suicide soon after the accession of Caligula.

C. Petronius Pontius Nigrinus. VI. 45. Consul, A.D. 37. Executed by Nero for treason. His daughter Pontia became notorious for poisoning her two sons. She confessed the deed, opened her veins, and died dancing.

Pontus. XII. 21; XV. 10, 26. The south coast of the Euxine, from the river Halys to Armenia. Governed by the proconsul of Bithynia after the resignation of Polemo II. in A.D. 62.

Poppaea Sabina. XI. 2; XIII. 45. Daughter of Poppaeus Sabinus, and wife of P. Scipio. The most beautiful woman of her age. By an amour with the actor Mnester, she incurred the anger of Messalina, and was put to death, A.D. 47.

Poppaea Sabina. XIII. 45, 46; XIV. 1, 60, 61; XV. 23, 61, 71; XVI. 6, 21. Daughter of the last by T. Ollius. Married first to Rufrius Crispinus, secondly to Nero's favourite, Salvius Otho. Gaining access to court, she captivated Nero, who sent Otho to Lusitania (A.D. 58) and made her his mistress. Inducing him to murder his mother in 59, and his wife in 62, she ascended his throne. In 63 she bore a daughter who lived four months, and in 65 was Nero's counsellor during Piso's plot. He killed her the same year by an ill-natured kick while she was with child. She was mummied and deified.

Poppaeus Sabinus. I. 80; IV. 46; V. 10; VI. 39; XIII. 45. Consul, A.D. 9. Appointed governor of Moesia Superior by Augustus. Tiberius added Macedonia and Achaia to his territory, which he held until his death in 35. He won triumphal honours in the Thracian revolt of 26.

M. Porcius Cato Censorius. III. 66; IV. 56. A native of Tusculum. Rose to prominence in the war with Hannibal by his good sense and resolution; was consul in 195; censor in 184. Retained his vigour and hatred of Carthage to the last. Publicly prosecuted Sulpicius Galba in 149, a few months before his death, at the age of eighty-five.

M. Porcius Cato Uticensis. IV. 34. B.C. 95-46. A rigid Stoic, and supporter of the Roman republic. He committed suicide at Utica, rather than submit to Julius Caesar after the battle of Thapsus.

M. Porcius Cato. IV. 68. Accused Titius Sabinus in A.D. 28. Was consul suffectus and curator aquarum. Executed by Caligula.

Postumia. See Pontia.

A. Postumius Albus Regillensis. II. 49. Dictator in B.C. 498, when he won the battle of Lake Regillus.

A. Postumius Albinus. III. 71. Consul in B.C. 242. He could not lead an army into Africa on account of his duties at Rome as flamen Martialis.

Postumus. See Agrippa, Julius, Poenius.

Potitus. See Valerius.

Praeneste. XV. 46. (Palestrina.) 23 miles E. of Rome, at the foot of the Apennines.

Prasutagus. XIV. 31. King of the Icenii. Died about 60 A.D.

Primus. See Antonius.

Priscus. See Ancharius, Helvidius, Lutorius, Novius, Petronius, Tarquinius, Tarquitius.

C. Proculus. IV. 40. An eques Romanus, the confidential friend of Augustus, famous for his fraternal affection (Hor. Carm. II. 2) and his contented mind. Augustus once thought of marrying him to his daughter Julia.

Proculus. See Cervarius, Cestius, Considius, Titius, Volusius.

Propertius Celer. I. 75. An ex-praetor. Tiberius made him a mo present to keep his fortune at the senatorial standard.

Propontia. II. 54. The sea of mora, connected with the Ægean by the Straits (angustiae) of the Bosphorus; with the Euxine by the Hellespont.

Proserpina. XV. 44. Daughter of Demeter. Considered the same deity as the Roman Libera, daughter of Ceres (II. 49, N.).

Ptolemaeus. IV. 23, 24, 26. Son of Juba II., and King of Mauretania, A.D. 19-40. The first years of his reign were disgraced by the management of his freedmen, but he gained influence and reputation in 24, during Dolabella's campaigns with Tacfarinas. Caligula put him to death to secure his wealth.

L. and M. Publici Malleoli. II. 49. Curule aediles, B.C. 241. They were the first to celebrate the Floralia.

Publius Gallus. XVI. 12. An eques. The friend of L. Antistius Vetus. Banned on this account in A.D. 65.

Pulchra. See Claudia.

Puteoli. XIII. 48; XIV. 27. (Poszuoli.) Port of Cumae, remarkable for the best harbour of Western Italy. It became a colony in 194 B.C.; was disturbed by riots A.D. 58. In 60 Nero extended its privileges to old Puteoli, a suburb which was previously organised as a municipium.

Pyramus. II. 68. (Jyhoon.) A muddy, violent stream, a furlong broad, sixty miles east of Pompeiopolis.

Pyrrhus. II. 63, 88. King of Epirus. Campaigned in Southern Italy and Sicily, B.C. 280-274.

Pythagoras. XV. 37. Nero's favourite freedman.

Quadi. II. 63. A German tribe in Moravia and North-western Hungary. Dr. Latham considers them Slavonians.

Quadratus. See Seius, Ummidius.

Quietus. See Cluvidienus.

Quintianus. See Afranius.

Quintilianus. VI. 12. Tribunus plebeius, A.D. 32.

P. Quintilius Varus. I. 3, 43, 55, 65, 71; II. 45. Consul, B.C. 12. After governing Syria he was sent to organise Germany, recently conquered by Drusus Sr. A German conspiracy was formed under the Cheruscan prince Arminius, then serving in the Roman army. Varus was drawn from his camp on the Weser late in the summer of A.D. 9. Arminius deserted him in the midst of the Hartz Mountains, put himself at the head of the Germans, and cut the three legions to pieces after a running fight of three days. Varus fell on his sword, and his body was mutilated by the barbarians.

Quintilius Varus. IV. 66. Son of the last. Destroyed by Sejanus in A.D. 27, because he had been betrothed at one time to the daughter of Germanicus.

Radamistus. XII. 44, 47, 48, 50, 51; XIII. 6, 37. Son of Pharasmanes, king of Iberia, at whose instigation he murdered his uncle Mithridates, and was established in his kingdom of Armenia by bribing the procurator of Cappadocia. The Parthians made him fight for it, and once he had to fly for his life. Nero reinstated him in 54, but his father put him to death for treachery in 58.

Raetia. I. 44; II. 17. Grisons and the Tyrol. The inhabitants were Turanian shepherds, perhaps akin to the Etruscans. The Romans conquered the country in 15 B.C., establishing it as a province, with an imperial procurator.

Ravenna. I. 58; II. 63; IV. 5, 29; XIII. 30. Port of the Adriatic squadron; built, like Venice, on piles in a lagoon. Augustus constructed the harbour and lighthouse. Prisoners of state were kept there. Now left inland by the extension of the coast.

Reate. I. 79. A Sabine town near the Lacus Velinus. Much of its territory was flooded by the waters until M'. Curius Dentatus drained them into the Nar.

Regium. I. 53. A Greek city on the Italian side of the Straits of Messina.

Regulus. See Livineius, Memmius.

Remmius. II. 68. A Cilician veteran. Murdered Vonones, A.D. 19.

Remus. XIII. 58. See Note.

Rhamses Second. II. 60. King of Egypt in the 14th century B.C. Subdued Ethiopia, Persia, Asia Minor, and Thrace. The inscriptions at Thebes recording his exploits were interpreted to Germanicus by Egyptian priests, and are still extant.

Rhenus. II. 6; XIII. 53. (Rhein.) The political boundary of Germany and Gaul, though German immigration had driven the Celts farther west before the times of Julius Caesar. Eighty miles from its mouth the river breaks into two channels. The western and larger branch, the Vahalis (Waal), falls into the Mosa (Maas), and thus into the sea. The "old Rhine" still runs into the sea near Leyden, but its waters are diminished by a new branch (the Leck) formed during the middle ages.

Rhescuporis. II. 64, 65, 66, 67; III. 38. Brother of Rhoemetalcus I., king of Thrace, at whose death (about 7 A.D.) he received the highlands of the interior, while the coast cities were assigned to his nephew, Cotys. He tried to provoke a war with Cotys, but was forbidden by Tiberius. He then seized him by treachery, and finally put him to death. Pomponius Flaccus secured Rhescuporis and sent him to Rome, where he was condemned and exiled to Alexandria. Killed in an attempt to escape, A.D. 19.

Rhodanus. XIII. 53. (Rhone.) Flowing from the Lake of Geneva, it unites with the Arar (Saône) at Lyons, and falls into the Mediterranean.

Rhodus. I. 4, 53; II. 42, 55; IV. 15; XII. 58. A large island in the Carpathian Sea, colonised by Dorians before the Trojan war. It was the chief maritime power of Greece during the Macedonian and Roman periods. In 44 A.D. Claudius deprived it of freedom on account of an insurrection in which Roman citizens were crucified, but subsequently restored it in remembrance of the services of the Rhodians against Mithridates and Brutus. Tiberius resided on the island in a quasi-exile, B.C. 6-A.D. 2.

Rhoemetaces First. II. 64. King of Thrace, B.C. 11-A.D. 7.

Rhoemetaces Second. II. 67; III. 38; IV. 5, 47. Son of Rhescuporis, in whose treachery he took no part, and at whose death in A.D. 19 he shared Thrace with his cousins, the sons of Cotys. He aided the Romans in the Thracian revolt of 26, and was rewarded in 36 with the government of the whole country.

Romanus. XIV. 65. Unsuccessfully accused Seneca, A.D. 62.

Romanus. See Fabius.

Romanus Hispanus. I. 74. A rhetorician; the first professional delator.

Romulus Dentor. VI. 11. Praefectus urbi under Romulus.

Romulus. III. 26; IV. 9; VI. 11; XI. 24; XII. 24; XIII. 58; XV. 41. Mythical founder and eponymus of Rome. His name was associated with certain early laws; the consecration of the Pomœrium; the temple of Jupiter Stator, etc.

Rubellius Blandus. VI. 27. The first eques to profess rhetoric at Rome. A native of Tibur.

O. Rubellius Blandus. Son of the last; triumvir monetalis under Augustus.

O. Rubellius Blandus. III. 23, 51; VI. 27, 45. Son of the last. Consul, proconsul, and pontifex. Married Julia, the daughter of Drusus Jr., and was appointed by Tiberius, with his other progeneri, to distribute relief to the sufferers by the fire on the Aventine. Survived until Caligula's reign.

O. Rubellius Plautus. XIII. 19; XIV. 22, 57, 59; XVI. 10, 30. Son of the last, and great-grandson of Tiberius. Though he professed Stoic philosophy and lived a quiet life, his noble birth roused the jealousy of Nero, who obliged him in 60 A.D. to retire to his estates in Asia Minor, and had him murdered in 62. Plautus had been warned, but submitted without a murmur.

L. Rubellius Geminus. V. 1. Consul ordinarius, A.D. 29.

Rubrius. I. 73. An eques, accused of treason, A.D. 15.

Rubrius Fabatus. VI. 14. Endeavoured to fly to Parthia in A.D. 32, but was stopped at the Straits of Messina, and contemptuously allowed to live at large in Rome.

Rufilla. See Annia.

Rufinus. See Vinicius.

Rufius Crispinus. XI. 1, 4; XII. 42; XIII. 45; XV. 71; XVI. 17. Praefectus of the praetorians, rewarded by Claudius with money and decorations for arresting Valerius Asiaticus. Deposed by Agrippina in 52 A.D. for suspected devotion to the children of Messalina. Nero banished him to Sardinia in 65 as an accomplice of Piso, and put him to death in 66. He was married to Poppaea Sabina, who bore him a son. Nero murdered the boy because he played at being king.

Salenus Clemens. XV. 73. A delator and delator.

O. Sallustius Crispus. III. 30.

historian. Accumulated great wealth by extortion while governor of Numidia. Died B.C. 34.

C. Sallustius Crispus. I. 6; II. 40; III. 30. Grandnephew and heir of the last. After the fall of Maecenas he became the chief counsellor of Augustus, and afterwards of Tiberius. Like Maecenas he preferred real to apparent power, and, as an eques, controlled his masters and their court. Like Maecenas, too, he lost his influence in his old age, when Tiberius was tired of him. Died A.D. 20.

Saloninus. See Asinius.

Salvianus. See Calpurnius.

M. Salvius Otho. XIII. 12, 45, 46. Companion of Nero's revels, A.D. 55-58. Nero fell in love with his wife Poppaea, and put him out of the way by sending him to be governor of Lusitania. He aided Galba to attain the throne, and, not being acknowledged as his successor, had him murdered, and reigned from Jan. 15th to April 15th, 69. Defeated by the soldiers of Vitellius at Bedriacum, he committed suicide.

L. Salvius Otho Titianus. XII. 52. Brother of the last. Consul, A.D. 52.

Salus. XII. 23; XV. 53, 74. The goddess of prosperity and deliverance. Worshipped on the Quirinal Hill with the combined attributes of Fortuna and Hygieia.

Samaria. XII. 54. A fortified city and district of Central Palestine. It was usually controlled by the Roman governors of Judaea. In A.D. 48 Felix was appointed procurator of Samaria, and his authority afterwards extended over the rest of Palestine.

Samius. XI. 5. An eques illustris. Suillius accused him, but took £3300 as a bribe to let him go. The affair became known, and Samius, despairing of escape, committed suicide in the house of Suillius, A.D. 47.

Samnites. XI. 24. Mountaineers of the Apennines. Defeated the Romans at the Caudine Forks, B.C. 321.

Samos. IV. 14; VI. 12. (Samo.) The most northern of the Sporades, celebrated for the Heraeum or temple of Juno, which stood near the capital on the south coast. It was only inferior to the temple of the Ephesian Diana in magnificence, and claimed a right of asylum.

Samothracia. II. 54. An island in the Aegean, off the mouth of the Hebrus. It is six by eight miles in size, and has a peak a mile high.

Sanbulos. XII. 13. (Sunbulah.) A mountain near the Zagros range in Persia, lat. 34° 25', long. 46° 10'. Its sides are precipitous, and its summit a table-land, wooded with dwarf oaks. It was sacred to Hercules.

Sancia. VI. 18. Banished for treason, A.D. 33.

Sanquinius Maximus. VI. 4; XI. 18. Resisted the efforts of Haterius Agrippa, who accused two consulars in the senate, A.D. 32. Praefectus urbi under Caligula, and consul in 39. Governor of Lower Germany under Claudius. Fell in an encounter with the Chauci before 47.

Sanquinius or Sangurrius (MS. Sanguinnium). VI. 7. A delator. The form Sangurrius is probably correct, as the MS. was written without dictation, and its errors are those of sight, not sound.

Santoni or Santones. VI. 7. A Gallic tribe north of the Garonne, in the (old) province of Saintonge.

Sardes. II. 47; III. 63; IV. 55. The ancient capital of Lydian kings, on the stream Pactolus, thirty-eight miles east of Smyrna. Alexander the Great favoured its shrine of Diana, and granted it special privileges.

Sardinia. II. 85; XIII. 30; XIV. 62; XVI. 9. A fertile but wild and unhealthy island. Though one of the earliest Roman provinces, it was in an unsettled state, and Augustus, after apportioning it to the senate, was obliged to assume its government, A.D. 6. It was used as a place of banishment. Nero restored it to the senate in 67.

Sarmatae. VI. 33. Nomadic Slavonians, north of the Caucasus.

Satrius Secundus. IV. 34; VI. 8, 47. A tool of Sejanus, whose plot he afterwards revealed. The husband of Albucilla.

Saturninus. See Lusius, Volusius.

Saturnus. II. 41; XIII. 15. The Italian god of sowing (Sero), represented in general as patron of agriculture. His festival occurred at the winter solstice, Dec. 17th-20th. A part of his temple at the foot of the Capitoline Hill is in existence.

Saufelus Trogus. XI. 35. Executed as accomplice of Messalina, A.D. 48. Called M. Helvius Trogus in the Apocolocyntosis of Seneca, a burlesque in which he and the other victims of Narcissus are represented as dancing forward to welcome Claudius to hell.

Scaevinus. See Flavius.

Scantia. IV. 16. A vestal. Died A.D. 23.

Scapula. See Ostorius.

Scaurus. See Aemilius.

Scaurus Maximus. XV. 50. Praetorian centurion. Joined Piso, A.D. 65.

P. Cornelius Scipio Nasica. IV. 34. One of Julius Caesar's bitterest opponents. Committed suicide after the battle of Thapsus, B.C. 46.

Scipio. See Cornelius.

Scribonia. II. 27. A connection of Sex. Pompey. Wife of Augustus (then Octavian, who divorced her, B.C. 39, to marry Livia), and mother of Julia Sr., whom she accompanied into banishment, B.C. 2.

C. Scribonius Curio. XI. 7. A talented and reckless young noble, who fell fighting for Caesar in Africa, B.C. 49. He was an able orator, and a favourite with Cicero, who had been his father's friend.

M. Scribonius Libo Drusus. II. 27, 28, 30, 31; IV. 29, 31; VI. 10.

L. Scribonius Libo.

Lipsius says that he began to study out this genealogy at daybreak, and does not expect to be through it at bedtime. The question is complicated by the fact that Sex. Pompey married the daughter of L. Libo, consul B.C. 34, and thus Pompeia married her first cousin once removed. It thus appears that Drusus Libo was great-grandson of Cn. Pompey and grand-nephew of Scribonia; hence her grandsons, C. and L. Caesars, were his second cousins, and he was also second cousin, by adoption, to Tiberius Caesar and Drusus Sr. He was a vain young man. His exalted position and the advice of a false friend induced him to believe that he was able to conduct a successful revolution. Tiberius, aware of the plot, watched it with contemptuous amazement, and fell upon him at the right moment in A.D. 16. Libo broke down at once; the astrologers whom he had consulted betrayed him; he begged for mercy, but found none, and went home to kill himself, against the advice of his stout-hearted grandmother, Sulpicia, who told him not to save the headsman his work.

L. Scribonius Libo. II. 1. 29. Brother of the last. He was consul when his brother's plot was discovered, and supported him in the senate-house when fainting with terror and despair.

Scribonii fratres. (Rufus and Proculus.) XIII. 48. Appointed in A.D. 58 to quell a disturbance at Puteoli. They afterwards served as the governors of Upper and Lower Germany. Nero became jealous of them, summoned them to his presence in Greece, A.D. 67, and forced them to commit suicide.

Scythia. II. 60, 65, 68; VI. 36, 41, 44. The country of nomadic tribes, touching the civilised world at three points: South-western Europe, where they were Slavonians, with a Tartar streak (II. 65); the region of the Caucasus, where they represent the present Turanian population of Circassia and Astrachan (II. 68); and Parthian Asia, where the Dahae and Massagetae were perhaps ancestors of the Turkomans.

Secundus. See Carinas, Pedanius, Plinius, Pomponius, Satrius, Vibius.

Segeste. IV. 43. A Sicilian town at the foot of Mt. Eryx. Their reputed Trojan descent made them tax-free with the Romans. In 25 A.D. they petitioned Tiberius to restore the temple of Venus Erycina, suggesting that they as well as he were descendants of Aeneas and of the goddess.

Segestes. (Siegster.) I. 55, 57, 58, 59. A German chieftain, who warned Varus against Arminius in A.D. 9. Arminius eloped with his daughter Thusnelda, and in A.D. 15 forced him into war with Rome. Segestes fled to Germanicus, obtaining pardon for his son Segimundus, and carrying Thusnelda with him. He was rewarded with estates on the west of the Rhine.

Segimerus. (Siegmer.) I. 71. Brother of the last. Surrendered to the Romans, A.D. 16.

Segimundus. (Siegmund.) I. 57. Son of Segestes. He had been priest of Augustus, but revolted with the other Germans in A.D. 15, and was only pardoned at his father's earnest request.

Sejanus. See Aelius.

Selus Quadratus. VI. 7. Executed by Tiberius, A.D. 32.

L. Selus Strabo. I. 7, 24; IV. 1. Prefect of the praetorians at the accession of Tiberius. He was made governor of Egypt in A.D. 19, and his son Sejanus succeeded him in the praetorium.

L. Selus Tubero. II. 20; IV. 29.

Son of the last. Was legatus of Germanicus in the campaign of A.D. 16, and his suffectus in the consulship of 18. He was falsely accused of treason in 24, but Tiberius protected him from the first.

Seleucela Pieria. II. 69. The port of Antioch at the mouth of the Orontes. The breakwaters of its magnificent artificial harbour are still traceable.

Seleucela ad Tigrim. VI. 42, 44; XI. 8. Founded by Seleucus I. on the Tigris, opposite Ctesiphon, and forty miles below Babylon, whose place it took as capital of Lower Mesopotamia. It possessed a population of 600,000, and its Greek vigour and constitution rendered it semi-independent under the Parthian rule. It was destroyed in the Partho-Roman wars of the second century.

Seleucus First. (Nicator.) VI. 42. General of Alexander the Great, who established the Macedonian dynasty of Syria. Built the two Seleuceias and Antioch.

Semnones. II. 45. A powerful Suevian tribe in the district of Berlin.

C. and Tl. Sempronius Gracchus. III. 27; XII. 60. Brothers and tribunes of the people who endeavoured to reform the Roman constitution, and perished in riots excited by the senate,—Tiberius in 133, Caius in 122 B.C.

Tl. Sempronius Gracchus. I. 53. Banished to Cercina in A.D. 1 as the paramour of Julia Sr., and executed at the accession of Tiberius in 14. He wrote tragedies, and a few of his verses have been preserved.

C. Sempronius Gracchus. IV. 13; VI. 16, 38. Son of the last, and companion of his exile. Reduced to poverty, he supported himself by trade. Was accused in 23 A.D. of selling corn to Tacfarinas, but was acquitted. Praetor in 33, and accuser of Granius Marcianus in 35.

Seneca. See Annaeus.

Seneclo. See Claudius, Herennius, Tullius.

Senones. XI. 24; XV. 41. A Gallic tribe in the vicinity of Sens in modern Champagne. A part of the tribe burned Rome in 390 B.C.

Cn. Sentius Saturninus. II. 74, 79, 81; III. 7. Son of a governor of Syria; consul, A.D. 4; in 17 appointed legatus or veteran adviser of Germanicus in the East. After his death in 19 Sentius assumed the command of Syria, and forced Piso to go to Rome and stand his trial.

Septimius. I. 32. A centurion in Lower Germany, killed in a mutiny, A.D. 14.

Sequani. III. 45. A Gallic tribe in Burgundy. Their capital was Vesontio, now Besançon.

Seriphos. II. 85; IV. 21. A rocky island of the Aegean, with iron and copper mines. The worst criminals were confined there.

Q. Sertorius. III. 73. Rallied the Marian forces in Spain when Italy was controlled by the successors of Sulla, and succeeded in maintaining himself against them, B.C. 78-72.

Q. Servaeus. II. 56; III. 13; VI. 7. An ex-praetor. As legatus of Germanicus in A.D. 18 he was employed to organise Commagene as a province. Received a priesthood in 20 for his efforts to convict Piso. Accused as accomplice of Sejanus in 32; he turned state's evidence.

Servilia. XVI. 30, 33. Daughter of Barea Soranus; she shared his condemnation.

Servilius. VI. 29, 30. A delator who attacked Mam. Aemilius Scaurus, A.D. 34.

Servilius Barea Soranus. XII. 53; XVI. 21, 23, 33. Consul suffectus elect in 52 A.D., when he proposed an adulatory decree in honour of Pallas. As pro-consul of Asia he afterwards offended Nero by his energy and independence, and was accused before the senate in 66 with his daughter Servilia. They were allowed to choose the manner of their death.

M. Servilius Nonianus. II. 48; III. 22. Consul, A.D. 3; interested in a will case in 17. Tiberius adjudged the property to him, though the author of the forged will had inserted a legacy to the emperor.

M. Servilius Nonianus. VI. 31; XIV. 19. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 35. He wrote a history of the early empire, mentioned favourably by Tacitus and Quintilian. Claudius went to hear him read it aloud. Died in 59.

Servius Tullius. III. 26; XV. 41. Sixth king of Rome, B.C. 578-534.

Sesosis. VI. 28. (Egyptian for Sesos First.) King of the 19th Egyptian dynasty, in the 14th century B.C. His exploits have been confused with those of his son Rhamses II. (see that), who was probably associated in the kingdom during his father's life. Hence both kings are sometimes called Sesosis, often confused with Sesostris, the name of earlier kings. A phoenix is said to have visited Egypt in his reign.

Beverus. XV. 42. Architect and engineer.

Beverus. See Alledius, Caecina, Casius, Curtius, Verulanus.

Sextia. VI. 29. Wife of Mam. Aemilius Scaurus, whose death she shared.

Sextia. XVI. 10. Died with her son-in-law, L. Antistius Vetus.

T. Sextius Africanus. XIII. 19; XIV. 46. A descendant of Caesar's legatus, who served against the Pompeians in Africa. Agrippina dissuaded him in A.D. 55 from marrying Junia Silana. He was consul suffectus in 59, and census commissioner for Gaul in 61.

Sextius Paconianus. VI. 3. 39. A tool of Sejanus, unsuccessfully employed to attack young Caligula. He shared his patron's fall, and the senate eagerly condemned him. He turned state's evidence, was kept in prison A.D. 32-35, and finally put to death.

Sibylla. I. 76; VI. 12; XV. 44. "The mutterer," a name generally applied by the Greeks to witches. The Romans applied it especially to the Cumaean Sibyl, who conducted Aeneas to hell, and brought her prophetic books to Tarquinius Superbus.

Sicilia. IV. 13; VI. 12; XII. 23. A senatorial province; the only one for which senators could leave Italy without the Emperor's passport. It suffered greatly in the war with Sex. Pompey, and never regained its former importance, Egypt and Numidia becoming the granaries of the empire.

Siculum Fretum. I. 53; VI. 14. (Straits of Messina.) Between Rhegium and Messana. Twenty miles long and two broad opposite Messana, where there is a strong current from the north.

Sido. XII. 29, 30. Nephew of King Vannius, whom he dethroned and succeeded, A.D. 50.

Silana. See Claudia, Junia.

Silanus. See Junius.

Silla. XVI. 20. A senator's wife; banished for revealing Nero's secret pleasures, A.D. 66.

P. Silius Nerva. IV. 68. Consul, A.D. 28.

A. Silius Nerva. XV. 48. Consul in 65. Probably son of the last.

C. Silius. I. 31, 72; II. 6, 7, 25; III. 42, 45; IV. 18, 19; XI. 35. Consul, A.D. 13. Governor of Upper Germany; in 14 he restrained his troops from mutiny; won triumphal honours under Germanicus in 15; campaigned against the Chatti in 16; crushed the Aeduan insurrection of Sacrovir in 21. Tiberius, jealous of the successful general and friend of Germanicus, recalled him to Rome, and had him accused in 24 of extortion and treason. Silius killed himself, and his wife was banished.

C. Silius. XI. 5, 12, 26, 27, 32, 35; XIII. 19. Son of the last. Messalina fell in love with him, forced him to divorce his wife, and become her paramour. In 48 A.D., while Claudius was absent at Ostia for a few days, she compelled Silius to marry her publicly, threatening instant death in case of refusal. He obeyed, hoping to dethrone Claudius by Messalina's aid. The freedman, Narcissus, was too quick for them, and procured death-warrants. Silius expected no mercy, and begged a speedy death.

Silvanus. See Gavius, Plautius, Pomponius.

Silures. XII. 32, 38, 40. A tribe of South Wales who resisted Ostorius and Didius, A.D. 49-57. Tacitus connects them (Agric. xi.) with the Iberi of Spain, on account of their dark complexion and crisp hair. They may have belonged to the same primitive stock as the Basques, and certainly displayed Cantabrian ferocity and persistence in the defence of their mountains. Agricola, who had governed Aquitania, would have been a good judge.

Simbruini Colles. XI. 13; XIV. 22. The Aequian Hills on the north of the basin of the upper Anio. The Simbruina Stagna were three pools formed by damming the stream to supply the aqueducts. They gave their name to Sublaqueum (Subiaco), where Nero had a villa.

Simonides. XI. 14. Of Ceos. Greatest of Greek elegiac poets, B.C. 556-467. Flourished at the courts of Hipparchus and Hiero.

Sindus. XI. 10. Probably a tributary of the Mergus (Merv). (Sanskrit, Sindhu = Indus, means a river or stream in general.)

Sinnaces. VI. 31, 36. A satrap who headed a successful revolution against Artabanus III., A.D. 35.

Sinuessa. XII. 66. (Mondragone.) The southernmost town of Latium, on the Appian Way. Celebrated for its medicinal hot springs.

Sipylos. II. 47. A mountain in Lydia.

Siract. XII. 15. A Cumæan tribe, east of the Sea of . . . the . . .

province of the empire and the station of four legions. Many of its cities were free, and native dynasties were supported in certain portions, such as Damascus and Galilee; but the regular governor, an imperial legatus propraetore of consular rank, had his seat at Antioch. Syria was the scene of discord between Germanicus and Piso during the youth of Christ.

Tacfarinas. II. 52; III. 20, 21, 73, 74; IV. 23, 24, 25. A Numidian chief who deserted from the Roman army to maintain a predatory warfare, in which he was supported by the Garamantes of Fezzan. He was defeated by different commanders in A.D. 17, 20, and 22. Finally Cornelius Dolabella surprised him at Auzea. His Moors were easily dispersed, and Tacfarinas fell, fighting bravely.

Tamesa or Tamesis. XIV. 32. The Thames. There is a large estuary at its mouth.

Tamfana. I. 51. A goddess of the Marsi. Germanicus destroyed her sacred grove. Her name (Zanfana) was preserved in popular poetry until the tenth century.

Tanais. XII. 17. (Don.) A great river of Russia, emptying into the Sea of Azov.

Tantalus. IV. 56. Son of Jove and king of Lydia or Phrygia; the reputed founder of Smyrna.

Tarentum. (Taranto.) I. 10; XIV. 12, 27. A Greek seaport of Southern Italy. Under the empire Brundisium had taken away most of its trade, and Nero failed to revive it with a colony of veterans.

Tarius Gratianus. VI. 38. An ex-praetor, executed more majorum in A.D. 35 for treason.

Tarquinius Priscus. IV. 65. King of Rome, 600 to 550. He introduced Etruscan building and ritual.

Tarquinius Superbus. VI. 11. Last king of Rome, dethroned by Brutus and Collatinus, 509 B.C.

Tarquitius Crescens. XV. 11. A centurion in Armenia.

Tarquitius Priscus. XII. 59; XIV. 46. Legatus of Statilius Taurus, proconsul of Africa, whom he accused, and drove to suicide, A.D. 53. The indignant senate expelled Tarquitius, in spite of Agrippina's protection. Nero restored him, and made him proconsul of Bithynia. He was condemned for extortion in 62.

Tarraco. I. 78. (Tarragona.) An important city of Northern Spain, to which it gave its name. Augustus was fond of it, and wintered there after his Cantabrian campaign, B.C. 25-24.

Tarsa. IV. 50. A Thracian chief; killed himself after failing in an insurrection, A.D. 26.

T. Tatius. I. 54; XII. 24. A name which represents the Sabine element of early Roman civilisation; he reigned in conjunction with Romulus. The Sodales Titii, a primitive priesthood, claimed him as their founder.

Taunus. I. 56; XII. 28. A range of hills between the Neckar and Main, which still preserves its ancient name.

Tauranites. XIV. 24. An Armenian tribe in the modern pashalic of Erzeroum, perhaps near Moosh.

Tauri. XII. 17. The people of the Crimea. On the north shore they were nomadic and barbarous, sacrificing shipwrecked sailors to their Diana.

Taurus. VI. 41; XII. 49; XV. 8, 10. (Aramaic Tûr = a mountain.) A range running eastward through Asia Minor. Near Lycaonia it divides into Taurus and Anti-Taurus. The first separates Cilicia from Cappadocia, and branches into the Syrian Amanus. The other runs northerly through Cappadocia to Armenia.

Taurus. See Statilius.

Q. Tadius. I. 10. A person of whom nothing is known.

Telamon. III. 62. King of Salamis; father of Ajax and Teucer.

Teleboae. IV. 67. The people of the Taphian islands, off Acarnania, mentioned by Homer as pirates.

Telesinus. See Luccius.

Temnos. II. 47. A Lydian town near the river Hermus. Deserted before Pliny's time.

Tenoteri. XIII. 56. A Rhine tribe, opposite Cologne, celebrated for their good cavalry.

Tenos. III. 63. (Tino.) One of the Cyclades, famous for its temple of Neptune.

Terentius Lentinus. XIV. 40. An eques, banished for forgery, A.D. 61.

M. Terentius. VI. 8. An eques, accused in A.D. 32 because he had been a friend of Sejanus. He saved himself by a bold and able speech.

A. Terentius Varro Murena. I. 10. The man to whom Horace addressed Carm. II. 10. Though favoured by Augustus, he joined the conspiracy of Caepio, and was executed, B.C. 22, though his sister Terentia, the wife of Maecenas and mistress of Augustus, interceded for him.

Termes. IV. 45. A Spanish city. Its supposed site is on the Douro.

Terracina. III. 2. A seaport of Latium, sixty-two miles from Rome, on the Via Appia.

Teucer. III. 62. Lost his brother Ajax at Troy, and being banished in consequence by their father, Teucer founded a new Salamis in Cyprus.

Teutoburgiensis Saltus. I. 60. (Der Lippische Wald.) A range of hills between the Ems and Weser, where Arminius defeated Varus. Traces of the Roman camp have been found, but the position of the battlefield is uncertain.

Thala. III. 21. An African city in the desert, 200 miles south of Carthage.

Thebes. II. 60. An ancient city of Upper Egypt, 400 miles from the sea. Its era of greatness was 600 to 800 B.C. In the time of Strabo only villages existed among the gigantic ruins which still extend for seven miles on both sides of the Nile, near the hamlets of Karnak and Luxor.

Theophanes. VI. 18. A native of Mytilene, the friend and counsellor of Pompey, whom he attended at Pharsalia and in Egypt. He was pardoned by Caesar, and resided in Rome. Pompey made Mytilene free for his sake.

Theophilus. II. 55. An Athenian forger.

Thermaeus Sinus. V. 10. (Bay of Salonika.) A gulf between Chalcidice and the mainland.

Thermus. See Minucius.

Theseus. IV. 56. An Ionian hero; founder of Attica as a united country.

Thessalia. VI. 34. A level country of North-eastern Greece. Iolchos, from which Jason led his expedition, was deserted in 290 B.C.

Thracia. II. 54, 64, 66; III. 38; IV. 5, 46, 47, 48; VI. 10. The country east of Macedon and north of the Aegean. The Romans applied the name only to Roumelia, the country from the Balkans to the sea. The Thracians were akin to the Moesians. They were a wild race, subject to their own princes, who acknowledged the supremacy of Rome, but sometimes rebelled.

P. Thrasea Pactus. XIII. 49; XIV. 12, 48, 49; XV. 20, 23; XVI. 21, 24, 28, 33, 35. A nobleman of Patavium, the only senator who ventured to oppose the bad government of Nero; attacking corrupt officials, defending innocent victims, and showing his disapprobation of the murder of Agrippina. In 63 Nero refused to receive a visit of condolence from him, and in 66 had him accused of treason. It was a groundless accusation, for Thrasea of late had maintained a studious retirement, but the senate was obliged to condemn their best member.

Thraseullus. VI. 20, 22. A sagacious Greek astrologer who acquired great ascendancy over Tiberius when in residence at Rhodes, accompanied him to Rome, and became a favourite with Augustus, by his literary taste and adroitness. He retained his influence to the last, dying one year before Tiberius, in 36 A.D. He promised that Tiberius should survive him for five years, thus inducing him to spare the captives in the dungeons, whom the emperor would otherwise have despatched at once. He persuaded him to spare young Caligula by saying that he should no more be emperor than he should drive his chariot over the bay of Baiae; a prediction which Caligula accomplished when emperor by building a bridge of boats.

Thubusacum or Thubursiolum. IV. 24. A town in South-western Numidia.

Thurii. XIV. 21. A city of Magna Graecia, founded by Sybarite exiles in 452 B.C., near the ruins of their former home.

Tiberia. I. 76, 79; VI. 19; XV. 2, 18. Controlled during the empire by a special commission in charge of the bed and banks of the river. The channel was much better than at present, as large cornships sailed up the stream to the quays and granaries at the foot of the Aventine.

Tiberius Nero. Son of Ti. Claudius Nero and Livia, born B.C. 42. After his father's death he was educated in the palace; rode at the side of his stepfather Augustus in the triumphs of B.C. 29; served as tribunus militum in the Cantabrian war of 25; was despatched with extensive powers to regulate the affairs of the East in 20; in company with his brother Drusus conquered the Rhaeti and Vindelici in 15; was consul in 13. In 11 he married the emperor's daughter Julia (then widow for the second time), and campaigned against the Pannonians. In 9 he celebrated the funeral of his brother Drusus, whom he replaced as general of the German legions in 8 and 7. In 6 he obtained the tribunicia potestas, but retired to Rhodes in the same year on account of the shameful conduct of his wife Julia, and lived there as a private citizen in the company of philosophers and astrologers. Augustus was aware of Julia's immorality.

favour to his grandsons, and Tiberius's retreat became a virtual exile. Upon the death of L. Caesar in A.D. 2 he was recalled to Rome, and after that of C. Caesar in 4 became heir-apparent, being advanced by the arts of his mother Livia, and adopted by Augustus. He campaigned with success in Germany (A.D. 4, 5, 6), crushed the formidable Pannonian insurrection (6, 7, 8, 9), checked the German hero Arminius in 10, and in 12 enjoyed a triumph for his victories. He succeeded Augustus without opposition in 14. A mutiny of the Pannonian legions was checked by his son, Drusus Jr., and a more formidable revolt of the Rhine army by his nephew, Germanicus, who led three German campaigns in 14, 15, 16. The suspicious temper of Tiberius made him fear the young general at the head of his victorious troops, and he was not wise enough to trust his generosity and loyalty. Germanicus was transferred to the East, where he died, under suspicious circumstances, in 19. Tiberius now passed under the influence of Aelius Sejanus, prefect of the praetorians, whose inordinate ambition led him to seek the throne and to destroy the young princes who stood in his way. Drusus Jr. was poisoned in 23. Tiberius, no longer restrained by regard for his son, grew more tyrannical; his suspicions armed him against all the world, and the laws of treason were executed with a rigour before unknown. Sejanus inspired him to persecute the family of Germanicus; to seek on the island of Capreae the solitude which he had learned to love at Rhodes; and to practise in its retreats debaucheries which shocked even pagan Rome. The last check of natural affection and respect was removed by the death of his mother Livia in 29, but he still acted with some circumspection on account of his growing dread of Sejanus, who had attained great and dangerous power. The craftiness of the emperor enabled him to overthrow his minister, whose plan for revolt was almost ripe, and from this time the career of Tiberius was only marked by massacres at Rome and licentiousness in his island palace. His inexpressible wretchedness was ended by death in 37. In spite of his evil personal character, developed by the plots of his mother and the loneliness of his life, the provincial government of Tiberius was administered with a temperate firmness which rendered his reign a blessing to the world. In person he was tall, strong, handsome, and he enjoyed remarkable health throughout his life. His great misfortune was the suspicious temper which estranged him from his natural supporters, and made him the tool of men like Sejanus.

Tiberius. II. 84; VI. 46. Called Gemellus. Son of Drusus Jr. and Livilla, born A.D. 19. He survived his twin brother Germanicus, and his grandfather Tiberius, but was put to death by Caligula, who was naturally jealous of him.

Tiberius. See Alexander.

Tibur. VI. 27; XIV. 22. (Tivoli.) A country town, famous for its delightful situation on the falls of the Anio, seventeen miles north-east of Rome.

Ticinum. III. 5. (Pavia.) A town at the confluence of the Ticinus and Po.

Tigellinus. See Sofonius.

Tigranes Second. II. 3. King of Armenia, B.C. 20-6. A younger son of Artavasdes VI., with whom he was taken prisoner by Antony. Augustus educated him at Rome, and had Tiberius crown him in place of his brother, Artaxias II., who was dethroned in 20.

Tigranes Third. II. 3. Son of the last, whom he succeeded, B.C. 6. He ventured to oppose Augustus, and defeated Artavasdes II., who was set up against him. He tried to make terms with C. Caesar, but died before the prince's arrival in B.C. 1.

Tigranes Fourth. VI. 40. Grandson of Herod the Great. Placed on the throne of Armenia by Augustus after the expulsion of Artavasdes III. Tiberius recalled him to Rome on state charges soon after the death of Augustus, and put him to death in 36.

Tigranes Fifth. XIV. 26; XV. 1-6. A Cappadocian nobleman whom Nero made king of Armenia, A.D. 60. Two years later he was driven from the country.

Tigris. VI. 37; XII. 13. (Daghele.) A large and very swift stream, flowing from the mountains of Armenia, separating Mesopotamia from Adiabene and Assyria, uniting with the Euphrates below Babylon.

Timarchus. XV. 20. A wealthy Cretan provincial.

Tiridates. VI. 32, 37, 41, 42, 44. Probably a grandson of Phraates IV., educated at Rome. In A.D. 35 he was placed on the Parthian throne by a rebellion against Artabanus III., headed by powerful satraps. Tiridates was a boy, and a mere puppet in their hands. A counter-revolution drove him the next year to seek refuge with Vitellius, governor of Syria.

Tiridates. XII. 50; XIII. 34, 37, 38, 40; XIV. 26; XV. 1, 2, 14, 24, 27, 28, 29; XVI. 23. Brother of Vologeses, king of Parthia, who endeavoured to put him on the throne of Armenia by a long contest from 55 to 63 A.D. During the last two years he backed him against the Roman candidate by all the power of Parthia. The Romans finally agreed to recognise Tiridates if he would accept his crown as a vassal to Rome, which he did in 66 A.D., proceeding to the city to do homage to Nero.

Titidius Labeo. II. 85. A senator who served as praetorian governor of Narbonnese Gaul. Pliny mentioned him as an amateur painter.

Titius Proculus. XI. 30, 35. A paramour of Messalina, who remained her attendant after Silius had been preferred to him. Executed in 48 A.D.

Titius Sabinus. IV. 18, 19, 68, 70; VI. 70. An eques illustris. Sejanus ruined him by directing a spy to form an intimacy with him, and then entrap him in his speech. Sabinus was strangled and cast into the Tiber, where his faithful dog swam by the body, trying to keep it afloat.

Tmolus. II. 47. A town of Lydia, on the mountain of the same name.

Togonius Gallus. VI. 2. A senator who made himself conspicuous by flattering Tiberius awkwardly.

Toronæus Sinus. V. 10. (Gulf of Cassandra.) On the south coast of Macedon.

Torquata. III. 69. Vestal for sixty-three years, dying as virgo maxima.

Torquatus. See Junius.

Tralles. IV. 55. (Aidin Guxelhissar.) A wealthy city of Caria, in the valley of the Maeander.

Trapezus. XIII. 39. (Trebizond.) A strongly fortified town of Pontus, the port of shipment for Armenia.

Sex. Traulus Montanus. XI. 36. Messalina forced him to spend one night with her, for which he was afterwards beheaded.

T. Trebellienus Rufus. II. 67; III. 38; VI. 39. An ex-praetor; appointed guardian of the children of Cotys, with control of the Thracian sea-board, A.D. 19. Forced to commit suicide by an accusation of treason in 35.

Trebellius Maximus. XIV. 46. Consul, A.D. 57; census commissioner of Gaul in 61; governor of Britain, 65, 69. Expelled by a mutiny, he took refuge with Vitellius. Magister arvalium in 72.

M. Trebellius. VI. 41. Legatus legionis in Syria. In 36 A.D. he was commissioned to check a revolt of the Clitae in Cilicia Trachea, and succeeded.

Treveri. I. 41, 44; III. 40, 42. A Belgian tribe, whose capital, the modern Treves, became a colony, as is supposed, under Claudius.

Trimerus. IV. 71. (S. Domenico.) A small island fifteen miles from the coast of Apulia, north of Mt. Garganus. Julia Jr. was banished thither in A.D. 9.

Trinobantes. XIV. 31. A British tribe in Essex and Suffolk, north of London. They supported Boadicea.

Trivia. III. 62. Hecate, a mysterious goddess of the lower world, worshipped with Zeus Panhemerius at Stratonicaea.

Trogus. See Saufeius.

Troja. IV. 55; XI. 11; XII. 58; XV. 39; XVI. 21. The ancient city, distinguished from New Ilium, which rose on its ruins. Traditions of a Trojan ancestry were perpetuated in Rome and other Italian cities.

Troxobores. XII. 55. A robber chieftain of Cilicia. Defeated and put to death by Antiochus in A.D. 52 for attacking neighbouring cities.

Tubantes. I. 51; XIII. 55. A tribe of Germans defeated by Germanicus on the banks of the Rura (Ruhr), to which they had fled from Holland.

Tubero. See Aelius and Seius.

Tullinus. See Vulcatius.

M. Tullius Cicero. IV. 34. The orator, B.C. 106-43. His biography of Cato Uticensis, written in 46, shortly after his friend's death, has been lost. It called forth a reply from Julius Caesar.

Terentius Tullius Geminus. XIV. 50. Impeached Fabricius Veiento, A.D. 62. Afterwards consul suffectus. The MS. gives Talius, contrary to an inscription.

Tullus Hostilius. III. 26; VI. 11; XII. 8. Third king of Rome, B.C. 670-638.

Turesis. IV. 50. A Thracian chieftain.

Turonl. III. 41, 46. A Gallic tribe near Tours, in the valley of the Loire.

Turpillianus. See Petronius.

C. Turranius. I. 7; XI. 31. Praefectus annonae for many years. When over ninety he was superannuated by Caligula. He thereupon ordered a mock funeral to be held over himself in memory of his lost usefulness. Caligula, surprised, restored him to his office, which he still held in 48 A.D., when Claudius visited Ostia.

Tusculum. XI. 24; XIV. 3. (Frascati.) A delightful country-place on Mount Algidus, twelve miles east of Rome.

Tuscus. See Caecina.

Tyrrhenus. IV. 55. Eponymus of the Etruscans, whom he was said to have led as a colony from Lydia in prehistoric times.

Tyrus. XVI. 1. An ancient Phoenician city; metropolis of Carthage.

Vahalis. II. 6. See Rhenus.

Valens. See Manlius, Vettius.

Valeria Messalina. XI. 2, 12, 26, 30, 31, 38, 65; XII. 65; XIII. 19. Wife of Claudius, with whom she ascended the throne as a mere girl, and mother of Octavia and Britannicus. Completely controlling her weak husband, she put to death or banished the noblest Romans if they refused to surrender their estates, or become her paramours. In 47 she fell in love with C. Silius; made him divorce his wife; discarded Mnester, her favourite actor; made Silius consul elect; and finally married him when Claudius was spending a few days at Ostia. Even Claudius was brought to understand that his life as well as his honour was endangered, and allowed Narcissus to issue death-warrants for the offenders.

P. Valerius Asiaticus. XI. 1, 2, 3; XIII. 43. Descendant of a noble family settled in Gaul. He was intimate with Caligula, who committed adultery with his wife, and boasted of it to the husband. When Chaerea murdered Caligula, Valerius was not present, but afterwards cried out to the excited people in the forum: "Would that I had done it!" He was a favourite with Claudius, and held a consulship with him in 46. The next year, Messalina, coveting his wealth, and believing him to be the lover of her enemy Poppaea Sabina, played upon the fears of Claudius, and made him condemn Valerius, who died with composure.

Valerius Capito. XIV. 12. An ex-praetor, banished by Claudius to please Agrippina. Nero restored him in 59 A.D.

Valerius Catullus. IV. 34. B.C. 87-46. The lyric poet. He made outrageous charges against Julius Caesar in his poems (XXIX., LVII.), but the conqueror left the matter unnoticed.

M. Valerius Corvus. I. 9. Died at the age of 100, B.C. 271. He served with distinction against the Gauls and Samnites, and was consul six times.

Valerius Fabianus. XIV. 40. A young man of senatorial family, banished for forgery A.D. 61.

M. Valerius Messalla Corvinus. IV. 34; VI. 11; XI. 6; XIII. 34. Served under Brutus and Cassius at Philippi, storming the camp of Augustus in the first day's fight. He surrendered to Antony, whom he served in the east until he was disgusted with Cleopatra's influence, when he went over to Augustus, commanding the centre of the Roman fleet at Actium. He held the office of praefectus urbi for a few days in 25 B.C. After this he devoted himself to literature; was the friend of Horace, Tibullus, and Ovid; died about 1 B.C.

M. Valerius Messalla Corvinus (otherwise called Valerius Messallinus). I. 8; III. 18, 34. Son of the last; consul, B.C. 3; won triumphal honours in the Pannonian war, A.D. 6; supported Tiberius at his accession; and is mentioned as active in the senate in 20 and 21.

M. Valerius Messalla Corvinus. III. 2. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 20.

M. Valerius Messalla. XIII. 34. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 58. Nero gave him a pension, as the family fortune had been lost.

Valerius Naso. IV. 56. An ex-praetor, appointed in A.D. 26 legatus extraordinary of M'. Lepidus, proconsul of Asia, to superintend the construction of a temple to Tiberius at Zmyrna.

Valerius Ponticus. XIV. 41. Banished for praevaricatio, A.D. 61.

L. Valerius Volesus Messalla. III. 68. Consul, A.D. 5. Condemned for his outrageous cruelty as proconsul of Asia. Augustus wrote a special accusation against him.

L. Valerius Potitus. XI. 22. A nephew of the famous Publicola. He was quaestor parricidii with Kaeso Fabius in 485 B.C., and consul in 470, with Ti. Aemilius Mamercus. Tacitus says that a man of this name was quaestor classicus with Aemilius Mamercus in 446 (LXIII post Tarquinius exactos) when L. Valerius Potitus (son of the first, according to Smith's Dictionary) was the chief man in Rome, having held the consulship in 449 with Horatius Barbatus. There were also famous Mamerci at a later time, but it seems probable that Tacitus's authorities had confused quaestores parricidii with quaestores classici, and had confounded the Potiti and Mamerci of different generations. Both families were of popular tendencies.

Vangio. XII. 29. Nephew of Vannius, whom he dethroned and succeeded, A.D. 50.

Vanglones. XII. 27. A tribe included in the Suevian alliance of Ariovistus. They settled west of the Rhine, and became protectors of the Roman province. Their chief town was Borbetomagus (Worms).

Vannius. II. 63; XII. 29. A Quadian chief. In 19 A.D. Tiberius made him king of the Suevian exiles who had followed Maroboduus and settled on the Danube. He was dethroned in 50, but the Romans granted him estates in Hungary.

Vardanes First. XI. 8, 10. Brother of Gotarzes of Parthia, whom he drove from the throne in 42 A.D. He defeated a counter-revolution of Gotarzes in 46, but was killed during a hunting-party on his return from the war. He was an able prince, and hated the Romans.

Vardanes Second. XIII. 7. Revolted against his father, Vologeses of Parthia, in A.D. 54, and maintained the contest until 57, as is shown by his coins.

Varilla. See Apuleia.

Varius Ligur. IV. 42; VI. 30. A paramour of Aquileia. The woman was banished A.D. 25. Ligur purchased an acquittal on a subsequent occasion.

Varro. See Cingonius, Vibidius, Vissellius.

Varus. See Arrius, Lurius, Quintilius.

Varsaces. XV. 14. Commander of cavalry under Vologeses.

Vatinius. XV. 34. A deformed cobbler of Beneventum, who became a buffoon and informer at Nero's court. He said: "Nero, I hate you, because you are a senator." He was called a "beak" because of his long nose and scent for treason cases.

Ubi. I. 31, 36, 39, 57, 71; XII. 27; XIII. 57. A German tribe. Agrippa transplanted them from the east to the west bank of the Rhine in 38 B.C. Here they had an altar to Augustus, and a town where Germanicus had his headquarters, and where Agrippina was born. When empress, in A.D. 50, she made it a Roman colony (Colonia Agrippinensis), now Köln or Cologne.

Vedius Pollio. I. 10; XII. 60. A rich freedman in the time of Augustus, who fed his lampreys with disobedient slaves. Extensive ruins show the former splendour of his villa near Puteoli.

Velanus Niger. XV. 67. A praetorian tribune.

Velento. See Fabricius.

Velinus. I. 79. A river and lake of Central Italy.

P. Vellæus. III. 39. Governor of Moesia, A.D. 21.

Venetl. XI. 23. Transpadane Gauls, near Padua and Venice.

Venetus Paulus. XV. 50. A praetorian centurion in Piso's conspiracy.

Ventidius Cumanus. XII. 54. Procurator of Palestine in A.D. 48, afterwards obliged to surrender Samaria to Antonius Felix, while he retained the government of Judaea and Galilee. On account of their quarrels and mismanagement, a fight arose between the Jews and Samaritans, and Roman soldiers were lost in quelling it. Quadratus, governor of Syria, who knew that Pallas, the brother of Felix, was all-powerful at Rome, sent Cumanus home in disgrace, A.D. 52.

Venus. III. 62; IV. 43; XVI. 27. The Roman goddess of love. When the Romans learned Greek legends, they assumed that she was Aphrodite, and was ancestress of Aeneas, Iulus, and the Julian gens. Hence Julius Caesar built a temple to Venus Genetrix on his forum. Her worship at Eryx was probably introduced by the Carthaginians from the east.

Venutius. XII. 40. Husband and successor of Cartimandua, queen of the Brigantes.

Q. Veranius. II. 56, 74; III. 10, 19; XII. 5; XIV. 29. Legatus of Germanicus, who appointed him to establish Commagene as a province. He accused Cn. Piso in A.D. 20, and was rewarded with a priesthood. He was consul ordinarius in 49, and governor of Britain in 58, dying within the year.

Verginius Flavus. XV. 71. A rhetorician, teacher of Persius. Quintilian refers to him. Banished as a friend of Seneca, A.D. 65.

L. Verginius Rufus. XV. 23. Governor of Upper Germany. In 68 A.D. he crushed the rebellion of Vindex, refused the crown which was pressed upon him by his troops, and supported Galba. He died consul, A.D. 97, aged 84. Tacitus pronounced his eulogy in the senate, and succeeded him in his consulship. Rufus composed his own epitaph:

Hic situs est Rufus, pulso qui Vindice quondam, Imperium asseruit non sibi, sed patriae.

Verritus. XIII. 54. Frisian ambassador to Rome, A.D. 58.

Verulamium. XIV. 33. (Near St. Alban's.) A Roman municipium, twenty miles north of London, destroyed by Boadicea.

L. Verulanus Severus. XIV. 26; XV. 3. Legatus legionis in Armenia, A.D. 60-62. Consul suffectus before the close of Nero's reign.

Vesularius Flaccus. II. 28; VI. 10. An eques who followed Tiberius to Rhodes and to Capreae. He accused Scribonius Libo A.D. 16, and was compelled to suicide, as an accomplice of Sejanus, in 32. In VI. 10 the MS. gives Vesularius Atticus, the transcriber's eye having wandered to the name of Curtius Atticus just below.

T. Flavius Vespasianus Sabinus. III. 55; XVI. 5. Rose in the army by his own merit, and was proconsul of Africa under Nero. He was banished from court by the emperor, whose music he did not appreciate; but when the insurrection of the Jews broke out he was sent to the east as the best man to stop it. He was declared emperor in 69 after Nero's death; his generals overthrew Vitellius; and he reigned for ten years with vigour and prudence, saving the empire from financial ruin. He preserved the homely manners of a Sabine farmer, and purged the corruptions of court society.

Vesta. I. 8; II. 34, 86; IV. 16; XI. 32; XV. 36, 41. Goddess of the hearth and household. As patroness of the Roman state, the penates of the city were kept in her temple, at the northern corner of the Palatine. See notes on the passages.

M. Vestinus Atticus. XV. 48, 52, 68. Son of a Gallic nobleman, the friend of Claudius. He was consul in 65, and took no part in Piso's plot, but was put to death for it. He had been intimate with Nero, and had offended him by unguarded familiarity.

Vesuvius. IV. 67. (Monte Vesuvio.) A volcano 4020 feet high, on the shores of the Gulf of Naples. In ancient times it was covered with luxuriant vegetation, and no tradition has been preserved of any eruption previous to the one which buried Herculaneum and Pompeii, A.D. 79.

Vetera. I. 45, 58. (= Castra Vetera.) A Roman garrison town, now Xanten, in Rhenish Prussia.

Vettius Bolanus. XV. 3. Legatus legionis in Armenia, A.D. 62. He was afterwards consul suffectus, and governor of Britain and Asia.

Vettius Valens. XI. 30, 35. A physician, distinguished for his skill, wealth, and eloquence. Put to death as an accomplice of Messalina, A.D. 48.

Vettonianus. See Funisulanus.

Vetus. See Antistius.

Vibenna. See Caeles.

Vibia. XII. 52. Wife of Furius Scribonianus. She and her son were banished in 52 A.D. for sorcery. She had been present at her husband's execution, and, when she was brought to trial herself, Arria taunted her for not dying with him.

Vibidia. XI. 32, 34. Virgo maxima A.D. 48. She pleaded in vain for the life of Messalina.

Vibidius Varro. II. 48. Expelled from the senate, A.D. 17, for profligacy and extravagance.

Vibillius. II. 63; XII. 29. King of the Hermunduri. In 17 A.D. he expelled Catualda, the successor of Maroboduus, and in 50 destroyed the power of Vannius.

Vibius Crispus. XIV. 28. A distinguished orator; consul suffectus about 57 A.D.; curator aquarum, 68-71; afterwards proconsul of Africa; a courtier of Domitian; recently dead in 98. Tacitus (Histt. II. 10) says of him: "pecunia, potentia, ingenio, inter claros magis quam inter bonos." He was worth £1,670,000.

Vibius Fronto. II. 68. Praefectus of a cavalry regiment in Cilicia.

C. Vibius Marsus. II. 74, 79; IV. 56; VI. 47; XI. 10. A well-born man and good lawyer. Consul suffectus A.D. 17. In 19 he went to Syria as legatus of Germanicus, after whose death he resigned the province to his senior, Cn. Sentius, and accompanied Agrippina to Rome. Proconsul of Africa, 27-29. Accused of treason in 37, he deferred the trial, and was saved by the death of Tiberius. Governor of Syria, 42-45.

C. Vibius Pansa. I. 10. An adherent of Julius Caesar. He was consul at the time of Caesar's death, and led his forces against Antony at Mutina. He was hurt in battle, and soon after died. It was said that Octavian, who stepped into his place, had hired a physician to poison the wound.

Vibius Secundus. XIV. 28. Brother of Vibius Crispus, through whose influence he escaped deportation in A.D. 60, when accused of misgovernment in one of the Mauretaniae. He was banished from Italy.

C. Vibius Serenus. II. 30; IV. 13, 28. Accused Drusus Libo in A.D. 16. Afterwards, thinking his services neglected, he wrote an insolent letter to Tiberius. In 23 he was deported to Amorgus for committing vis publica in his province of Hispania Baetica. In 24 his own son dragged him to Rome on accusation of treason. The charge was not proved, and Vibius went back to his island.

Vibulenus. I. 22, 28, 29. A mutineer in Pannonia, executed by Drusus Jr., A.D. 14.

Vibulenus Agrippa. VI. 40. An eques accused of treason, A.D. 36. He swallowed poison in the senate house, but the executioners tried to anticipate its effects. Dio Cassius calls him Vibilius, and says that he carried the poison in a ring.

Vibullius. XIII. 28. Praetor, A.D. 56.

Victoria. XIV. 32. Personified and adored from the earliest times. Her image stood in the senate-house.

Vienna. XI. 1. (Vienne.) A town of the Allobroges on the Rhone. A colonia under Caligula. Extensive Roman ruins are extant in the modern city.

Vindelici. II. 17. A tribe in the Tyrol, Bavaria, and Würtemberg, conquered by Tiberius and Drusus, B.C. 15. Augsburg (Augusta Vindelicorum) was their capital.

Vindex. See Julius.

Vinianus. See Annius.

M. Vinicius was consul suffectus, B.C. 19.

P. Vinicius. III. 11. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 2.

M. Vinicius. VI. 15. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 30. A youth of better temper than ability. Married Julia, daughter of Germanicus, in 33. Poisoned by Messalina in 46 for avoiding her embraces.

Vinicius Rufinus. XIV. 40. An eques, convicted of witnessing a forged will, A.D. 61.

Vipsania. I. 12; III. 19. Daughter of Agrippa by Pomponia, daughter of Pomponius Atticus. She was the wife of Tiberius, who loved her and begot Drusus Jr. by her. He was compelled to divorce her and marry Julia. Soon after she married Asinius Gallus, who boasted that he was the father of Drusus.

M. Vipsanius Agrippa. I. 3, 53; III. 19, 56, 75; IV. 40; VI. 51; XII. 27; XIV. 53; XV. 37, 39. Born B.C. 63. A school-fellow of Augustus at Apollonia, he accompanied him as a friend and adviser when he proceeded to Rome to accept the will of Julius.

Agrippa was the prosecutor of C. Cassius in 43, and took part in the Perusian war of 41. In 38 he was in Germany, and settled the Ubii on the western bank of the Rhine. He was consul in 37; defeated Sex. Pompey off Mylae in 36, and in 33 consented to serve as aedile, repairing the aqueducts and sewers, and adorning the city at his own expense. In 28 and 27 he held successive consulships, and about this time divorced his first wife, Pomponia, to marry Marcella, the niece of Augustus. In 25 he left Rome, and spent two years at Mytilene, to avoid the jealousy of his brother-in-law, Marcellus. After his death, in 23, he returned to Rome, and in 21 divorced Marcella to marry Julia, the emperor's daughter. In 19 he subdued the Cantabrians; in 18 received the tribunicia potestas for five years, during which he visited the provinces of the east; in 13 returned, had the tribunicia potestas renewed, and went to Pannonia. He died suddenly in Campania in March, B.C. 12. By his first wife, Pomponia, he left a daughter, Vipsania; by Marcella, children whose names have been lost (II. 51, N.); by Julia, C. Caesar, L. Caesar, Agrippa Postumus, Julia, and Agrippina.

Vipsanius Laenas. XIII. 30. Procurator of Sardinia. Convicted of extortion, A.D. 56.

Vipstanus Gallus. II. 51. Died while praetor, A.D. 17.

L. Vipstanus Publicola. XI. 23, 25. Consul, A.D. 48.

O. Vipstanus Apronianus. XIV. 1. Probably nephew of the last. Consul, A.D. 59; proconsul of Africa, 69; died 86. A prominent Arval priest, and as such mentioned in Arval inscriptions.

O. Visellius Varro. III. 41; IV. 17. Son of Cicero's cousin. Consul suffectus, A.D. 12; governor of Lower Germany in 21. Sent troops against the Turones, and was bitterly offended because C. Silius, governor of Upper Germany, was chosen to crush the Aeduan revolt.

L. Visellius Varro. IV. 17, 19. Son of the last; curator aquarum et riparum Tiberis; consul, A.D. 24. Chosen by Sejanus to attack his father's enemy Silius in the senate.

Vistilia. II. 85. Wife of Titidius Labeo. Deported for profligacy.

Sex. Vistilius. VI. 9. An old man forced to suicide by Tiberius in A.D. 32 for defaming Caligula. He had served on the staff of Drusus Sr. and of Tiberius himself.

Visurgis. I. 70; II. 9, 11, 16. (Weser, old German Visuracha.) Flows into the North Sea at Bremen after a course of 250 miles. The monastery of Corbei, where the Medicean MS. of the Annals I.-VI. was preserved, is on its banks.

Vitellia. III. 49. Wife of Petronius Turpilianus. Probably a grand-aunt of the emperor Vitellius, who married her daughter.

L. Vitellius. VI. 28, 32, 36, 41; XI. 3, 33; XII. 4, 5, 42. After a consulship in 34 A.D. he received command-in-chief of the eastern provinces, which he administered with signal success, inducing Artabanus of Parthia to do homage to the statue of Caligula. Recalled to Rome by his jealous master, he appeased him with abject flattery (VI. 32, N.). Flourished under Claudius, paying court successively to Messalina and Agrippina; was once censor and thrice consul. In 48 he saw two of his sons consuls, and, after his death, Aulus became emperor.

P. Vitellius. I. 70; II. 6, 74; III. 10, 13, 17, 19; V. 8; VI. 47. Legatus legionis of Germanicus in Germany; helped him to take the census of Gaul; followed him to the east; and in 20 accused Cn. Piso of his death. When Sejanus fell (A.D. 31) he had charge of the military treasury; was accused of supplying funds to the conspirators, and was placed in libera custodia with his brothers. He contrived to open his veins with a penknife, and, though the wound was staunch, died of vexation and confinement.

Q. Vitellius. II. 48. Brother of the last. Expelled from the senate in A.D. 17 for debauchery and extravagance.

A. Vitellius. XI. 23; XIV. 49. Son of Lucius. Consul, A.D. 48, and afterwards proconsul of Africa. His abilities and vices recommended him to successive emperors. He was made governor of Lower Germany by Galba in 68, revolted against him in 69, at the desire of the army, and before learning that he was dead. Continued to advance against Otho, who was defeated by Caecina at Bedriacum. Vitellius was defeated and slain by the soldiers of Vespasian in the following December. His short reign was only marked by cruelty and gluttony.

Vitia. VI. 10. Mother of Fufius Geminus, put to death for lamenting her son's execution, A.D. 32.

Umbria. IV. 5. A province of Northern Italy.

C. Ummidius Durmius Quadratus. XII. 45, 54; XIII. 9; XIV. 26. After a long career of service became governor of Syria, A.D. 51; checked a Judæan disturbance in 52; and quarrelled with Corbulo, the military governor of the East, in 54.

Unsingla. I. 70. (Hunsing or Hunse.) A Dutch river in the provinces of Drenthe and Groningen; flows north-west fifty miles into the Lauwer-Zee.

Volandum. XIII. 39. An Armenian castle, west of Artaxata.

Volcatius Tullinus. XVI. 8. A senator accused as accomplice of L. Junius Silanus, A.D. 65. He saved himself by legal delays.

Volesus. See Valerius.

Vologeses. XII. 14, 44, 50; XIII. 7, 9, 34, 37; XIV. 25; XV. 2, 5, 10, 14, 24. Son of Vonones II. Became King of Parthia, A.D. 51; made his brother Pacorus king of Media Atropatene, and established his other brother Tiridates in Armenia, after a contest with Rome lasting from 55 to 63 A.D., which was finally compromised by allowing Tiridates to receive his kingdom as a Roman fief. The other events of Vologeses' reign were a revolt of Adiabene and a Scythian invasion between 51 and 54; and a revolt of Hyrcania, headed by his son, Vardanes II., lasting from 55 to 57. He reigned until 78, maintaining peaceful relations with Vespasian.

Volscl. See Vulsci.

Volusius Proculus. XV. 51, 57. Captain of marines at Misenum. He served Nero in the proposed shipwreck of Agrippina, but did not receive the expected reward. Epicharis invited him to join Piso's conspiracy, but he refused.

L. Volusius Saturninus. III. 30. Consul suffectus, B.C. 12; governor of Africa and of Syria. Accumulated an immense fortune.

L. Volusius Saturninus. XII. 22; XIII. 30; XIV. 56. Son of the last. Consul suffectus, A.D. 3. Legatus pro praetore under Tiberius; praefectus urbi under Claudius. He increased the family fortune, and died in 56 at the age of 93, having survived every one who was member of the senate during his consulship.

Q. Volusius Saturninus. XIII. 25; XIV. 46. Son of the last. Consul, A.D. 56; took the census of Gaul in 61.

Vonones First. II. 1-4, 56, 58, 68; XII. 10. (Arsaces XVIII.) Son of Phraates IV. of Parthia, educated at Rome. He was called to his father's throne after one of the numerous Parthian revolutions, but the people were disgusted by his western manners, and he fled from the kingdom about 16 A.D. He was at first received as king of Armenia, and then protected by the governor of Syria. Cn. Piso; succeeding to this office, favoured him highly; but Germanicus, at the request of the Parthian king, removed him to Cilicia in 18. He was killed in 19 during an attempt to escape. It was said that Tiberius coveted his treasures, and arranged the occasion in order to murder him.

Vonones Second. XII. 14. Succeeded Gotarzes, A.D. 51, and reigned one year.

Votienus Montanus. IV. 42. A brilliant but wordy rhetorician. Mamer-cus Scaurus called him an Ovid among orators. Banished to a Balearic island for speaking ill of the emperor, A.D. 25.

Urbicus. See Pompeius.

Urgulania. II. 34; IV. 21, 22. An intimate friend of Livia. Elated by her influence with the empress, she set the laws at defiance. When L. Piso summoned her to court she swept past him into the palace; and when her testimony was required in a case she obliged the praetor to come to her house and take it.

Usipites or Usipl. I. 51; XIII. 55. (German form, Usipes; Caesar employed the Celtic Usipites.) A German tribe on the Rhine, near Düsseldorf. They kept pressing toward the south.

Uspe. XII. 16, 17. A city of the Dandaridae.

Vulcanus. XV. 44. God of fire, propitiated by sacrifices after the conflagration of Rome. His temple stood near the forum.

Vulcatius Araricus. XV. 50. Implicated in Piso's conspiracy.

Vulcatius Moschus. IV. 43. Exiled to Marseilles, he left his property by will to the city.

Vulcatius Tullinus. XVI. 8. A senator, falsely accused of adultery. Mentioned in the Histories as tribunus plebeius.

Vulscl (or Volscl). XI. 24. Mountaineers south-east of the Campagna. The most determined enemies of the early Roman republic, they were finally conquered in the Great Latin War, B.C. 340. The inhabitants of the principal towns received the full Roman franchise.

Vulsini. IV. 1; VI. 8. (Bolsena.) A quiet country-place in Etruria, celebrated for the worship of Nortia (Fate), and as the birthplace of Sejanus.

Xenophon. XII. 61, 67. A physician of Coos, to which Claudius granted remission of taxes for his sake, in A.D. 53. In 54 he poisoned his master by Agrippina's orders.

Zeno. II. 56. See Artaxias III.

Zenobia. XII. 51. Wife of Rادمistus.

Zeugma. XII. 12. A Syrian city on the Euphrates, 115 miles north-east of Antioch. A pontoon bridge, which gave its name to the place, was the regular road to Parthia; and at this point Crassus and Meherdates began their Mesopotamian expeditions.

Zmyrna. III. 63; IV. 43, 55, 56. (Smyrna.) An ancient city in Asia Minor which had always been a faithful and useful ally to Rome. Hence it was chosen as the seat of a temple to Tiberius in A.D. 26. Smyrna is now the principal port of the Levant trade.

Zorsines. XII. 15, 17, 19. King of the Siraci; conquered by the Romans and Aorsi in A.D. 49, and obliged to adore the image of Claudius.
